Raise touching strains like Robbie In life he wrote beneath a cloud, Admirers few, his foces a crowd, But when he tay wrapped in his shroud, All owned the worth of Robble,

Before the green sward decked his grave His fame swelled like a tidal wave, Deep sighs they heaved, high praise ep sighs they heaved, night prograve, Mourning and praising Robbie.

The grave his mortal part could hold, But not the thoughts he did unfold; Death raised his brilliancy tenfold, And stamped him darling Robbic. Time spread fresh lustre o'er his name Each passing year increased his fame, Till Scots in every land proclaim, The king of poets was Robble.

Though in the grave his body lies, The name of Burns Scots idolize, His brief life did immortalize, His name as Scotland's Robbie.

SOUTH DUMMER.

Correspondence of the Review. DEATH .- The community was startle and surprised by the sudden and unexpected death of Mr. Samuel Spence on the night of Jan. 20th. He came out from Ireland to with the mathma, it usually being much more troublesome in the winter than summer. About three or four months ago he became so bad that since then he has been unable to attend to any business, and though his sufferings at times were severe, he bore them with Christian fortitude. He has within the past few months failed rapidly in flesh, but this was attributed mainly to the effects of the disease, as he was not able to get good rest at nighter having frequently to rise and inhale a medical preparation which usually gave him relief. On Sunday he seemed somewhat better than usual and partook of a hearty meal at dinner. After this meal he enjoyed a short sleep of about two hours. About three o'clock he was selzed with a violent asthmatic fit, the lung seeming to contract so that he could not get any air. He continued for three hours in this state, being unable to get any relief. The doctor was sent for, and tried ineffectually to do him any good. At twenty minutes to ten o'clock at night he passed away quietly and apparently without much suffering. He was a true Christian and was highly respected in the neighborhood. His family have the sympathy of the whole community.

Ly FERGUS W. HUME.

"And another thing," said Calton, resuming his walk, "if your theory is correct, which I don't think it is, what became of. Whyte's coat! Has Moreland got it?"

"No, he has not," answered the detective, decisively.

decisively.

"You seem very positive about it," said the lawyer, after a moment pause. "Did you ask Moreland about it?"

A reproachful look came into Kilsip's white face.

"Not quite so green," he said, forcing a white face.

"Not quite so green," he said, forcing a smalle. "I thought you'd a better opinion of me than that, Mr. Catton. Ask him!—no."

"Then how did you find out?"

"The fact is Moreland is employed as a barman in the Kangaroo hotel."

"A barman!" echoed Calton; "and he crosse out here as a gentleman of independent fortune. Why, hang it, man, that in itself is tune. Why, hang it, man, that in itself is sufficient to prove that he had no motive to murder Whyte. Moreland pretty well lived on Whyte, so what could have induced him to kill his golden goose and become a barman—pshaw! the idea is absurd."

"Well, you may be right about the matter," said Kilsip, rather angrily: "and if Gorby makes mistakes I don't pretend to be infallible. But at all events when I saw Moreland in the bar he wore a silver ring on the forefinger of his right hand."

"Silver isn't a diamond."

"No, but it shows that was the finger he was accustomed to wear his ring on. When I saw that I determined to search his room.

"A mare's nest?"

Klisip nodded.
"And so your castle of cards fails to the ground," said Calton, jestingly. "Your idea is absurd. Moreland no more committed the murder than Γ did. Why he was too the murder than I did. Why he was too drunk on that night to do anything."

"Humph—so he says."
"Well, men don't calumniate themselves for nothing."
"It was a lesser danger to avert a greater one," replied Kilsip, coolly. "I am sure that Moreland was not drunk on that right. He only said so to escape awkward questions as to his movements. Depend upon it he knows more than he lets out."
"Well, and how did you intend to set about the matter?"
"I shall start looking for the coat first."
"Ah! you think he has hidden it?"
"This sure of it. My theory is this: When Moreland got out of the cab at Powlett street?"—

iforeland gov didn't," interrupted Caltor

"But—no dimit," interrupted Catton, angrily.

"Let us suppose, for the sake of argument, that he did," said Klisip, quietly. "I say when he left the cab he walked up Powlett street, turned to the left down George street, and walked back to town through the Fitz-roy gardens, then, knowing that the coat was noticeable, he threw it away, or hid it, and walked out of the gardens through the town."

In evening dress more noticeable than coat."
"He wasn't in evening dress," said Kilsip,

"He wasn't in evening dress," said Kilsip, quietly.

"No more he was," observed Calton, eagerly, recalling the evidence at the trial. "Another blow to your theory. The murderer was in evening "ress—the cabman said so,".

"Yes; because he had seen Mr. Fitzgerald in evening dress a few minutes before, and thought that he was the same man who got into the cab with Whyte."

"Well, what of that?"

"If you remember, the second man had his coat buttoned up. Moreland wore dark trousers—at least, I suppose so—and, with the coat buttoned up. If was easy for the cabman to make the mistake, believing, as he did, that it was Mr. Fitzgerald."

"That sounds better," "said Calton, thoughtfully. "And what are you going to do?"

"Look for the coat in the Fitzpey gardens."

"Pshawl a wild goose chase."
"Possibly," said Kitsip, as he arose to go.
"And when shall I see you again?" said

"And when shall I see you again?" said Calton.
"Oh, to-night," said 'Kilsip, pausing at the door. "I had nearly forgotten, Mother Guttersnipe wants to see you."
"Why! Whnt's up?"
"She's dying, and wants to tell you some secret."
"Rosanna Moore, by Jove!" said Calton. "She'll tell me something about her. I'll get to the bottom of this yet. All right, I'll be here at 8 o'clock."
"Very well, sir!" and the detective glided out.

"Very well, sir!" and the detective guides out.
"I wonder if that old hag knows anything?" said Calton to himself, as he resumed his seat. "She might have overheard some conversation between Whyte- and his mistress, and is going to split. Well, I'm afraid when Fitzgerald does confess I will know all about it beforehand."

CHAPTER XXVIL CHAPTER XXVII.

Punctual to his appointment, Klisip called at Calton's office at 8 o'clock, in order to guide him through the squalid labyrinths of the slums, and found the barrister waiting impatiently for him.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 27.—The tariff bill has been received by the House Ways and Means Committee and a meeting has been called for Tuesday to begin its consideration. It is the intention to discuss the Senate amendments thoroughly in committee, and estimates will be prepared showing the probable effect of them on the revenue, from the standpoint of the Ways and Means Committee. This will take some time and an early report upon the bill does not appear to be probable.

The buman digestive apparatus is one of the most complicated and wonderful things in existence. It is easily put out of order. Greasy food, tough food, sloppy food, bad cookery, mental worry, late hours, irregular habits, and many other things which ought not to be, have made the American people a nation of dyspepties.

But Green's August Flower has done a wonderful work in reforming this sad business and making the American people so healthy that they can enjoy their meals and be happy.

Remember:—No happiness without health, But Green's August Flower brings healt-and happiness to the dyspeptic. Ask your druggist for a bottle. Seventy-five cents.

Handeron, Jan. 28.—A number of the laity of the Diocese of Nisgara are dissatisfied with the sileged ritualistic tendencies of Siskop Hamilton, and some of them have for and themselves into a society called "The Church of England Defence Association of the Diocese of Nisgara." The use of lightch candles about the coffin of the late Mr. Francis Gooth, in St. Matthew's Church, on Wedersday last, from 10 to 3 o'clock, has increased the feeling on the part of a number of the members of the association. Several persons at the meeting at Christ Church Cathedral schoolhouse on Thursday last objected to the Bishop's proposed new churches if they were to be ritualistic, but the Bishop ruled all reference to that subject out of order. It is said that the members, however, propose to object is another manner which they believe will be more effectual.

BOULANGER'S BIG BOOM.

GLOOMY VIEWS OF THE ELECTION TAKEN BY THE PRESS.

PARIS, Jan. 28.—The Temps does not at tempt to ignore the importance of Boulai ger's triumph, but it regrets the idea the adoption of exceptional measures by the ger's truming, not be teger to be adoption of exceptional measures by the Government or of rebelling against the popular verdict. Boulanger, it says, will not try to conspire against the Republic simply because he has no need to do so. The electors, it believes, weted chiefly not against the Republic but against an incapsple and impotent Chamber of Deputies. It says that the system of election known as scrutin d'arrondissement ought to be re-established, the budget for 1889 adopted and Parliament adjourn until October, when a general election will be held. In the meantime, it says, the country should occupy itself solely in endeavors to promote the success of the exhibition.

Various questions which it was proposed situation have been postponed until Thursday. Boulanger did not appear in the on Thursday an anti-plebiseite measure and a bill to re-establish the scrutin d'arrondissement system. The Bureaux of the Left desire the introduction of both measures tomorrow in order to block Jouvencal's proposed interpellation.

In ministerial circles it is considered that the election of Boulanger menaces the republic, 90,000 Conservatives and 150,000 Republicans having voted for him. One minister in speaking of the situation quoted the words of Thiers: "We should take everything seriously, nothing tragically." The Journal des Debats says that at a meeting in the rue Lincoln last night, several Radical deputies urged the formation on the spot of a ministry of action which should present itself in the Chamber of Deputies immediately and demand authority to prosecute Boulanger for treason. Many of those present opposed the suggestion, and the meeting dispersed at 4 o'clock this morning without coming to a decision.

What the Berlin Papers Say.

Berlin, Jan. 28.—The newspapers here of all shades of political opinion regard the success of Boulanger as an evil sugury for the French re ublic. St. John's, Nfid., Jan. 28.—The particulars of a revolting murder committed in St. Pierre have come to hand. A French fisherman named Francois Coupard lived in a hut on Dog Island, near St. Pierre. He had as a dory-mate Ollivier, and between them there were frequent quarrels. During the night of Dec. 30, the neighborhood heard frightful noises which kept them awake all night. In the morning they made a declaration to the police, who went to Coupard's hut and found the windows broken and the hut empty, but saw nothing suspicious. At a later hour two friends of Coupard went to his hut about some boats, of which he had charge, and on lifting a sail spread in the corner they found the body of the poor fisherman entirely naked. The body was stowed between two trunks and doubled up, the head resting on the chest.

When removed a ghastly sight presented itself. The body had been horribly mangled. Three deep incisions were made below each breast, about an inch long, and a fearful gash from the throat downward penetrated the heart. These mutilations had been made after the murder. The heavy cuts in the abdomen showed that an attempt had been made to use the low specification of the position of the coupains of the position of the horristic in the abdomen showed that an attempt had been made to cut the legs from the body, but either from fear or want of time, the horrible butchery was not completed. Senator Hoar raised a laugh when he stated that he did not believe in the notion of the senator from Kansas (Plumb), that the United States was to go about the world with pantaloons stuffed in boots, with walstoots off and with ragged trousers held up by one suspender.

Mr. Call also sustained the amendment. The scream of the American eagle in mid air in defiance of all was not the language of dignity or wisdom nor any kind of useful assertion of the people's power.

Mr. Blair opposed the amendment seeing in it "a little anti-republican catering to the sentiment of aristocratic domination, grandeur and power." A NEW WINTER PORT.

MONTREAL, Jan. 28.—A company is to be formed at Gaspe with a capital of $500,000 to develop the fishing trade of the Labrador coast. They intend to construct special steam vessels for the work. Mr. Tetu, a civil engineer, thinks that with a subsidy of $50,000 from the Dominion Government he would be able to navigate the St. Lawrence the year round from Tadousac to Liverpool via Cape Ray and Newfoundland, which would reduce the distance by thirty six hours as from Halifax to-day. His idea is to form a company and build vessel for the enterprise. Several well known city capitalists are at the head of the scheme. The Railroad Presidents.

CHICAGO, Jan. 23.—The railroad presidents will finally consider the new agreement to-morrow. The Chicago, Burlington and Northern road was not represented at to-day's conference. In order to meet that road's objection to the agreement the conference adopted a resolution which permits a road to meet the rates of outside lines without delay and to explain afterwards. Chairman Cooley and Commissioner Morrison of the Inter-State Commerce Commission arrived here to-day. They are quietly investigating railroad matters here. Judge Cooly said the situation regarding passenger affairs was considerably improved, but the abuses were not all wiped out.

CANADA'S DESTINY.

A RECENT issue of the New York World contains a two column article headed "Canada must come in," meaning that the Dominion must unite politically with the Republic. The article contains misrepresentations of the most glaring character and a great deal of nonsense about the "im-perious logic of evente," "fighting against nature" and other rhetorical flourishes that fill up the space.

"Let us try for once," say the writer, "to tell the truth, the whole truth, and, so help us God, nothing but the truth, and the sentence containing this oath concludes with the words "about our beloved but fast disintegrating Dominion." People here know whether the Dominion is disintegrating, and when they see the writer proceed to libel Canada they can form their own opinions as to whether it is "beloved"

The reasons given why Canada must unite with the Republic are two, because it is in debt and because annexation will be the policy of Gen. Harrison's administra-tion. The increase in the expenditure he quotes as something that will force Canada to look for aid, but ignores the fact that the Canada of to-day is not the Canada of a few years ago. A man who did a leading business in Peterborough some years ago could not do a similar business now at the same expense, because his business would be expence, because his business would be larger and ne would need greater facilities. The Dominion is much larger now, on account of the increase of population and of the opening up of the Northwest. The Dominion taxation in 1887 amounted to $28,687,002 or $3,88 a head of the population. In 1875 the taxation was $5 39 are head, and In 1875 the taxation was $5.32 per head, and the increase in 1887 was 56 cents more than it was twelve years previous, while in 1887 it was less than it was in 1882 or 1883. List year the amount raised by taxation was $502,500 less than in 1886.

The World should also remember that though the taxation in the United States is about thirty cents a head less than in Canada, the states in that country do not receive aid from the federal treasury, while Canadian provinces receive large subsidies from the Dominion treasury, and that taxation for provincial purposes is almost un-

Canadian debt, and here he puts in what Canadian debt, and here he puts in what surely must be intended as a joke. He says the debt "would make the patient French of France groan!" Surely he must know that France has a debt compared with which the Canadian public debt is a mere bagatelle. In 1887 the debt of France per head of the population was $136.89 more than that of Canadia. Where, a by where its than that of Canada! Where, oh where ! is the vow to tell the truth? Yet such misthe vow to tell the truth? Yet such mis-representations may impose on people who are not accquainted with the affairs of Canada and are calculated to do the Do-lariff bill and amendments back to the minion injury.

This writer—who dates his production from Ottawa—elaborates tables to show the burdensome increase in the debt. The burden of the debt is represented by what it costs to carry it, and the met interest. Toward for 5 colock, when constitution paid per head in 1887 was just twenty cents ready outside, the warden of the prison,

The agitation kept up by Mr. Wiman and his agencies, however, give color to the belief that a couspiracy exists.

The Brooklyn sidermen unanimously adopted a resolution notifying the Atlantic-avenue line that unless its cars are put in motion forthwith and run on schedule time steps will be taken to have its charter declared null and void. A letter was received by Mayor Grant to-day from President White of the Dry Dock, East Broadway and Battery surface railroad stating that a strike of the employes of that road was imminent and desiring protection. The Mayor is notified that the company will hold the city responsible for any damages done its property by mob violence. The letter was referred to the Police Commissioners.

At 4.30 this afternoon two wagons came out of the Atlantic-avenue railway stables in Atlantic-avenue near Third-avenue. In each were thirteen policemen and eight employes of the company. Twenty mounted policemen escorted the wagons. A large crowd had gathered and when the wagons started toward the Fifth-avenue and 24th-street stables the crowd howled, swore and threw stones at the policemen and they charged. The wagons and horsemen pressed briskly on, the mob following and gaining in numbers and fury every minute until the procession was halted in 23rd-street, near the stables. Several thousand angry men blocked the way. From the streets, windows and house tops stones, clubs and brickbats showered upon the policemen and trembling employes.

Sergeants Johnson and Cole ordered the mounted officers to charge and the squads advanced on the gallop. The officers used their clubs effectively and at 5 o'clock the employes were safely lodged in the stables. They were wanted to take care of horses which had been suffering from neglect. Many rioters were struck by clubs and the flying missiles and several policemen were hurt, but nobody so far as known was severely injured; Strong details of police guard the stables and patrol the line of the road. No arrests were made. There is a general expectation in Brooklyn of a riot to-morrow morning when the company will attempt to start cars.

Wim. J. Richardson, secretary of the Atlantic-avenue Railway, and Gen. B. F. Tracy called on the State Board of Arbitration this evening and said they would receive a committee of the former employes, but would not confer with the Executive Committee of D. A. 75.

KANSAS CITT, Jan. 28.—T. S. Tinsley, a prominent architect and inventor here, is reported to have discovered a method of producing sterilized air. All surgical operations can be performed by its use without danger of subsequent inflammation. Tinsley holds that inflammation is produced by microbes in the air and if they are eliminated wounds will heal rapidly.

Preparing French Criminals for the Fall of the Guillotine's Kuife. burden of the debt is represented by what it costs to carry it, and the mst interest. Paid por head in 1878, and last year, taking his own estimate of the population of the Dominion, it was about the same. When computing the ircrease in the debt he inggres the assumption of provincial debts, which were really not an addition but merely a transferance from one account to another, and knows nothing about the $140,000,000 expended on capital account upon public works. The provincial debts assumed and the capital expenditure, for railways, canals and public works, has amounted to more than the increase in the debt. Further, the expenditure, on public works made by Qanada has amounted to more than the increase in the debt. Further, the expenditure, on public works made by Qanada has amounted to more than the whole debt of the Dominion. And yet this writer, despite his oath, has the hardihood to say that "Canada is hopelessly insolvent," Instead of that being the truth, the rate of interest paid by the Dominion has decreased and it has received more favorable terms than ever before in the money market. Does that look like insolvency? Canada has a debt, but it has railways, canals and other public works to show for it and is one of the most solvent countries in the world.

There is one part of this article that is interesting. It is said that Gen. Harrison intends, when he assumes office, to make the annexation of Canada the most aggressive polloy of his administration, it is also said that intimate relations exist between Senator Sherman and leading Liberals in Canada and that there is an "undergroundt railroad" between Canada and Washington via Indianapolis. These statements may or may not be true, but further evidence is necessary to prove they no name is ever put upon the headstone, in order not to excite public curiosity. When the body is not reclaimed the prefect of police authorizes the faculty of medicine to take it. Strictly speaking, the corpse ought not to be delivered to the faculty until after twenty-four hours, this delay being accorded to the family to make its demand; but the custom is or give nurther body; threedistely to the family to make its demand; but the custom is to give up-the body immediately after a simulated burial when the authorities are certain that it will not be reclaimed.

Addresses by the District Master Workman and District Secretary—A Number of Workingmen's Opinions—organization of Unions.

The meeting of workingmen heid last evening to discuss the nine hour movement, proved an interesting one, as District Master Workman Elliott and District Secretary Hogan were present and addressed the gathering. The attendance was only fair, but the interest in the movement does not appear to be on the wane by any means.

Their progress so far had been most satisfactory, and he believed that, as their object was a right one, if they continued to agitate they would succeed. He did not see any other way to distribute labor in these days of machinery and inventions but by shorten the hours.

A Remarkable Rock.

Professor Henry Beals, a fellow of the Royal Society of London, has been making a special search for "rocking stones." His journeyings have been very successful. His search for "rocking stones" has been made in conjunction with geologists on the Continent,—who are seeking to establish beyond controversy the theory that these great rocks and curiously balanced stones, which in many instances are as large as a small hopse, were carried on floating icebergs during the mysterious era known as the glacial period. Of the rocking stones he has discovered but one new example in addition to that already known. This is at Noank, on the farm of Caleb Haley, a New York fish dealer.

This stone is estimated to weigh twenty-five tons. It has a rocking scope of six inches and can be readily moved by the land. Only one other stone is known of in New England—that Lancesborough, Mass. A photograph has been taken of Mohegan Rock, also known as Shehagan, in the town of Montville. This rock was used as a fortress and watch tower by the Mohegan Indians. It is now known to be the largest specimen of erratic bowlder in this country thus far discovered. It is forty-five feet high and seventy feet long, and is radiculated by scientists to weigh 10,000 tons, an enormous load for a floe of ice to carry. It is evidenced by the large flakes of the stone which the insimuning frost and storms of centuries have chipped from it. One of these fragments is sixty feet long and twelve feet thick, and its estimated weight is 1,200 tons.—New London Telegraph.

The Mystery of a Hansom Cab

Ly FERGUS W. HUME.

Ly FERGUS W. HUME.

They went into Little Bourke street, and after going through the narrow and dark lanes, which now seemed quite familiar to Calton, reached Mother Guttersnipe's den, for in truth it could be called nothing else. After climbing the rickety stairs, which groaned and creaked beneath their weight, they entered the room, and found Mother Guttersnipe lying on the bed in the corner, and the elfish child with the black hair playing cards with a slatternly looking girl at the deal table by the faint light of a tallow candle. They both sprang to their feet as the strangers entered, and the elfish child pushed a broken chair. In a sullen manner toward Mr. Calton, while the other girl shuffled into a far corner of the room, and crouched down there like a dog. The noise of their entry awoke the hag from an uneasy slumber into which she had fallen, and sitting up in bed, she huddled the clothes round her, and presented such a grewsome spectacle that Calton involuntarily recoiled. Her white hair was all unbound, and hung in tangled masses over her shoulder in snowy profusion. Her face, parched and wrinkled, with the hooked nose and beady black eyes, like those of a mouse, was poked forward, and her skinny arms, bare to the shoulder, were waving about as she grasped at the bedelothes with her claw like hands.

She was evidently growing very weak, so Calton turned to Kilsip and told him in a whisper to get a doctor. The detective scribbled a note on some paper, and, giving it to Lizer, ordered her to take it. At this, the other girl rose, and, putting her arm in that of the childs, they left together.

The human digestive apparatus is one of the most complicated and wonderful things in seristence. It is easily put out of order. Greasy food, tough food, sloppy food, sloppy food, sloppy food, sloppy food, sloppy food, bad concepts a table of dyspeptics.

But Grean's August Flower brings healt and happiness to the dyspeptic. Ask shealt and happiness to the dyspeptic. Ask shealt and happiness to the dyspeptic it to Lizer, ordered her to take it. At this, the other girl rose, and, putting her arm in that of the child's, they left together.

"Them two young 'ussey's gone?' said Mother Guttersnipe. "Right you are, I don't want what I've got to tell to get into the noospaper, I don't."

"And what is it!" asked Calton, bending forward.

noospaper, I don't."

"And what is it?" asked Calton, bending forward.

The old woffian took another drink of gin, and it seemed to put life into her, for she sat up in the bed and commenced to talk rapidly, as though she were afraid of dying before her secret was told.

"You've been 'ere afore?" she said, pointing one skinny finger at Calton, "and you wanted to find out all about 'er; but you didn't, blarst ya. She would?" let me tell, for she was always a proud jade, a flouncin'round while 'er pore mother was a starvin'."

"Her mother! Are you Rosanna Moore's mother?" cried Calton, considerably astonished.

"May I die if I ain't," creaked the hag.
"Er pore father died of drink, ani I'm a follerin' iim to the same place in the same way. You weren't about town in the old days, or you'd a bin after her, blarst ye."

"After Rosanna?"

"The werry girl," answered Mother Guttersipe. "She were on the stage, she were, an' my eye, what a swell she were, with all the coves a dyin' for 'er, an' she dancin' over their black 'earts, cuss' em; but she was cuss 'im'."

"Who does she mean?" whispered Calton to Kilsjp.

"Mean?" screamed Mother Guttersnipe, whose sharp-ears had caught the muttered question. "Why, Mark Frettlby!"

"Good God!" Calton rose up in his astonishment, and even Kilsip's inscrutable countenance displayed some surprise.

"Aye, 'e were a swell in them days," pursued Mother Guttersnipe, "and 'e comes a-philanderin' round my gal, blarst 'im, an' seduces 'er, and leaves 'er and 'e child to starve, like a black 'earted villain as 'e were."

"Bah," retorted the hag, with scorn, "as if you didn't know my gran'darter Sal."

"Sal, Mark Frettlby's child!"

"Yes, an' as pretty a girl as the other, tho' she 'appened to be born on the wrong side of the 'edga. Oh, Ivo seen 'er a-sweepin' along in 'er silks an' safins as tho' we were dirtan' Sal 'er 'alf sister-cuss 'er."

Exhausted by the efforts she had made, the old woman sank back in her bed, while Calton sat in a dazed manner, thinking over the astounding revelation that had just been made. That Rosanna Moore should turn out to be Mark Frettlby's mistress he hardly wondered at; after all, he was but a man, and in his young days had been no better and no worse than the rest of his friends. Rosanna Moore was pretty, and was evidently one of those women who—rakes at heartprefer the untrammeled freedom of being a mistress to the sedate bondage of a wife. In questions of morality, so many people live in glass houses that there are few nowadays who can afford to throw stones, so Calton did not think any worse of Frettlby for his youthful follies. But what he did wonder at was that Frettlby should be so heartless as to leave his child to the tender mercies of an old hag like Mother Guttersnipe, it was, so entirely different from what he knew of theman, that he was inclined to think it was some trick of the old woman's.

"Did Mr. Frettlby know Sal was his child!" he asked.

"Not 'e," snarled Mother Guttersnipe, in an exuitant tone, "'e thought she was dead.

"Not 'e," snarled Mother Guttersnipe, in an exultant tone; "'e thought she was dead, 'e did, arter Roseanner gave him the go by." "And why did you not tell him?" "Cause I wanted to break his 'eart, if 'e 'ad any." said the old beldame, vindictively. "Sal was a-goin' to 'ell as fast as she could till she was tuk from me. If she had gone and got into quod I'd 'ave. gone to him, and said 'Look at yer darter! 'Ow I've ruined her as you did mina."

The Cardwell Case.

OBANGEVILLE, Jan. 30.—His Lordship Mr. Justice Street presided at the court house here yesterday for the purpose of hearing the petition filed against the return of Mr. R. S. White as member for Cardwell in the Dominion House. Mr. Elgin Myers appeared for the petitioner and Mr. W. L. Walsh for the respondent. Upon the opening of the court Mr. Myers stated that he had no evidence to offer in support of the petition, that he had gone garfully over the evidence submitted to him and had come to the conclusion that it was not sufficient to warrant him in proceeding

Mr. Walsh then asked that the petitio

A plesworth of Toronto, however, asked for leave to substitute Samuel Stubbs, a brother of the defeated candidate, as petitioner in the place of the present petitioner, and applied for an order allowing the present security to stand for the substituted petitioner's security. Stubbs, setting out that they though there was good reason for putter, prose there was good reason for further prosecutions the petition and that they would be able to adduce arithme to show that bribery and other corrupt practices were resorted to by Mr. White and his agents at the recent election, and that they believed that the petitioner had been induced to withdraw from the further prosecution of the petition under some corrupt agreement arithmetical between his and the red.

Mr. Walsh strongly objected to this application on the ground that His Lordship had no power to entertain it and upon the ground that His Lordship had no power to entertain it and upon the ground that it was unfair to his client to be harrassed by a practically new petition at this stage of the proceedings.

His Lordship reserved his decision until Saturday at noon, when it will be given at Osgoode Hall. He intimated that if he decided to allow the new petitioner to intervene that he would not hear the petition during the session of the House, so that, in any event, it will be some considerable time before the trial.

The Halton Trial.

Milton, Jan. 30.—The trial of the Halton election petition commenced here yesterday morning at 10 o'slock before Hon. Chief Justice Armour. There are 74 charges of bribery and corrupt practices. There is great interest taken in the trial, the court room being crowded with spectators all through the trial until 6.30, when court was adjourned until 9 o'clock this morning. G. T. Blackstock of Toronto and D. Mcf.ibbon of Milton appeared for the petitioner, and J. K. Kerr. Q.C., and Wm. Macdonald of Toronto for John Waldie, M.P., the respondent.

He says: 'I am still under he deep emotion caused by the marvellous lemontaria. appeal so audaciously to the republic, which their faults, their impotence and their intrigues have so gravely compromised. Description, Jan. 30.—Wm. O'Brien was arrested at Manchester yesterday while addressing a meeting. A rumor had been cirlated that O'Brien would balk his pursuers and appear at the meeting. This report brought out a large audience. John Dillon was also expected, but he did not appear. The chairman was addressing the meeting when a commotion arose and O'Brien appeared at the entrance to the platform and stepped to the front. The people rose en masse and cheered until they were compelled through exhaustion to desist. Such a scene was never witnessed in Manchester before.

A large force of police arrived and O'Brien was arrested in the ante-room while the andience was leaving the hall. A torchlight parade was afterwards held in honor of O'Brien. His arrest caused in-tense excitement. It appears that O'Brien reached Westrod Friday atternoon after a drive of 90 miles in an open trap and was then smuggled on board a collier and landed at Port Heawl, Wales. He stayed a day at Bridgend and then eams to London, go-ing thence to Manchester.

London, Jan. 30.—The Emperor of Germany is determined to be "plus allemand que les allemands," says Mr. Yates, and has dismissed his French cook. Ever since the time of Frederick the Great, who had too great a regard for the constitution to allow it to be severed by German cookery, there has been a succession of French cooks at Potsdam. Emperor William's cook, M. Urbain Dubois, was first rate. When the war of 1870 broke out Urbain resigned his post, but the Emperor would not permit him to do so, and marked his sense of his devotion by exempting the cook's native village.

It was decided after much discussion to form a new association, and the following directors were elected: W. R. Davis, James Dixon, John Patterson, E. G. Moors, R. Mackay, R. B. Skinner and Wm. Larkins (No. 123), attached to Headquartes, committed suicide at 6.50 yesterday morning on George-street, near the Newsboys' Home, by shooting hinself through the head with his own revolver. There was one eye witness of the deed, a mannand George McCracken, who was standing outside the gate of the Home when Larkins pulled the trigger of his pistol. The builtet entered the right side of the skull and went clan through the brain. Larkins fell like a log and was just breathing when McCracken rushed to his assistance. He died within three minutes of the firing of the shot.

Larkins joined the force in 1883 and was a native of Ireland. He was 28 years old and reckoned one of the best officers on the force. Before coming to Toronto he worked as a farm laborer in the township of Adjala, Ont., in the county of Cardwell.

The peculiar seature of the case is the fact that up to within ten minutes of the shooting Larkins was spoken to by quite a number of people and appeared in the best of spirits. In the guardroom, on the previous night; he was one of the merriest in the crowd, oracking jokes and playing dominces with as much zest at the rest. Patrol Sergeant Bowers saw him art 6.42. At that time he appeared to be all right, and answered the customary questions in his usual manner. Policeman William J. Patterson saw him at 6.45 at King and Georgestreets, but did not speak to him. The death of Larkins has created a profound sensation in police circles.

streets, but did not speak to him. The death of Larkins has created a profound sensation in police circles.

There have been many speculations as to the cause of the deed. The coroner's jury said it was melancholia. Though this was true to a certain extent, it was a woman which changed the happy-spirited, free-hearted Larkins from one of the most contented men in the force to one whose disgust of life ended in death by his own hand. Larkins boarded at 33 Wilton-avenue. Six weeks ago he reported off duty on account of rheumatism, and it was not until two weeks ago that he returned to his duty. For the past-three years Larkins had been engaged to a "girl of a very respectable family in Adjala. While he was lying ill in his boarding-house the girl visited him. They had a long conversation, in the course of which she informed him that the engagement was off. Larkins was heard to remark to her: "If this is the way you are going to treat me, I wish I was dead." Heafterwards took Policeman Paterson, who boards with him, into his confidence, and told him all his troubles, but did not even hint that he contemplated any desperate act.

At a meeting of the cabinet yesterday Hon. G. W. The council ratified the minister's recommendation, and Mr. Alexander stands as the lucky man. He will not assume the chair, however, until next-fall at the opening of the new term. Mr. Alexander is a young man of 34, a native of Hamilton, and at present Munro Professor of the English Language and Literature in Dalhousie College, Nova Scotia. In 1873 Mr. Alexander matriculated at Toronto University, winning a double scholarship. In the following summer he won the Canadian Gilchrist scholarship, standing fourth in the order of merit out of 652 candidates at the matriculation examination of the University of London in that year. He spent three years in London and graduated a B. A. at the University of London in the tyear. He spent three years in London and graduated a B. THE UNITED STATES MARKET.

Those who advocate commercial union or unrestricted reciprocity continually advance the argument that this country would have open to it a market of 60,000,000 papels. would have open to it a market of 60,000,000 people, especially for our natural products. One class of these products that has been singled out as one that would be in demand is iron ore, but that does not seem to be so certain as our Liberal friends would have certain as our Liberal friends would nave us believe. In a memorial to the Govern-ment asking for aid for the proposed rall-way to connect Cobourg with the Canadian Pacific the President of the Cobourg, Blair-ton and Marmora, Bai.way and Mining Company, after reciting the operations that were carried on at the Blairton mines,

"The cessation of work on the Biairton Mine was not caused by any failing off in either the quantity or quality of the ore, but solely by the commercial depression while set in so severely in the United States, and which rendered it impossible to work at a profit, as there cessed to be any market or demand for ore on the other side. The main veius are still as strong and permanent as ever, and further investigations made in 1887 have developed a large and pure vein of hematite ore on the same property, in addition to which there are other deposits of ore which the erection of the propess of the propession of the prop

This statement is plain and explicit, the reason for the cess atton of work being that there "ceases to be any market or demand for the ore on the other side." The REVIEW has not opposed a reciprocity treaty with the United States and does not do so now, though it is opposed to commercial union, but the talk about the unlimited market across the lines, and the advantage it would be to Canada to have free access to it, does be to Canada to have free access to it, does not appear so weighty when a statement of facts such as we have just quoted is taken into consideration. The President of the company does not attribute the closing of the mines to the duty imposed by the United States Government, but to the fact that there ceased to be any market or demand for the ore in that country.

There are other statements in this memorial worth drawing attention to. One is contained in the foregoing paragraph. wherein the information is given that investigation has revealed a pure vein of hematite ore on the property adjacent te the magnetic deposits. A meeting was held at Warkworth on Tues day, a correspondent writes, consisting of the principal influential men of Brighton, Norwood and Warkworth, to promote the interests of the projected Brighton, Warkworth and Norwood Railway.

Mr. Wm. Bensley, of Warkworth, was appointed Chairman and Mr. Lypp, of Brighton, Secretary. An animated discussion took place.

Mr. W. B. Notthrup, of Belleville, in an interesting and exhaustive address advocated the desirability of Brighton as the best terminus for railway through that section of country.

NEW YORKERS MUST WALK.

AGreat Strike of Street Car Men-Riotou Scenes in Gotham, New York, Jan. 29.—The threatened tie-up on the New. York street car lines went into effect shortly after 5 o'clook this morning. No cars went out after 2 a.m. The strikers comprise 4000 men.

way last night to the Eighth-avenue statics to look for work, when he was set upon, kicked and beaten brutally and stabbed in the face. His assailants escaped. The man may die.

A lively row occurred at Grand-street this moraing, when a crowd of strikers tried to overturn a car which the company had started.

A collision between the strikers and the police took place at 11.30. When a car reached 43d-street it was attacked by 200 strikers, who did all in their power to stop it. A platoon of 75 police, headed by Capt. Walsh, charged on the strikers. A scuffle ensued and two or three of the strikers were roughly handled.

On Grand-street line three Union conductors returned to work. The strikers were all paid off by the road.

At 23rd-street and 10th-avenue to-day two cross-town cars came along almost together. The strikers stopped then, hustled the passingers out and overturned one car. A policeman arrested a man who-beat the diriver. Police dispersed the crowd and sighted the car.

About the 4th-avenue stables 600 strikers gathered in an ugly mood. A car that started ran into a pile of ashes dumped on the track. Peter Clark shouted to the mob to follow him in an attack, but he was arrested by Captain Ryan. The mod-tried to reseeue Clark, but the Captain threatened to shoot and the rescue was abandoned. The crowd smashed the car windows with stones. A lady passenger was slightly injured. The car then flew through the crowd on a dead run and was not stopped again. The went down town unmolested, but on the way up a 23rd-street car was found in the middle of the 4th-avenue track. The conductor had been put off, the horses unhitched and the car turned over. The 4th-avenue car driver pulled around it and continued up town. The enraged strikers chased it until they got tired.

A second car, started out after the first returned, met with no obstructions. The 23d-street car that was turned over was damaged $500. Sightseers lined the avenue and greatly interfered with the police. Many of the strikers were intoxicated. Muc

Much trouble is expected on this line tomorrow.

This afternoon the car companies on the east side determined to run no more cars and all but a few policemen were with drawn. The crowds dispersed. The 42ndstreet cross town line started a car manned by 21 policemen. At 7thavenue the strikers had placed two transfer huts across the trackss
The police removed them and the strikerthrew stones. Officers Mallory and Scan len were badly cut about the face. The car continued the trip without further molestation.

RAHWAYS FIREBUG.

Rests Fire in Order than He Might Have a Good Racket.

Railway, Jan 30.—Charles Martin, a hanger on around the engine houses of Rahway, was noticed acting queerly on Friday night. He had been suspected of being a firebug and Chief Tooker followed him down Hamilton-street to Farmer Saffenberg's barn. Martin crept around the end of the barn and a moment later the haystack adjoining it was ablaze. The firebug was pounced upon by the chief before he had time to retreat.

A short but fierce struggle ended in favor of the Chief. The fire was subdued by the department before much damage was done. Yesterday Martin confessed not only that he fired the haystack, but also that he was the person who had started all the incendiary fires at Rahway for 18 months. These incediary fires have been numerous, and the town has been in a state of alarm.

He set fire to and destroyed the coal yard of his employer, Capt. Pierson. He also tried, he said, to burn the public school in Franklyn-street. He said the only reason that prompted him to set the fires was that he might have a good racket. It is customary with the firemen to put up a couple of kegs of beer at the engine house after every fire. The prisoner belongs to a respectable family.

The woman who is accused of having sold the decayed her fruit was from Fraserville, and states met emphatically that she has not sold an egg on the market for years as she takes them all-to a grocer and trades them out. The way she was identified seems to put the probability of a mistake out of the question. When she drove down to Mrs. Fee's to defiver the eggs, a woman living directly across the street recognized her as the woman to whom she had given a crock which was to be packed with butter, but from whom she had never received the crock empty or full. When the eggs were found to be bad this neighbor of Mrs. Fee's told the latter what the woman's name was who had sold her daughter the eggs.

Dear Sin,—We learn with regret of your intended departure from Peterborough. As your associates in the Sunday school work during the past seven years, we have enjoyed your co-operation and valued assistance. While we regret your removal from our midst, we refer with plessure to your ever faithful and prompt discharge of the duties, undertaken as Assistant Secretary, and later as Secretary of the Sunday school.

Assistant Secretary, and later as Secretary of the Sunday achool.

The success and efficiency of the school is as much dependent on the energy and forsthought of its officers, who direct the work and carry out details, as to the self sacrificing exections of the teachers who sustain that important work. As a "newer of wood and drawer of water," so to speak, you have ably done your part. The school bears testimony to your zeal and usefulness. The records are witness of your unremitting care and attention, and the completness of the school statistics do you much credit.

Remembering you as a brother in the work, your absence will be a constant reminder that time relentlessly works its changer. In a social sense you withdraw from a circle of friends who will greatly regret your departure. Your cheerful and happy disposition, your unfailing courtsey, have gained our esteem and respect. We are confident the same qualities will will you hosts of friends in your new home. We trust that happiness and much prosperity will attend you and your wife, the sharer of both your labors and your joys.

As a slight token of our esteem and appreciation, we, your fellow workers in the Georgest. Sunday school, ask you to accept this clock. As it "beats out the little lives of men." we know that your life will say that in your thoughts:

"We live in deeds, not, years, In thoughts, not breaths, In feelings, not in figures on a dial. We should count time by heart-throbs:

He most lives who thinks most. Feels the neblest, acts the best."

"You old devil," said Calton, revolted at the malignity of the scheme. "You have sacrificed an innocent girl for this."

"None of your preachin," retorted the hag sullenly; "It ain't been brought up for a saint, I ain't—an' I wanted to pay 'im out, blarst 'im —'e pald me well to 'old my tongue about my darter, an' I've got it 'ere," laying her band on the pillow. "All gold, good gold—an' mine, cuss me."

Calton arose; he felt quite sick at this exhibition of human depravity, and longed to be away. As he was putting on his hat, however, the two girls entered with a doctor, who bowed to Kilsip, cast a sharp scrutinizing glance at Calton, and then walked over to the bed. The two girls went back to their corner, and waited in silence for the end, Mother Guttersuipe had fallen back in the bed, with one claw-like hand clutching the pillow, as if to protect her beloved gold, and over ber face a deadly paleness was spreading, which told the practiced eye of the doctor that the end was near. He knelt-down beside the bed for a moment, holding the candle to the dying woman's face. She opender her eyes, and muttered drowsily:

"Who's you'f go t' 'ell," but then she seemed to grasp the situation again, and she started up with a shrill yell, which made the hearers shudder, it was so weird and eerie.

"My money!" she yelled, clasping the pillow in her skinny arms. "It's all mine, ye shan't have it, blarst ye."

The doctor arose from his knees, and shrugged his shoulders. "Not worth while doing anything." he said, coolly, "she'll be dead soon."

The old woman, mumbling over her pillow, caught the word, and burst into tears. "Deadl deadl uny poor Rosanna, with 'er golden 'air, always lovin' 'er pore mother till 'e took 'er away, an' she came back to die —lie—ooh!"

Her voice died away in a long, melancholy wail, that made the two girls in the corner shiver and put their fingers in their ears.
"My good woman," said the doctor, bending over the bed, "would you not like to see a minister!"
She looked at him with her bright, beady eves, already somewhat dimmed with the

"Give me my life—gold—money—cuss ye—I sold my soul for it—save me—give me my sife," and, with trembling hands, she tried to force the gold on them. They did not say a word, but stood silently looking at her, while the two girls in the corner clung together, and trembled with fear.

"Don't look at me—don't," cried the hag, falling down again amid the shining gold.
"Ye want me to die. Blarst ye—I shan't—I shan't—give me my gold," clawing at the scattered sovereigns. "I'll take it with me—I shan't dio—G—G—" whimpering. "I ain't done nothin'—let me live—give me a Bible—save me, G—cuss it—G—G,—," and she fell back on the bed, a corpes.

HARRISURG, Jan. 30.—The most remarkable case that has come under the observation of the medical fraternity in this city for a long time is that of Mary Yountz, aged 12 years, who is suffering from facial paralysis. This affliction is due to chewing gum, she having employed the use of her jaws so constantly during the last three months that the muscles of her face are powerless and her narves are in a dilapidated condition. When she laughs her face presents an amusing sight. There is much sympathy lelt for the little miss here, as her condition is regarded a serious one by the physicians who have been called upon to treat her. In whatever position she is able to twist her mouth, the muscles remain and the face is thus in a contorted shape until one of the members of her family assist her to place it in proper condition. Her chin drops and it frequently becomes necessary to tie a bandage over her head to keep the lower jaw in its proper place. Mary is now under the care of Dr. Hites, who is applying plasters to her face, and under this treatment she seems to be improving though very slowly. This is the first case of the kind that has been heard of by a of the krind that has been heard of by a of the krind that has been heard of by a of the prominent physicians in this and their treatment is much on t

The burnan digestive apparatus is one of the most complicated and wonderful things in existence. It is easily put out of order. Greasy food, tough food, sloppy food, bad cookery, mental worry, late houss, irregular habits, and many other things which ought not to be, have made the American people a nation of dyspepties.

But Green's August Flower has done a wonderful work in reforming this sad business and making the American people so healthy that they can enjoy their meals and be happy.

For a Great Parpose.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 30.—The Senate, on motion of Mr. Riddleberger, who said he wished an executive session "for a great purpose," proceeded to executive business. It was understood that the Senate in secret session discussed the British extradition treaty but no conclusion was reached. When the dougs were re-opened the Senate adjourned.

AUSTRO-HUNGARY WEEPS SUDDEN DEATH OF THE CROWN PRINCE RUDOLF.

The Crisis in France—Flequet to Benand
a Vote of Confidence—O'Brien Lodged in Jail.

Vienna, Jan. 30.—The Official Gazette says: Fate has inflicted a crushing blow upon the Imperial House and the people of Austria-Hungary. Our universally esteemed Crown Prime is dead. The deeply-loved son of the Emperor and Empress, the life's happiness of his affectionate spouse, the dearly loved and honored brother of the Princesses Gisela and Valerie, the pride of the entire Imperial house and the hope of his faithful people, in the flower of his youth and the fulness of his strength, sinks into an early grave. With deepest mourning, with hearts brimming with sorrow,
the peoples of the Empire turn their sorrowful glances toward the throne in hereditary love and fidelity and join in an earnest prayer that God will grant the imperial family a consolation that mere human words, even when sounding from a million tongues, can's scarcely bring.

The Gazette then narrates that the Crown Prince on Monday went on a shooting excursion to Meyerling, accompanied by several guests, including Prince Philip of Cobourg, and Count Hoyes. He felt somewhat indisposed yesterday and therefore excused himself from attending the family dinner party at the Hofburg. When the shooting guests assembled this morning the Crown Prince din for appear. Immediate enquiries were made and the guests were overcome by the news that the Crown Prince was dead from a stroke of apoplexy.
The phc. k of the calamity struck the Hofburg like lightning.

The official announcement that apoplexy was the cause of death modified the slarm of the public arising from press runners that the Prince had been killed while shooting.
Large crowds traversed the main streets and assembled in groups discussing the event.
When the Bourse learned the news a paralysis of business ensued. Members rushed to the street and besieged the telegraph offices. The Bourse was immediately closed and the committee decided to keep it closed until Friday. The Reichsrath also adjourned amid

BRUSSEIS, Jan. 30.—The Queen wepon hearing the news of the death of Prince Emperor William Agitated.

Berlin, Jan. 30.—Emperor William was agitated by the news of the death of the Austrian Crown Prince. He drove to the residence of the Austrian ambassador and remained there half an hour. He then telegraphed to Prince Henry at Kiel as follows: "Crown Prince Rudolf died of apoplexy of the head."

Paguet Will Not Resign.

Paris, Jan. 30.—M. Floquet, in receiving the bureau of the extreme left, said he had considered the advisability of resigning but had abandoned the idea, deciding to face the intrigues and attacks of his opponents. He said he would ask the Chamber for a vote of confidence. He was prepared to act energetically and would introduce immediately a bill increasing the stringency of the code relating to attacks upon the constitution and the public laws; also successful to the constitution and the public laws; also successful to the constitution and the public laws; also successful to the league of patriots. Such a step would be useless, as it would not prevent, the members from forming a fresh league. DUBLIN, Jan. 39.—Mr. O'Brien arrived at Kingstown this afternoon. The Lord-Mayor and other Parnellites awaited his arrival, but the police changed the route and conveyed O'Brien to the Clonmel the graves in the centerery. Stat. Lattin vowed she would horsewhip Burgess at the first opportunity. Yestreday afternoon Peterson & H.a.dee were delivering feed in the direction of the home of Mrs. Lattin, and Burgess, meeting the team, took a ride with the driver. To his dismay, the team drove into the yard of Mrs. Lattin. She saw nim, and without saying a word got a horsewhip and walked over to Burgess, who sat on the seat as if paralyzed with fear. She laid on with a will, Burgess meanwhile shouting for help, but none came. He finally succeeded in getting the whip away from her, but she quickly procured another and, resumed operations more fiercely. Finally the husband of the lady appeared and got the unfortunate detective off the premises. He was badly used up and has kept himself very much secluded since the affair.

The Fleur Outlook.

MINNEAPOLIS, Jan. 30.—The Northwestern Miller says: The week's production of flour was 84,100 barrels against 82,060 barrels the previous week and 101,500 barrels for the corresponding time in 1888. A single firm ground over half of the amount. There were ten mills in operation this afternoon. These are probably grinding at the rate of 14,000 barrels daily. There is no perceptible improvement in the flour market, the majority of our millers reporting very little call for flour from any source. One or two firms claim to have received quite a fair number of orders during a few days past. The unsettled condition of the wheat market has a bad influence on the trade.

The directexports for the week were 12,000 barrels against 14,400 the preceding week. There were 33,440 bushels a wheat received for the week ending Jan. 29. The shipments were: wheat, 148,960 bushels; flour, 68,659 barrels.

THE LOCAL LEGISLATURE.

Petitions and Natices of Motion.

Tohonto, Jan. 31.—The legislature had a brief session yesterday. Apparently the members do not intend to settle down to business for another week. The indications are that the amount of business to be transacted, though generally unimportant, will be great. A large number of small bills are coming in, but the only measure introduced yesterday was Mr. Lees' (Lanark) to amoud the Assessment Road Companies Act. These petitions were presented:

From the Moderator of the Presbyterian Church asking for an act to sell certain lands at Bowmanville.

From the township of Seymour asking that the bridge over the River Trent known as Narrows Bridge between Northumberland and Peterboro.

Astrows Brigge be made a county boundary bridge between · Northumberland and Peterboro.

From the Knights of Labor of St. Catharines, praying for free school books and other amendments of the school law; a petition for certain amendments of the Factory Act; a petition for compulsory publication of assessment rolls, and a petition for an act respecting stationary engines and boilers.

These notices of motion were given:

Mr. Morin, Friday next, order of the House showing the number of persons who have visited the Queen Victoria Niagara Falls Park during the year 1888, also showing the number of persons who have visited the Queen Victoria Niagara Falls Park during the year 1888, also showing the number who have paid for admission to the Islands in the said park, giving the amount of revenue derived from that source. Also showing the amount paid as expenses for the management of said park, giving the names of the officers and the amount paid to each. Also giving a statement of the money still on hand derived from the sale of lands. Also, the amount of interest paid and from what source.

CAYUGA, Jan. 31.—Complete returns from every polling place in the county give Mr. J. W. Colter (Lib.) a majority of 30 over Dr. W. H. Montague (Con.). A Few Cars Run Yesferday Under Police b Protection—Ritotous Strikers.

New York, Jan. 30.—On the Secondasenue line no attempt was made to run cars to-day. Soon after I O'clock 400 strikers assembled on Broadway between 14th and 45th-street and after upsetting several wagons on the tracks, one of which was loaded with lard, they tore up the switch plates and made off, in the upper part of Sixth-avenue they tore up flagstones and laid them on the tracks. The State Railroad Commissioners were in session to-day hearing the grigvances of the striking employes.

State Railroad Commissioners were in session to-day hearing the grigvances of the striking employes.

The drand-street line ran several cars. They were greeted with hoots and yells and sometimes with showers of stones. Two patrol wagons filled with police were kept going up and down-rhe-rottle so as to keep an open passage. Many of the strikers were under the influence of Hquor. Several of the strikers this morning told the paymaster of the Dry Dock line that the Grandstreet cars must stop running even if some of the unionists lost their lives in attempting to make them.

The Forty-second and Grand-street ferry line ran two cars until 1 p.m. The first was under police protection but was badly used up, every window being broken. It was said this afternoon that the horse shoers of the Sixth-avenue line had been ordered out. The Forth-avenue road wasrunning 17 cars this afternoon.

Mammitten Neites

Hamilton, Jan. 30.—Louis Slaght, a brakeman on the Northern and Northwestern division, G.T.R., met with a serious accident last night. At about 10.30 o'clock he left the yards on a special freight, bound north, Of course, his duty took him on top of the box cars, and he was on one of these as the train passed under the Barton-street bridge. He either did not know he was so near the bridge or else had forgotten about it; at any rate he was struck and fell. The train was not going rapidly enough to throw him very violently, or the chances are that he would have been knocked to the ground and killed. As it was, he received a severe out upon the head, a scalp wound being the result, and a broken nose. His face was also cut.

A middle-aged man named John Shea arrived at the Suart-street station, G.T.R., last night with both feet frozen: He said that he had walked from near Montreal to look for work in Hamilton, having heard that there was work for any number of men on the sewers or at the quarries. An officer of the Brantford police arrived in the city yesterday with a magistrate's warrant for the arrest of a man named Morris Bloom. Detective Davis was detailed to hunt up Bloom and shortly afterwards arrested him at No. 13 Victoriastreet, where he carries on a small tailoring business. The warrant charges Bloom with having, on Jan. 7, feloniously received certain goods with intent to defraud the creditors of the estate of Isaac Simon, of which E. F. Myers of Hamilton is trustee. Mr. Simon failed some time ago and compromised with his creditors at 40 cents on the dollar. His liabilities were $16,000 and his assets $9,000. Simon caused the warrant to be issued. Col. Denison endorsed the warrant and Bloom left with the officer on the neon train.

A blacksmith's helper named Albert Plews was seriously assaulted by a former employer named Joseph H. Robinson on Douro-street Tuesday night. It appears that a few days ago Robinson discharged Plews. Tuesday evening he called at Robinson's house and refused to leave when requested. A souffle ensued, in the course of which Robinson hit his adversary over the head with an iron bar, inflicting a serious wound, which Robinson pleaded yesterday was cone in self-defence and was remanded. In the bonspiel yesterday the city clubs defeated All Ontario by five shots.

The detectives made a great haul yesterday of suspected burglars. About 3 o'clock yesterday morning Policeman Muirhead, while on beat on Queen-street west, gave chase to three men whom he saw going up Soho-street carrying parcels. They dived into a lane and succeeded in getting away after throwing down their burdens, which the officer picked up and brought to St. Andrew's Market Station. Late in the day A. A. McKay & Co., Queen-street west, reported to Inspector Stark that their premises had benn entered on the previous night and several hundred dollars worth of goods carried away. On being shown the contents of the parcels Mr. McKay identified them as the articles carried off from his store. The case was given into the hands of Detective Davis and acting Detective Veirney. In less than two hours' they had behind the bars at Headquarters six men whom they believed had a hand in the raid. They gave their names as John Downs, 50 Camden-street; William Barton, 357 Adelaide-street west; Joseph Murphy, 331 Adelaide-street west; Joseph Murphy, 331 Adelaide-street west. There is a second charge of burgary against Nagle. On Tuesday night Smellie & Co.'s store, Queenstreet west, was robbed of four pairs of pants and he was found to be wearing one of them.

HUNG AND SHOT HIMSELF.

A Prespective Bridegreem Teek His Life
on the Eve of Wedleck.

New York, Jan. 31. Phillp Hoffman, employed by Otto Mueller, a New Brighton, S.I., butcher, committed suicide yesterday by hanging and shooting himself in the head. No motive for the act is known and the mystery is deepened by the fact that Hoffman, who was but 24. years old, was engaged to be married to a young lady to whom he seemed to be much devoted.

The young man seemed untroubled when during the morning he made the rounds of his employer's customers. After returning to the shop he was reprimanded by the butcher for some breach of duty. Mr.
Mueller noticed that when Hoffman started to the stable to put up the horse he seemed gloomy. As the young man did not come to dinner, Butcher Mueller sent Patrick Cook, one of his workmen, to the stable to see what delayed him.
Cook found Hoffman suspended by the neck from a beam and blood flowing from a wound in his right temple. A large revolver lay on the floor where the suicide had dropped it. He had made a noose of a bridle rein and fastened one end to the beam. Then standing on a chair he had fired a bullet into his head and toppled off. He was breathing "hen found, but died shortly after being cut down. His mouth was muffled lira handkerchief, which he had tied closely about his face presumably fer the purpose of preventing any groan or pain from betraying his attempt and defeating it.

Hoffman's fiancee was Miss Maggie
Dolan, a young cousin of County Clerk Cornelius Hart, of Staten Island. The ceremony was to have been performed last Sunday, but as Miss Dolan is a Catholic the priest refused to marry her to Hoffman, who is a Protestant, without a dispensation. This they agreed to procure, and to-day was 'fixed as the day for the wedding. Hoffman seemed much disappointed with the propartions eagerly. The pair intended going to housekeeping immediately and had purchased the furniture and articles necessary, visiting the city together several times for that purpose. Some persona and Got Inte Jail at Home.

ITHACA, N.Y., Jan. 31.—The arrest of John Foote of this city for robbing the mail bag at Caroline last Saturday has brought out the story of his strange career. He is 22 years old and the only son of W. P. Foote, a florist of this city. Eighteen months ago he threw up a clerkship in a dry goods store here and spent the Summer cruising around the lake in a steamyacht which he had purchased. Later he went to work in Sherwood's farnishing-store, and there was accused of many thefts. After getting out of this scrape last spring he married a notorious woman, took her to Binghamton on their wedding tour, and the next day robbed her, it is alleged, of several hundred dollars. With this money Foote went to Cuba, where he was attacked by "yellow fever. When he recovered his clothes had been destroyed and his money appropriated by the authorities. He wandered around for somamonths, obtained work as cabin boy on a steamer and thus got back to New York. He tramped to Poughkeepsle, where he applied for work on the bridge over the Hudson. A man was wanted to paint a particularly dangerous part of the, structure. Foote said he didn't care what became of him, so he was put in a sling and successfully finished the work. Next he walked to Rochester, where he was engaged by a farmer to cut 30 acres of corn at $1 an acre.

Last Thanksgiving a man wearing a regged, greasy coat, old overalis and hobmsiled brogans entered the store at Caroline. It was Foote. The wanderer was kindly received and given employment. Everything went well until a month ago, when large sums were missed from the mails. Decoy letters were sent and last Saturday night Deputy Marshal Norton arrested Foote just after he had stolen a registered letter containing $150. Foote denied having any recollection of the matter, and his friends think he may be insane. Some of the stolen money was discovered in a paper hidden in a jaryof preserves.

Mr. Wm. Collins thought the day for ar. w.m. collins thought the day for township shows had gone by, except in isolated districts. The prizes were too in-significant to make a good show. He thought any man should know better than to act as judge in his own municipality. He advo-cated the Central Exhibition. Mr. G. J. Galvin said there would always

Mr. H. Davidson said that in a dry season manure had a tendency to keep the ground hot and open and kill the clover and contain information by comparison.

Mr. Galvin held that Lakefield exhibited a fixed acted as the Central and Says as as good stock as the Central, and gave as perience which showed that the roots of clover were better than a green crop plowed in. He agreed with Mr. Davidson rehe was a small farmer and differed from Mr. Galvin, as he had had better success a the Central than at the township shows. Mr. Pope favored the abolition of town ship shows and the holding of large Centrals that would offer better prizes The judges, he held, acted impartially. Mr. Galvin spoke against centralizing the shows, and said that when the town the shows, and said that when the town-ship shows were abolished they would find that they would abolish a great deal of good which these shows were doing.

The question of County Council reform

Mr. M, SANDERSON said there could be right sow by the ear. He condemned the present school system of "stuffing."

Mr. Birdsall said that home surroundpayers they had a reeve and deputy reeve. payers they had a reeve and deputy reeve. Some of the poorer townships, wherein the rate was a mere nothing, had as much a and colleges they trained boys for a different direction to farming, and they should not be surprised if they turned that the valuation should from farming.

TOWNSHIP SHOWS.

Mr. Freed Davidson read a paper on "Shall we Abolish Township Shows." The object of these shows he said was to send a representative. The difficulty of the difficulty of the shows he said was to send a representative. The difficulty of the shows he said was to send a representative. would be to adjust the representation if they reduced the number of representa-tives. The number could be reduced by raising the standard for giving the town-ship a deputy reeve. Mr. G. STRY-MET agreed that the rep-resentatives of the poorer townships were not so careful re varding the expenditure, but the difficulty was to re-adjust the mat-ter satisfactorily.

tersatisfactorily.

AIT. SANDERSON said that by the law Smith paid $1,877 for bridges, although it had not a bridge. This was one of the reasons why the basis of representation should be changed. He thought that the equalization of the axessment should be done by some independent authority and burden.

Mr. Sanderson said that the matter of bridges should also be considered. In cases of villages like Bobcaygeon and Hastings, the county that received the money from them should build the bridges.

Mr. Ingram said the better way would be to get the Government to build bridges over rivers like the Trent.

Mr. G. J. Galvin thought that County Councils and Legislatures should be reducted.

Mr. Jas. Moore said, if the County Councils should be reduced, why not, reduce the number in Township Councils also? He did not agree, with the proposed change of the basis of representation.

A resolution favoring the reduction in the number of members in County Councils and a consequent reduction in the expense was put and carried.

Ly FERGUS W. HUME. CHAPTER XXVIII.

According to the copy books of our youth, procrastination is the thief of time," and, pertainly, Brian found that the remark was a true one. He had been nearly a week in town, yet could not make up his mind to go town, yet could not make up his mind to go and see Calton, and though morning after morning he set out with the determination to go straight to Chancery lane, yet he never arrived there. He had gone back to his ledgings in East Melbourne, and passed his time either in the house or in taking long walks in the garden, or along the banks of the muddy Yarra. When he did go into town, on housess connected with taking long, walks in the garden, or along the banks of the muddy Yarra. When he did go into town, on business connected with the sale of his station, he drove there and back in a hansom, for he had a curious shrinking against seeing any of his friends. As soon as his station was sold, and he married to Madge, he determined to leave Australia, and never set foot on it again. But until he could leave the place he saw no one, nor mixed with his former friends, so great was his dread at being stared at. Mrs. Sampson, who had welcomed him back with shrill exclamations of delight, was loud in her expressions of disapproval as to the way he was shutting himself up.

"Your cyes bein" ollow," said the sympathizing cricket, "it is natiral as it's want of air, which my usband's uncle, being a druggist an' well to do in Collingwood, ses as 'ow a want of ox-eye-gent, being a French name, as 'e called the atmispeare, were fearful for pullin' people down, an' makin' em go off their food, which you hardly eats anythin', an' not bein' a butterfly it's expected as your appetite would be larger."

an not boin a otterny its expected as your appetite would be larger."

"Oh; I'm all right," said Brian, absently, lighting a cigarette and only half listening to his landlady's garrulous chatter; "but if any one calls tell them I'm not in. I don't any one calls tell them 1'm not in. I don't want to be bothered by visitors."

"Bein' as wise a thing as Solomon ever said," answered Mrs. Sampson, energetically, "which no doubt 'e was in good 'ealth when seein' the queen of Sheber, as is necessary when any one calls, and not feeln' disposed to speak, which I'm often that way myself on occasions, my sperits bein' low, as I've to speak, which I'm often that way myself on occasions, my sperits bein' low, as I've 'eard tell soder water' ave that effect on 'em which you takes it with a dash of brandy, tho' to be sure that might be the cause of your want of life, and—drat that bell," she finished, hurrying out of the room. egivin' way under me thro' bein' over-worked."

Meanwhile Brian sat and smoked content edly, much relieved by the departure of Mrs. Sampson, with her constant chatter; but he soon heard her mount the stairs again, and she entered the room with a teleg she handed to her lodger.

she handed to her lodger.
"Opin" it don't contain bad noose," she said, as she retreated to the door again, Tearing open the red marked envelope, it turned out to be from Madge, saying that, they had come have a lower and a saying that.

"So he is there," said the young man-aloud; "and I shall have to meet him and shake hands with him, knowing all the time what he is. If it were not for Madge Fd leave this cursed place at once, but after the way the most by me in my trouble I should be a coward if I did so."

It was as Madge had predicted-her father It was as Madge had predicted—her father was unable to stay long in one place, and, had come back to Melbourne a week after. Brian had arrived. The pleasant party at the station was broken up, and, like the graves, of a household, the guests were scattered far and wide. Paterson had left for New Zealand en route for the wonders of the Hot lakes and the old colonist was about to start. lakes, and the old colonist was about to start lakes, and the old colonist was about to start for England in order to refresh his boyish memories. Mr. and Mrs. Rolleston had come back to Melbourne, where the wretched Telix was compelled once more to plung into poli-tics, and Dr. Chinston had resumed his usual was compelled once more to plunge into politics, and Dr. Chinston had resumed his usual routine of fees and patients.

On receiving Madge's telegram, Brian determined to go down in the evening, but not to dinner, so he sent a reply to Madge to that effect. He did not want to meet Mark Frettlby, but did not, of course, tell this to Madge, so she had her dinner by herself, as her father had gone in to his club, and the time of his return was uncertain. After dinner she wrapped a light cloak round her and went out on to the veranda to wait for her lover. The garden looked charming in the moonlight, with the black, dense cypress trees standing up against the sky and the great fountain splashing cool and silvery. There was a heavily foliaged oak just by the gate, and she strolled down the path and stood under it in the shadow, listening to the whisper and rustle of its multitudinous leaves. It is curious the unearthly glamour which moonlight seems to throw over everything, and though Madge knew every flower, tree and shrub in the garden, yet they all looked weird and fantastical in the cold, white light. She went up to the fountain, and seating herself on the edge, amused herself by dipping her hand into the chilly water and letting it fall, like silver rain, back into the basin. While thus engaged she heard the iron gate open and shut with a clash, and springing to her feet saw a gentleman coming up the path in a light coat and soft wideawake hat.

"Oh, it's you at last, Brianf' she water.

ing Brian, I can't say," answered

"Indeed?"
"Yes; in that hat and coat I couldn't tell the difference in the moonlight."
"Oh," said her father, with a laugh, pushing his hat back, "moonlight is necessary to complete the gred!. I grappes?"

Toronto, Feb. 1. —The man Edward Fletcher arrested by Sheriff's officer McCormack on Wednesday night, proves to be the secretary and treasurer of the Indianapolis, Illinois and Iowa Railway. Fletcher had evidently visited Toronto several times, and for no other purpose than just to see alady, a Mrs. Rice. Her husband; however, got hold of a clue and watched proceedings. He found that when he left town Fletcher came 1500 miles and kept his wife company at the principal hotels. Mr. Rice gathered unbounded evidence of this and sues Fletcher for alienating his wife's affections, claiming $20,000 damages. At the assizes yesterday, Judge MacMahon heard the case and held Fletcher at $10,000 bail.

Tragic Fate of Rev. Father Coraya of Strathroy—His Beath Instantanceus.

STRATHROY, Jan. 31.—Shortly after 1 o'clock to day Rev. Father Cornyn was found by his housekeeper shot through the head in his own study. Father Cornyn has been unwell for some time and his medical attendant, Dr. Bettridge, had been in constant attendance, in fact Dr. Bettridge had just left him at 1 o'clock and Father Cornyn had seen him to the door.

A few minutes after the housekeeper was startled by a loud report, and thinking the stove had fallen over went up to his study, where she found Father Cornyn with a gun-shot wound through his head, the gun lying near his body. Death must have been instantancous, as the charge had entered near the chin and passed out near the top of his head and entered the ceiling above.

PARIS, Jan, 31.—In the Chamber of Deputies to-day M. Jouvencal interpellated the Government regarding the measures it intended to take to arrest the progress of Boulangism. The speaker attributed the change in public opinion chiefly to the insults daily heaped upon the Government and to the indifference of the ministers toward their revilers. The Bibberty of the press and liberty of speech had degenerated into license. The Government ought to defend itself from slanderers.

Premier Floquet asked leave to introduce a bill re-establishing the scrutin d'arrondissement system of election.

Deputy d'Ornano, a Bonapartist, exclaimed: "The only possible issue is the dissolution of the Chamber!"

M. Cazeaux of the Right asked leave to speak on a matter of urgency. The President refused permission. Fresh protests from the Right led to great confusion. The President called the members to order and decided that the House must haar M. Floquet.

M. Floquet held that the establishment of the scrutin d'arrondissement system would in no way assail universal suffrage.

The German officials have given notice that all vessels arriving there will be searched for articles contraband of war. They have suppressed The Samoan Times. A passenger on the British steamer Wainui, which visited Matsafa's camp, was placed under arrest, but was subsequently released in compliance with a demand of the British consul. A proclamation has been issued placing the Apia police force under German control. Matsafa's followers number 6000. They are strongly entrenched, and other Samoans are rapidly joining them. Hen. John Morrison Gibson Re-elected for Mamilton by Acclamation.

Hamilton, Jan. 31.—The knowledge that there was to be no opposition to the election of Hon. J. M. Gibson detracted so much from the interest in the nomination that only about fifteen persons gathered on the court house steps at 11 o'clock. This number was gradually augmented, until a pretty fair representation was present before the close of the proceedings.

Mr. T. H. Macpherson nominated John Morrison Gibson as candidate for member of the Ontario Legislature. The considerate course adopted by Hon. Mr. Gibson's political opponents in this instance relieved them of the charge made by John Bright that the Conservative party was a stupid party.

them of the charge made by John Bright that the Conservative party was a stupid party.

B. E. Charlton, in seconding the nomination, said that although the Conservatives hever have admitted heretofore that Oliver Mowat did a commendable public action, they acknowledge he has in this instance done something praiseworthy.

Hon. J. M. Oilson said he had not come with the intention of making a set speech, because he did not anticipate a large attendance or any excitement over the matter. It would be indeed ungrateful on his part if he did not express how pleased he felt at the evidences of kindly feeling shown him by citizens of both political parties. In a city like Hamilton, where the opposing political camps are nearly of equal strength—where the Conservatives retain from year to year their hold upon the Dominion House and the Reformers upon the Ontario House—there is all the more reason for grateful feeling that a decision was arrived at to permit this election to pass off in a harmonious manner. It was a long time since Hamilton, and been the home of a cabinet minister. With the exception of a brief, term of a few months when the late Hon. Isaac Buchanan held a position, the late Sir Allan McNabb was the only representative in the Ministry from this city. Of course it was taken for granted that he was now in a position to give everyone needing one a situation, and applications were pouring in rapidly. He had no doubt that the city members in the Ottawa House had plenty of that sort of experience, and might wish him to take over what surplus they could not attend to [Laughter.]

A. T. Wood—whom it was the intention to have as seconder of the nomination, but who did not arrive in time—was then called upon and made a few remarks of a complimentary nature.

at a Serious Moment.

Said Capt. Henry Bush, the well known artist, who was a topographical engineer on the staff of Gen. Rosecrans in the Army of the Cumberland to a reporter:

"It was in the autumn of 1861," continued the old topographical engineer, "at Louisville where I first saw the woman who was afterward to come into my life in the most unexpected way. I was then an officer in the First Ohio cavalry, and the colonel of the regiment, the adjutant and myself one night attended the theatre in which Pauline Cushman was playing an engagement. Buring the performance and near the close the actress came down to the footlights and drank a toast to Jeff Davis. The act was a foolhardy one, but emineutly characteristic of Cushman. The result was just about what might have been expected, considering that the house was more than half full of soldiers. "The insult was instantly resented and a tremendous uproar and row followed. might have been expected, considering that the house was more than half full of soldiers.

"The insult was instantly resented and a tremendous uproar and row followed. More than a score of men made a rush for the stage, and the entire audience was up and yelling. Our party were in a box, and took in the situation at a glance. The soldiers were fursious, and the sex of the actress would not have saved her from violence, had we not jumped upon the stage to her rescue. While the colonel and adjutant were endeavoring to quiet the angry, surging mob with speeches, I threw a cloak over Miss Cushman, and hurrying to the stage door, bundled her into a waiting hack and had her safe in the Louisville hotel before the crowd knew she was out of the theatre. Of course the woman was pretty badly scared, and after it was all over realized keenly the peril her foolish act brought her. She was profuse in her thanks for the service rendered her, and promised, as long as I would listen, that she would repay the obligation, it mattered not when or where the opportunity offered.

"The next morning we were ordered to the front, and I saw nothing more of Pauline Cushman, although I often heard she had turned Confederate spy, and that she was serving with the Confederate forces, with whom we were almost daily battling. After the engagement at Stone River. Gen. Ross-serving with the Confederate forces, with whom we were almost daily battling. After the engagement at Stone River, Gen. Rose-crans, to whose staff I had been assigned, made headquarters at Winchester, Tenn. We occupied the Mary Sharp college building for some time, during which I contracted typhoff fever, and became so ill that I was removed to a boarding house kept by a man by the fever, and became soil that I was removed to a boarding house kept by a man by the name of Day, which was just across the name of Day, which was just across the street from my old quarters. I had scarcely begun convalescing when the army was ordered forward, the objective point being Chicamauga. I was still too sick to go with the staff, but if I remained in Winchester the danger of being gobbled by Confederate guerrillas was great, as the woods surrounding the town were full of them, only awaiting the onward movement of the Union troops to sweep down upon the village and devastate it, but there was no help for it. In the opinion of the surgeon, I was still too weak to be removed in an ambulance, and it was arranged that I was to stay with old man Day and his wife until I was stronger, when it was understood a conveyance would be sent for me.

"About 5 o'clock in the evening, just after the last detachment had marched past my window, I arose from my bed, dressed myself in a new suit of clothes, wrapped up in tissue paper what money I had in my possession, something over $1,800 which I had received a few days before the fever attacked me for a painting I had made of the charge of the First Ohio cavalry at Stone river, and prepared to follow the army, if I could find a conveyance. The exertion of dressing, however, was too much for me, and I was forced to again lie down upon the bed. I lay there resting for, perhaps, an hour, when just about 6 o'clock Mrs. Day came into my room and told me that Dick McCann's guerrillas—the same who murdered Gen. McCook—were approaching the town, and they would, doubtless, search every house to see if any sick or wounded 'Yankees' had been left behind. This was cheering intelligence but I could not get away, and I had about made up my mind to submit to what seemed inevitable—capture—but I didn't want the rascals to get my money so I gave my cash all but $100 to Mrs. Day, and told her to keep it. It had gotten on to near 9 o'clock, and while tea was being prepared I lay down in my room, the door of which opened in a hall leading to the street. In my exhausted condition I was not long in relapsing into an unconscious state, from which I was suddenly aroused by some one knocking on my door.
"I approached the door and demanded why repty, in a woman's voice. This answer only confirmed me in the belief that I had been trapped, and that my betrayer was, possibly, some woman who knew I had the to the teat the state.

as circumstances would permit: It know no woman who has any business with me, so get away from that door or I will shoot through it. To this threat the answer same: Friends and the conce and I have come to repay it. This I didn't believe, but I was too weak, to longer contend, and I opened the door, through which immediately came Miss Cushman. I recognized her instantly, although she was dressed in male attire and had her beautiful hair cut as close as that of a soldier. I grasped her hands with a flood of questions upon my lips, but she silenced all by saying: 'We have no time for talking now; you must come with me at once.'

"Strange as it may seem I had not a thought of treachery. I instinctively felt that she had come to save me from her friends and to place me into the hands of my own. I tottered to Mrs. Day's room, drank a cup of tea, got my money, all but a $100 bill I compiled her to keep, and dragged myself to the street door, in front of which an old fashioned carryall was standing. With the help of the driver Miss Cushman assisted me into the websile, and we were off, whither I neither knew nor cared; I was so near dead by this time that I wouldn't have flipped pennies for the chance of living. Miss Cushman held my head in her lap during that long, rough ride, which consumed the rest of the night, for just as day was breaking over the mountains we entered Deckard's Station. We drove at once to the depot, in front of which a train for Chattanooga was standing. A few hurried words to the official in charge from Miss Cushman secured me a seat in the cars, which were ready to start, and a moment afterward I was kissing the hand of the cars, which were ready to start, and a moment afterward I was kissing the hand of the cars, which were ready to start, and an ment afterward I never forget those who have dared and done for me, I care not what uniform they wear, and in the gray light of the morning she slipped away and I never saw her again. Fanama Canal Co. Litigation.

Paris, Jan. 31.—Two holders of Panama Canal shares applied to the courts yesterday for a summons against DeLeasops. They demand the dissolution of the present company and the appointment of a liquidator with power to make over to a new company the assets of the old concern. The court postponed its decision until Saturday. At the request of a holder of Panama Canal lottery bonds the count appointed a sequestrator of the sums received by the company from all future tassues of shares.

ENSILAGE.

Mr. R. E. BIRDSALL, of Asphodel, read an able paper on "Shall I Build a Silo?"
They had, he said, the only silo in the county, and though he would have preferred to have had the subject given to some one more able to deal with it, he would do the best he could to explain why every farmer should have one. Any farmer who wanted to take the lead in his profession should build a silo, and it was of great possible, as the less labor they had to do should build a silo, and it was of great to the best feed well and milk well, and it was of great to grow with the specific provided the second of the specific provided to the best he could to explain why every farmer should have one. Any farmer who wanted to take the lead in his profession should build a silo, and it was of great they would milk well, and they would not pay then it would not pay at all. He recommended plenty of mangolds and turnips. For growing roots he put manure on in the winter. He harrowed in the spring, spread the manure and drilled up. He liked to put in the seed as soon as ploughed. Mangolds should be sown middling thick. Turnips should be a foot or fifteen inches apart. One winter they fed orm all winter and the cows never looked better. Cows should be kept as quiet as possible, as the less labor they had to do the best recommended plenty of mangolds and turnips. For growing roots he put manure on in the winter. He harrowed in the spring, spread the manure and drilled up. He liked to put in the seed as soon as ploughed. Any farmer who wanted to take the lead in his profession should build a silo, and it was of great advantage to a man with a small farm. The old-fashioned silo built of stone, plastered with Portland cement and heavily weighted, was giving way to the cheaper one built of wood. By a silo the dairyman could have green food for his cattle the year round and could increase his milk production from 3,000 to 6,000 to 7,000 pounds a year, and the quantity of ensilage was only limited by the size of his silo. The stock raiser should have one so as to give all his stock green food in the winter. They all knew that stock did better on green food than on dry. The farmer who the best he could to explain why every fargreen food than on dry. The farmer who did mixed farming should have one, because ensilage was not only good feed for colts. It tended to keep their bowels regular and keep them growing. Sheep and pless were also very fond of ensilage and linearly sources and only knew it to choke in one of another that he had by the manage is a manage of miles that he had by the manage is a manage in a manage in the manage. Again, it was one of the cheapest of foods.

He put it in ensliage this year for $1.75 at ton counting rent, taxes, etc., but he thought they could put it in next year for $1.00 a ton. The enormous quantity that could be grown to the acre and the small space required to store it in, the time it required the most attention, the time of year that it had to be harvested being after and before the busy grain harvest—all these pointed to the fact that every farmer should have a silo. The land for corn, for enslinge pur-poses, should be well manured and was bet-ter for being near the barn. They sowed five varieties, mammoth sweet corn, ensilage or red cob corn, western, Indian corn and sorghum. The southern sweet corn that was sown in drills with a seed drill, at the rate of one bushel to the acre, and cultivated three times, turned out at the rate of 25 tons to the acre. The rink is now open for skating and curling. Ice in best of order. Tickets procurable from caretaker at the rink.

He did not like the Indian corn as well as the other for ensliaging purposes. The sugar cane was sown in drills and was a splendid crop, and if it turned out well from the silo they would sow considerable 39,000. Wilson & Morrson, Agents.

where are your eyes, Puss, when you take an old man like me for your gay young Lochinvar?

"Well, really, papa," answered Madge, deprecatingly, "you do look so like him in that coat and hat that I coad not tell the difference till you spoke."

"Nonsense, child," said Frettlby, roughly, "you are fanciful." And turning on his heel he walked rapidly toward the house, leaving Madge staring after him in astonishment, as well she might, for her father had never spoken to her so roughly before. Wondering at the cause of his sudden anger, she stood spellbound until there came a stee behind her and a soft, low whistle. She turned with a scream and saw Brian smilling at her.

"Oh, it's you," she said, with a pout, as he caught her in his arms and kissed her.

"Only me," said Brian, ungrammatically; "disappointing, ism't, it?"

"Oh, fearfully," answered the girl, with a gay laugh, as arm in arm they walked towards the house. "But do you know I made such a curious mistake just now; I thought papa was you."

"How strange," said Brian, absently, for indeed he was admiring her charming face, which looked so pure and sweet in the moonlight.

"Yes, wasn't it?" she replied. "He had on which looked so pure and sweet in the moonlight.

"Yes, wasn't it?" she replied. "He had on a light coat and a soft hat, just like you wear sometimes, and as you are both the same height, I took you for one another."

Brian did not answer, but there was a cold feeling at his heart as he saw a possibility of his worst suspicions being confirmed, for just at that moment there came into his mind the curious coincidence of the man who got into the hansom cab being dressed the same as he was. What if—"nonsense," he said aloud, rounsing himself out of the train of thought the resemblance had suggested.

"I'm sure it isn't," said Madge, who had

"I'm sure it isn't," said Madge, who had been talking about something else for the last five minutes. "You are a very rude young man."
"I beg your pardon," said Brian, waking up. "You were saying"— "That the horse is the most noble of all animals. Exactly."
"I don't understand"—began Brian, rather puzzled.

"I bee your pardon," said Brian, waking up. "You were saying"—
"That the horse is the most noble of all animals. Exactly."
"I'don's understand"—began Brian, rather puzzled.
"Of course you don't," interrupted Madge, petulantly; "considering I've been wasting my eloquence on a deaf man for the last ten minutee, and very likely lame as well as deaf." And to prove the truth of the remark, she ran up the path with Brian after fier. He had a long chase of it, for Madge was nimble and better acquainted with the garden than he was, but at last he caught the fust as she was running up the steps into the house, and then—history repeats itself.
They went into the drawing room and found that Mr. Frettly had gone up to his study, and did not want to be disturbed.
"Xay: "A day to be piece, int before, the struck a note, brian took both, her hands prisoners.
"Madge," he said gravely, as she turned

"I don't know, miss," he answered; "he said he wanted to see Mr. Frettiby particularly, no I took him up to the study."

"But I thought that papa said he was not to be disturbed?"

"Yes, miss, but the gentleman had an appointment with him?

Let to themselves, Madgo began playing Waldteufel's last new valse, a dreamy, haunting melody, with a touch of sadness in it, and Brian, lying lazily on the sofa, listened. Then she sang a gay little French song about love and a butterfly, with a mocking refrain, which made Brian laugh.

Madgo suddenly stopped, as she heard a loud cry, evidently proceeding from her father's study. Recollecting Dr. Chinston's warning, she ram out of the room and upstairs, leaving Brian rather puzzled by her unceremonious departure, for though he had heard the cry, yet he did not attach much importance to it.

Madge knocked at the study door, and then she tried to open it, but it was locked.

is misery. Indigestion is a foe to good nature.

The human digestive apparatus is one of the most complicated and wonderful things in existence. It is easily put out of order. Greasy food, tough food, sloppy food, bad cookery, mental worry, late hours, irregular habits, and many other things which ought not to be, have made the American people a nation of dyspepties.

But Green's August Flower has done a wonderful work in reforming this sad business and making the American people so healthy that they can enjoy their meals and be happy.

BLUNDERS AT THE ALTAR. AMUSING HAPPENINGS AT THE MAR RIAGE SERVICE.

A Preacher Relates His Experience-Th Ceremony from First to Last Is Full of Pitfalls for the Untrained - The Old Folks Made a Mistake.

Some ludicrous errors committed by agitated and absent minded pairs as they stood before the altar are related by a preacher in Chambers' Journal:

Chambers' Journal:
Timothy Duggan was a stevedore, perhaps aix feet two in height and proportionately broad. He appeared as a bridegroom; the bride was a charming young person of tender years. All went well until the moment came for Timothy and his bride to give their troth to each other in the prescribed manner.
"Say after me," said I to Timothy, "I, Timothy"—

Timothy"—
There was no response.
"Say after me," repeated the parson, "I, Timothy was still silent, a puzzled look creeping over his broad face.
"Say after me," said I for the third time, with, perhaps, a shade of annovance.
"After you, sir," responded Timothy, with the politest possible duck of his bullet head.
But this indifference to the rubric is so great that upon the injunction, "Place the ring on the third finger," I have more than once seen the bridegroom clap it upon the not even a samy Y will. The situation was becoming most embarrassing, when the solitary bridemaid—his sister—casually observed: "E's a little and of 'earing, sir." The man was stone deaf; yet they had not thought it necessary to tell the parson. If the bridegroom understood not a word of the service, what did it matter? SMOKE TWISTING THE RESPONSE what did it matter?

TWISTING THE RESPONSES.

But the marriage service from first to last is full of pitfalls for the unlearned man. In some cases it becomes painfully clear that the contracting parties recognize but few of the words they are bidden to say, and merely initiate the sound with such accuracy as their imperfect knowledge will permit. The words "to have and to hold" ought to be simple enough, but, as a matter of fact, they are the subjects of some astounding blunders. I remember one bridgeroom who had brought a very charming young bride to church, and perhaps regarded her as a thing of. beauty to be in his home a Joy forever, rendering "to have and to hold" as "to' have and beheld," Another, who possibly had some cause to dread the fate of Mr. Candle, struck out an entirely new version, and faithfully promised "to have and to be told." "To love and to cherish" is another frightful stumbling block. "To love and be cherries" was the nearest to the original of many variations popular among the males of that parish. The brides were happy with the familiar rendering, "to love cherries and to bay." "God's holy ordinance" tripped up many. "Holy orders" was convenient, and perhaps conveyed the most meaning. "Plight thee my troth" and "give thee my troth" were, I imagine, words of foreign sound, and I well remember one young person, who was wedding a most villatinous looking fellow, changing her sentiment into "thereto I give the my throat." There was, perhaps, an unconscious prophecy wrapped up in that promise.

The words accompanying the delivery of the ring are, as everybody knows, the subject of some characteristic blunders. I never heard some of the more elaborate distortions credited to countrymen, but our people nobly distinguished themselves over the clause "with all my worldly gooks Lithes." J. W CROSBY'S It was the work of an instant to rush around and stop the service. But when the people were dragged asunder, Jones, the elder, in reply to an indignant inquiry as to what he meant by it, coolly replied: "Well, he," (indicating the penitent clerk with a jerk of his grimy thumb) "he told us to come this way." That couple had been charged by mention of "the dreadful day of judgment, when the secrets of all hearts shall be d'sclosed," to say whether they knew any impediment why they might not lawfully be joined together in matrimony; and they heard it silence. So did the wife of the one and the husband of the other. I have often wondered how far they would have gone without remonstrance. Perhaps the demand for a ring would have precipitated the crisis.

TRADE REPORTED DISAPPOINTINGLY

Experis—Strike Statistics.

New York, Feb. 1.—Special telegrams to Bradstreet's report general trade of moderate volume and except at a few points disappointingly quiet. The more encouraging reports come from Kanass City, where there has been a marked improvement, particularly in dry goods and boots and shoes, in lumber and to some extent in hardware. At St. Chicago and St. Paul there are some gains. At St. Joseph there has been more activity and prospects for spring good. There is a fair volume of merchandses moving at Boston but no unusual activity. Elsewhere business is less active, St. Louis reporting it to be only "holding its own." At that city, however, some 32,000 tons of pig iron have been sold, groceries, hardware and drugs being relatively most active. The unseasonable weather is complained of at New York, Philadelphia, Pittsburg, Detroit, Chicago and Galveston, and a share of the backward trade is reported due to it. The open winter depresses trade in stoves, coal, groceries and rubber at New York city, but renders the beliding trade very active, with a demand 50 per cent. in excess of the first month in 1888. Trade in the first four lines is quiet or dull as are also drugs, lumber, leaf tobacco, raw wool, leather and hardware. Jobbers is leaf tobacco, cigars, lumber, prints, jewelry and silk goods report trade fair to active.

Speculation shows a marked revival of activity and strength on the apparent success of western railways in forming an agreement, and indications that the South Pennsylvania will no longer be a latent cause of trunk line dissatisfaction. The demand for bonds has been extraordinary and extended to the better class of stocks. Indications favor an increase of public interest in the stock market. Money at New, York is easy but hardened a shade at the close of the week, call loans 1½ to 2 per cent. the Capitalists The Orfendant Remanded Until Next Friday.

BROCKVILLE, Feb. 1.—The arrest of Music Dealer A. C. J. Kaufman for forgery has caused a great sensation here. The extent of his forgeries is not known, but they are supposed to be in the neighborhood of $100,000. The facts go to show that he has been practising his scheme for a number $100,000. The facts go to show that he has been practising his scheme for a number of years.

His method was to approach a moneylender and inform him he was about to sell an instrument on the instalment plan and having only limited means ask the capitalist would he carry the paper if allowed a good percentage. Kaufman looked after the paper himself, the principals never appearing in the matter. As soon as a note fell due he was on hand to take it up, but presented other paper in payment instead of cash. As time went on he became bolder and began making duplicates of the notes and disposing of them to different parties, three and even five individuals having a note of the same name and amount.

The forgery upon which he was detected was a note for $250, supposed to have been drawn by a well-known commercial man of this town. By accident the purchuser of the note discovered it to be a forgery, and on demanding a settlement from Kaufman it leaked out that he was in difficulty, and others began to look after their securities and discovered that the whole thing was a huge swindle.

Among the losers are T. A. & W. T. McCullough, W. H. Comstock, G. T. Fulford, P. McNamara, G. T. Mallory, D. B. Jones and D. Derbyshire of Brockville, P. Blanchard of Athens, J. Ross of Smith's Falls, a Montreal dealer and the Lansdowne Piano Company.

of the departments with the greatest despatch.

The interesting feature of yesterday's short session was the introduction of Hon. J. M. Gibson, the new Provincial Secretary. Hon. Mr. Mowat and Mr. Awrey marched him to the front, add he took his seat amidst the loud applause of both sides of the House.

Petitions were presented as follows:

The Beach Cut-off—A suit for Banages

Against the Grand Trunk.

Hamilton, Feb. 1.—This morning a number of the members of the finance committee and the boardo walks had a conference at the City Hall with John Bell, solicitor for the Grand Trunk Railway; Charles Stiff, superintendent, and J. Hobson, engineer. The construction of the beach cut-off line was the main topic discussed. The meeting adjourned with the understanding that Mr. Bell will represent the city's grevances to Mr. Hickson, and in case satisfactory agreements in return are made by the company, the city will probably consent to the building of the loop line.

A writ has been issued on behalf of rs. Peden, widow of Thos. Peden, who was killed in a railway accident which cocurred near the junction cut last winter, against the Grand Trunk Railway. The plaintiff claims $1000 damages for the loss of her husband's life.

Another new factory is to be erected in this city. The new business will be the drawing of fine wires, of brass, copper and all metals from which wire is made. The factory will be situated in Queen-street, near Napier-street, will employ a large number of hands and will be in operation early in the sparing.

The exports from the consular district of Hamilton to the United States during January were $49,290.

Receipts at the inland revenue office here during last month were $34,063, an increase of $277 over January, 1888.

James E. Wilkes, a laborer who worked for Mrs. Carroll and was arrested for being incane, was too violent to be brought up from the jail to-day, and the case was laid over until next Friday. Wilkes acted like a wild beast when Constables Watson and Gibba tried to arrest him. He bit at them savagely, and it was with considerable difficulty that they overpowered him.

The notable absentees up to date are Mr. Davies of Prince Edward Island and Sir Richard Cartwright from the Liberal benches and Dalton McCarthy of Toronto from the Government's side. Hon. Alexander Mackenzie was in his place yesterday and the old ex-Liberal leader received a welcome from Mr. Blake. There was one introduction yesterday: Mr. Edward Cochrane, the member-lect for East Northumberland, was introduced by Sir John Macdonald and Mr. Taylor.

There came very near not being a debate on the address at all this afternoon. Such a contingency happened in the Senate, which had to content itself by sitting for a few minutes and then all the members made for their gallery in the House of Commons and took in the passing show. Mr. Laurier complained that the members on his side of the House had not received copies of the Speech from the Throme and they were not disposed to discuss a document which they had not seen. Mr. Laurier made a similar complaint yesterday. Sir John Macdonald replied that this was certainly the result of an oversight and if the leader of the Opposition desired it he would adjourn the debate until Monday. Mr. Laurier replied that he would not must on such a cougse. Then Sir John turned hus head around and gave Mr. White the wink and the young member for Cardwell jumped to his feet amid the cheers of his friends and proceeded to the task of moving the address. Mr. White, like all the others that followed him, paid a clowing tribute to our present Governor-General, and it seems to be the unanimous opinion of the entire Parliament and of the people of the Capital, that Lord Stanley of Preston will make a happy ruler over the Dominion's destinied during his stay in Canada.

Mr. White spoke first on that well-worn theme—the fisheries dispute—and said thas if there had not been a settlement of the difficuation of the Franchise Act, the proposed subsi

They did not return to the drawing room, but went out on the veranda, where, after wrapping a cloak around Madge, Fitzgerald lit a cigarette. They sat down at the far end of the veranda, somewhat in the shadow, and could see the hall door wide open and a warm flood of mellow light pouring therefrom, and beyond the cold white moonshine. After about a quarter of an hour, Madgo's alarm about her father having somewhat subsided, they were chatting on indifferent subjects, when a man came out of the hall door and paused for a moment on the steps of the veranda. He was dressed in a rather fashionable suit of clothes, but, in spite of the heat of the night, had a thick white silk scarf round his throat.

"That's rather a cool individual," said "That's rather a cool individual," said Brian, removing his eigarette from between his teeth. "I wonder what—good God!" he cried, rising to his feet as the stranger turned round to look at the house and took off his hat for a moment. "Roger Moreland!"

The man started and looked quickly round into the dark shadow of the veranda where they were seated, then, putting on his hat, ran quickly down the path, and they heard the gate clang after him.

Madge felt a sudden fear at the expression on Brian's face, and revealed by a ray of moonlight streaming full on it.

"Who is Roger Moreland!" she asked, touching his arm, "Ah! I remember," with sudden horror; "Oliver Whyte's friend."

"Yes," in a boarse whisper, "and one of the witnesses at the trial."

CHAPTER XXIX.

13. CALSTON'S CURIOSITY IS SATISFIED.

There was not much sleep for Brian that night. He left Madge almost immediately, and went L. me, but did not go to bed. He felt too anxious and ill at ease to sleep, and passed the greater part of the night walking up and down his room, occupied with his own sad thoughts. He was wondering in his own mind as to what could be the meaning of Roger Moreland's visit to Mark Frettliby. All the evidence that he had given at the trial was that he had met Whyte, and had been drinking with him during the evening. Whyte then went out, and that was the last Moreland had seen of him. Now, the question was, "What did he go to see Mark Frettliby for!" He had no acquaintance with him, and yet he called by appointment. It is true he might have been in poverty, and the millionaire being well known as an extremely generous man, Moreland might have called on him to get money. But then the cry which Frettliby had given after the interview had lasted a short time proved that he had been startled. Madge had gone up stairs and found the door locked, her Lidger retrieved. airs and found the door looked, her latte went back to Mark Fretzlby and the visit of Roger Moreland.

"The net is closing round him," he mur-mured to himself. "I don't see how he can escape. Oh! Madge! Madge! If I could only spare you the bitterness of knowing what you must know, sooner or later, and that other unhappy girl—the sins of the fathers will be visited on the children—God help them."

He had his bath, and, after dressing him-

He had his bath, and, after dressing himself, went into his sitting room, where he had a cup of tea, which refreshed him considerably. Mrs. Sampson came crackling merrily upstairs with a letter, which proved to be from Madge, and tearing it hastily open, he read it.

"I cannot understand what is the matter with papa," she wrote. "Ever since that man Moreland left last night, he shut himself up in his study, and is writing there hour after hour. I went up this morning, but he would not let me in. He did not come down to breakfast, and I am getting seriously alarined. Come down to-morrow and see me, for I am anxious about his state of health, and I am sure that Moreland told him something which has upset him."

"Writing," said Brian, as he put the letter in his pocket, "what about, I wonder! Perhaps he is thinking of committing suicide! If so, I for one will not stop him. It is a horrible thing to do, but it would be acting for the best under the circumstances."

In spite of his determination to see Calton and tell all, Fitzgerald did not go near him that day. He felt Ill and weary, the want of sleep and mental worry telling on him fearfully, and he, looked ten years older than he did before the murder of Whyte.

He was having his breakfast at half-past 8, when he heard the sound of wheels, and immediately afterward a ring at the bell. He was that the door, while the owner was shortly afterward shown into the room. "Well, you are a nice fellow," cried Çal-

"Well, you are a nice fellow," cried Calton, after greetings were over. "Here I've been waiting for you with all the patience of Job, thinking you were still up country."

"You must have some breakfast with me," said Brian.

Calton having been supplied with what he required, prepared to talk business.

"I need bardly tell yon how anxious I am' to hear what you have to say," he said, leaning back in his chair, "but I may as well tell you that I am satisfied that I know half your secret algrands."

At 12 years of age, a bright, noble boy, that great sourge of childhood, scarlet fever, robbed him of those two most preclous faculties, speech and hearing. When I had secured the position of messenger at our local telegraph office, with the promise of opportunity to perfect myself in the art telegraphic, it was he who proposed and carried out his purpose to commence the study at the same time, and so diligently did he pursue his ommence the study at the same time, and so diligently did he pursue his abor that, mained as he was, he actured by constant practice what would seen in impossibility. winter that one day Coi. Tracy, agent in the chief industry of the town, entered the office and after a cheery greeting, announced the fact that $1,000 in greenbacks was expected on the evening express, to be used by him in paying the hands on the morrow. 'And, boys,' he added, 'as I suppose you don't care to keep that amount over night, perhaps you'd better 'deliver it to me at the house; then I'll lock it in my safe and be ready with the pay roll in the morning, for the men will be anxious for their scrip.' We were willing to please the colonel, and readily consented to do as he wished. During that afternoon a furious storm of snow set in. Trains were delayed, and, in consequence, it was after 9 in the evening when the express parcels, and among them the precious bundle of cash, arrived at the office. Ours was a small office, supporting no delivery team, and as one of us must act as messenger, my brother proposed doing so while I settled up the day's busines. Had there been a thought of danger in the 'errand to disturb us I never should have consented to his going alone's being none, I gave a gesture of thanks as he buttoned tightly his coat about him, seized the parcel and stepped out into the storm. Alone in the office, the day's busines was soon put to order and the few express parcels checked from the way bill. Then, seated in my brother's chair, I fell into a reverie upon the courage of the poor boy who sat there, day after day, deaf to all save the busy instruments—until aroused by an unusual stir at the office door. They were bringing him in, my poor boy; his clothes in disorder and stained by the storm and, yes, blood. What could have happened? His poor right hand, which could have told in place of speech, hung useless at his side, the arm disabled by a blow.

bondsmen in a strange land. Saturday before Mr. Justice McMahon at Osgoode-Hall Mr. Tilt made application for the release of Fletcher from jail, putting in the affidavits of the defendant and the wife of she plain that the interviews were on business matters. Judgment was reserved.

Contracts for the construction of the greater part of the Canadian Pacific Railway between London and Windsor have been awarded and the balance will be let to-day. Over forty tenders were secured for the work, from large and small contractors. The largest contract given was for 50 miles. It extends from Windsor a short distance east of Chatham. Angus Sinclair of Chatham and William Doghney of Montreal, were the successful competitors for this work. Ten miles east of the Sinclair-Doghney contract were given to William Brown of Chatham, and another section of ten miles further, east, was awarded to Messrs. Hickson and Hutchinson of St. Catharines. The prices obtained are said to be very good. The heaviest part of the work west of London will be constructed by the Canadian Pacific Company itself, and it will alone make many of the heaviest cuttings on the line.

The object of the meeting was to consider the question of extending an Invitation to the National Educational Association of the United States to hold their annual convention in Toronto next year. A resolution was unanimously adopted to the effect that the Toronto Association heartily invites its co-workers on the other side and will do its utmost to secure the co-operation of the City Council, Ontario Legislature and other influential bodies in furthering the matter. The convention will be held in July.

BISMARCK'S DECLINE.

THE MAN OF BLOOD AND IRON LOSING

The Chancellor's Star on the Wave-Anx

Berlin, Feb. 2.—Since yesterday morning Emperor William has had two long interviews with Prince Bismarck, who has been in constant communication with the German ambassador at Vienna and Count-Kalnoky, the subject of the correspondence being it is reported the succession to the Austrian throne. The removal of Prince Rudolph is regarded by official circles here as a misfortune for the alliance. Rudolph, although he recently quarreled with Emperor William and was no special admirer of Bismarck, upheld the alliance as a political necessity. He regarded the Austro-German treaty as the grandest achievement of Austrian statesmen for many years. His legitimate successor, Karl Ludwig, and the latter's son Franz, in whose favor Ludwig abdicated, incline to anti-German policy, favoring rather an entente with Russia. Ludwig, has been a frequent visitor to the court of the Czar, toward whom he entertains a feeling of strong personal friendship, while Franz is credited with even stronger Russophile sentiments. Their near approach to the throned gives the Government here cause for anxigy. The opinion in official circles is that Bismarck will seize the earliest opportunity to obtain through Emperor Francis Joseph a definite assurance of how the heir-presumptive regards the alliance.

WAS RUDOLPH MURDERED.

Whole Story Not Yet Known-Anoth LONDON, Feb. 3.—The Austrian officials have finally decided to father a report stating that Crown Prince Rudolph committed suicide in a moment of insanity. This statement is absolutely official and no other story of the prince's death will ever be permitted to obtain publication in Vienna. Nevertheless, there is no doubt that the whole story of the tragedy has not been told, neither is there any doubt that the representations of the great grief of Arch-Duchess Stephanic are very much exaggerated. A great many persons believe that Rudolph was murdered by some jealous or injured enemy, and dark hints of vengeance upon the murdere are becoming common. AND NOW ITEWAS A DUEL.

Minister at Washington.

London, Feb. 3.—It is stated that Sir Julian Pauncefote, permanent Under Secretary of State for the Foreign Office, has been appointed British Minister to the United States. The report is credited at the foreign office. The appointment is creating irritation in British diplomatic circles, as a departure from the rule of succession in appointments according to rank in the service. Sir Julian is a lawyer, not a diplomat, and was never attached to any embassy. He was appointed to his present post on account of his extensive knowledge of the legal bearings of treaties. As his present salary is only £2000 yearly, the new appointment is a desirable one, the salary of the minister at Washington being £6000. Among officials he has a reputation for shrewdness. He has quiet, amiable manners alled with much acuteness.

DECLINE OF A GREAT ORDER. The Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineer

The Brotherhood of Lecomotive Engineers and to be Geing to Pieces.

PHILADELPHA, Feb. 3.—A local paper publishes an interview with M. F. Bonzano, Superintendent of the Bound Brook Division of the Reading Railroad system, regarding reports that the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers is in a bad way financially and that there is a great deal of dissatisfaction within the organization. Mr. Bonzano said he was aware of the dissatisfaction within the order. It was caused, he said, by the heavy assessment upon members of the Brotherhood made in consequence of the strike of engineers upon the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy Road.

"The fact is," he said, "that the men and their families cannot live upon their wages and bear such a burden, and I am satisfied—indeed, I know—that of the engineers upon the Reading system not 25, nor even 15, are in good standing. I mean that not over that number have paid their assessments. There have been two powerful causes operating against the continuance of the power of the locomotive engineers. The first was the death-blow the Reading struck at the Knights of Labor, when it fought so successfully the great strike of last winter and the-ther was the victory of the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy Road over the Brotherhood, in successfully overcoming the strike of the engineers."

"It is only a question of time," continued Mr. Bonzano, "as to when other systems, that are now measurably or altogether controlled in their employment of engineers by the Brotherhood, will fight with and overthrow it, and I believe that within a year the Pennsylvania Railroad will find it necessary to meet the issue."

The drawing-room is divided into different grades of precedents. First come "the cabinet ninisters and those gentlemen who have the private entree, togsther with their wives and daughters." Then the "senators and their wives and daughters. "Next members of the House of Commons and their wives and daughters. And lastly, "others than those mentioned;" that is, the great general and long-suffering public, the vox populi, the tail-enders, the gentlemen of the press and the other man who has the aforesaid outfit: an evening dress. All of these grades of the attenders at the drawing-room have different entrances to the Senate Wing, and you must be careful not to attempt to go in by a door through which you should not pass, for if you do you will be ordered to halt by a burly member of Commissioner Sherwood's Dominare admitted by an entrancer on either side of which is a great red light, a danger signal in fact, which is visible to the most confirmed sufferer from color blindness.

Purdy in Belmont, a strange accident befell him. He was engaged in sharpening a brush-hook when the whetstone he was using accidentally fell on the ground. Before stooping to pick it up he placed the brush-hook against a tree—the blade uppermost—and when in the act of securing the whetstone the hook fell, the knife slicing the unfortunate man's nose almost completely off. On reaching Mr. Purdy's house, which was distant from the seene of the accident over half a mile, the victim could scarcely speak, so faint was he from the loss of blood. Mrs. Purdy at once went to work to repair the damage, and as the sequel will show succeeded admirably. She cut a number of narrowstrips of linen and on them placed some ad resive salve of her own manufacture. She hen placed the mullisted member in its rroper place and laid the strips she had repared lengthwise, crosswise and "oth rwise"; and to-day the man's proboscis is straight as ever and as good as new drs. Purdy is to be congratulated on the kill she evinced.—Register.

Asking for Their Old Places.

New York, Feb. 2.—Patrick Duffy, a striker, and some friends boarded a 42nd-street car to-day and askaulted the conductor. The police were on hand and drove the assailants off with their clubs. The Broadway company to-day took back eleven of its old hands.

A Belt-Line car this afternoon passed over the entire road. The policemen in the car were hissed. Three truck-loads of policemen who attended the car to remove obstructions were attacked between 52nd and 53rd-streets by 2000 men and boys, who threw bottles and stones. The police scattered the mob. Policemen also dispersed a crowd in front of the 2nd-avenue stables.

The 40 cars of the 6th-avenue line are now running on schedule time this afternoon without trouble and some cars are now operated without police. It is reported that the hole strike will be off by Monday, many strikers being willing to return to work. Some of the men declare that a great mistake has been made by the managers of the lockout.

The 8th and 9th-avenue lines have not made a move as yet. The 8th-avenue line may begin operations Monday.

A Sunday Outbreak.

New York, Feb. 3.—Matters were practically at a standstill in the Brooklyn strike on the surface roads to-day. No cars were run as it was believed the regular Sunday loungers might interfere. Cars will be run to-morrow on Deacon Richardson's lines on 6 minutes' headway.

The feverish state of the public mind, especially in the sections of the city where the working classes live, was shown in an outreak on the east side this afternoon. It was on a line where there was no trouble, where the men had not left at all and the row extended several blocks on 1st-avenue on either side of 30th-street. A number of boys started it by rolling a wagon across the track at the 30th-street cut. An officer drove the boys away but a crowd soon gathered and piled up logs on the track. The solitary policeman was obliged to call for help and finally Inspectors Byrnes and Steers were summoned. From the roof of a tenement a shot was fired through the roof of a passing car. Stones were sent crashing through the windows and a brick from a roof knocked off the helmet of an officer. It took two hours' lively work to quiet the trouble. The roof of a passing car was atove in by a stone thrown from a tenement house. No other strouble growing out of the "tie-up" is reported to-day up to night-fall except in the bad neighborhood about Carmine-street, where in the course of the disturbance a 6th-avenue car window was smashed with a stone. No cars were run or Broadway to-day. The 3rd-avenue and 4th-avenue lines were running to-day as if the strike had never occurred.

The insurance companies a year ago yesterday were called upon for a million to repay Barnes, Hengerer & Co., C. J. Hamlis and others for losses sustained, and on the first day of the second month of the glad New Year they lost all the premiums expected for the twelvemonth. As a result the companies have had to charge up all the losses in Buffalo since to their profit and loss accounts. Now they have pawned all their premiums acruing up to Feb. 1, 1892, and the loss to them is a serious matter. The agents talked with are afraid that some of the best companies would now feel compelled to take up their agencies. When a company like the Home of New York loses $25,000 in a day it strikes hard, no matter what their surplus may be.

It was found impossible to get a perfect list, but that obtained indicates not a great deal over a million and a half. The insurance agents talked with thought the loss to their companies might be $2,000,000 and to the property owners, $2,250,000. It may be that they are right, but the figures in hand do not indicate it. In some cases no figures could be obtained, and in others those given were possibly too high, but when the round-up comes the prediction is made that $1,000,000 will come near footing the bill.

He likened this to the temperance cause which introduced all the virtues and had different lines of approach—the scientific, the philanthropic, the social, the philosophical, and the political. Moral heroism was, the speaker said, born of God the world over. It was not unblushing audacity, but the spirit that animated the apostle when he cried, "Lord, what will thou have me to do?" and at the city of the Seven Hills when he said, "Lord, I am ready to be offered up." This and broad principle for the guidance of men. So it was with other proverbs, Therefore when Solomon was saying "Train up a child, etc.," he did not infer that in every case a child would not depart from the right way, but that if he was the initiators and establishers of any great trained in the way he should go the result in the approximate would show the proverb to be true. He pointed out that in training children they must remember that a child had the contingent-element of a free will and that they found a distillery or a brewery. Geo. Fox declared that whister Lord had not put the destiny of any child in the hands of the parents. It was not all persons, he said, who were entrusted with the training up of children who knew how to train them in the way they should go. "Train up a child in the way he should go." This was a very large task. Mark the word train. Training was more than teaching and precept, and he spoke of how few there were who were training their children, but were leaving it to the Sunday school and never letting the little ones hear a word of the Bible in the home. They should not let their children hear them speaking or insinuating about other people in their homes, for their children hear them speaking or Insinuating about other people in their homes, for their children had large ears. They couldn't conceal anything from children, and he referred to Witt Talmage, the man who wields a more anything from children, and he referred to that their children should get proper school eductaion and business training but when it came to the spiritual training the "theol of fabric, the horry fabric," the father was often actually afraid to say the same than any other man. workingmen are hard up in the winter time. Men talk about us getting $1.25 or work out themselves. But they forget that in those days they used to live in log shanties that they built themselves, and they had no rent to pay, and they got their wood for nothing, which sayed them $100 a year at least. And they used to have work the year round, or ten months out of twelve. They should not forget the prices they paid for their board. Fifteen or twenty years ago potatoes were 25 to 30 cents a bushel, pork $2.50 per 100 lbs., butter 10 to 12 cents, and they cents, eggs from 7 to 8 cents a dozen and beef at $2.00 per 100 lbs. These are the chief items to look at to compare with the present day. We cannot go on the market and buy our goods, for our money must be divided into such small parts that we cannot buy much of any one thing at a time. Therefore we must pay the full retail price for ail our food. It is all very well for some of them to talk, who are in a better shape. Flour was higher then than now. But remember that we only have work about five or six months in the year on the average now. Then in order to place us in the same condition we should have $1.75 aday for general laborerer wages. Peterborough is a nice place, the best in Canada as far as business is concerned. But what would add more to the appearance of the town than to see the men that are standing on the corners at work, instead of to see them march up and down the streets with grave faces, and even tears sometimes it in grave faces, and even tears sometimes it in grave faces, and even tears sometimes it in grave faces, and even tears sometimes in the grave faces, and even tears sometimes in grave faces, and even tears sometimes in the grave faces, and even tears sometimes in grave faces, and even tears sometimes in grave faces, and even tears sometimes in gr

"Hum-rather difficult to answer—how-ever, I'll tell you what I know, and you can supply all deficiencies. I am quite ready— go on—stop—"he arose and closed the door carefully. "Well," resuming his seat, "Mother Guttersnipe died the other night."

"Is she dead!"
"As a door nail," answered C ilton calmly.
"And a horrible death bed it was—her screams ring in my ears yet—but before she died she sent for me, and said".—
"What?"

"That she was the mother of Rosanna loore," "Yesi"
"And that Sal Rawlins was Rosanna's "And the father?" said Brian, in a low

"You ask that," said Fitzgerald, looking in surprise. "If I had told it, don't you a what a difference it would have made to

"I'm sure I don't," retorted the burrister, impletely mystified. "I suppose you mean

But all this does not explain the mystery or Whyte's murder."
"I will tell you that," said Fitzgerald, quickly. "When Rosanna left her husband, she ran away to England with some young fellow, and when he got tired of her she roturned to the stage, and became famious as a burlesque actress, under the name of Musetta. There she met Whyte, as your friend found out, and they came out here for the response of extorting, money from Frettliby. burpose of extorting money from Frettlby.

Brian nodded, "Yes, Mark Frettlby!"

"At the time you first came to see me in prison," said Brian. "I had no suspicion till then; but when you said Whyte was murdered for the sake of certain papers—knowing what they were and to whom they were valuable—I immediately guessed that Mark Frettly had killed Whyte in order to obtain them and keep his secret."

"There can be no doubt of it," said the barrister, with a sigh. "So this is the reason Frettly wanted Madge to marry Whyte—her hand was to be the price of his silence. When he withdrew his consent Whyte threqt-ened him with exposura. I remember he left the house in a very excited state on the night he was murdered. Frettly must have followed him up to town, got into the cab with owed him up to town, got into the cab with him, and after killing him with chloroform ook the marriage certificate from his secret booket and escaped."

PRINCE OF THIEVES.

"LITTLE HORACE" HOVAN AND HIS NUMEROUS ROBBERIES.

Not Harm a Mouse-Hundreds of Tho-

Why He Cannot Reform.

Two genteelly dressed men walked into the People's Savings and Deposit bank, in Denver, Colo. It was shortly after the noon hour, and most of the officials were at dinner. Only the cashier remained, and he approached the wicket window to converse with one of the callers, who wished to make arrangements to become a depositor.

Suddenly a noise in the rear of the bank caught the cashier's ear. He turned to see the other stranger at the door of the big open vault. Quick as a flash the official ran to the safe, seizing, as he passed the cogniter, a revolver.

Throwing the cocked weapon into the face of the robber, he made him put up his hands. The prisoner quietly submitted to arrest, while his companion hastily left by the street door.

When turned over to the police the man pleaded that it was his first offense and begger for mercy. His name was James Metz, and he was a merchant, broken down by reverse and trouble, who fell when confronted with the opportunity to rob the bank. His address the processor was exempted to confirm his story. the opportunity to rob the bank. His addi and appearance seemed to confirsh his sto. A dark, heavy mustache and full beard nea covered his thin, sallow face. He was rat small and slender of stature. One feature his attire, however, deepened the suspice of the police. He wore heavy felt shoes, it then he urged that he was a consumpti and they were to protect his feet from dan-ness.

It WAS "LITTLE HORACE."

Four days later Robert and William Pinkerton, the celebrated detectives, happened to stop over in Denver. The authorities had as yet been haffled in discovering the identity of "Mr. Metz," and decided to call on those chiefs of thief takers.

"Little Horace!" exclaimed Bob Pinkerton assoon as he clapped his eyes on the prisoner. Metz was silent for a moment, and then frankly admitted he was none other than Horace Hovan, one of the most celebrated and successful bank sneaks the world ever knew.

When reminded of hisarrest by Mr. Pinkerton for the robbery of the Middletown (Conn.) bank in 1879, out of which he secured $100,000 in bonds, Little Horace admitted that such was the fact.

Talking with Detective Pinkerton, Hovan gave a brief sketch of his career, and it is certainly a most interesting account of the lifeof a criminal.

Little Horace has been associated with the best bank sneaks in the country, and his lines of a criminal.

Little Horace has been associated with the best bank sneaks in the country, and his lines have frequently thrown him with other noted crooks whose specialties differed from his. In appearance he is very gentlemanly looking, of slender build and of genteel appearance and dress. He is the last man whom any one would suspect of being a dangerous criminal. He is possessed of the greatest nerve of anyman in the world, and, up to eight or ten years ago, was most successful. Unlike most professional criminals, he is very steady in his habits; outside of associating with them in his profession he never associates with them, nor resorts to places frequented by criminals. Although he has been engaged for a number of years as a professional criminal, he is very little known to police officials. He is domestic in his habits, always selects a quiet residence, and stops around home. He is in no way a desperate criminal, and when cornered he will endeavor to sneak or run away. He has never been known to carry weapons of any kind, and he not only abhors such things, but will even refuse to work with any one when he thinks result attancts to he are the side of the professional and when cornered he will even refuse to work with any one but will even refuse to work with any whom he thinks would attempt to do any ninjury. In police circles this is considered no of the best traits of his character. He ever allows any one to visit himself or his amily, and never lets any one know where NCE A THIEF ALWAYS A THIEF. In J870, in company with a man who has since reformed, and who is now living hon-estly, and Big Ed Rice, Little Horace stole $30,000 from a Halifax (N. S.) bank. Hovan and before mentioned were arrested, got away with the money. Both we released, as the money was re-the bank. In 1878 Hovan was con-mitentiary at Allegheny City. He and Robert Pinkerton arrested who were on trial. He agreed to do so on condition that an old ease against him in Charleston, S. C., should be settled, and the authorities agreed to his terms. He gave his testimouy, which was not credited by the jury, and in 1884 he was discharged. A month after his release he and Buck Taylor were arrested in Boston, but as nothing could be proved against him he was simply ordered ease of the city.

on tof the city.

In the fall of 1885 he was detected in abstracting a package of bank notes from a safe in an English banker's office and was sentenced to three years' -imprisonment. After he had served his time abroad he returned to this country via Canada, and came to Chicago and lived for a while at the Tremont house. He then left and went west by way of Kanasa City.

reform, as I once advised you!" asked the detective.

"I would only be too willing to do so if any one would give me employment that my health would stand, but where could a man like me get work! You once advised me to make an honest living and I determined to accept your advice. I went to a city to settle down and get employment. A detective came along, identified me and informed the police. Although my family offered a bond for my good behavior, they were afraid to let me live there. If they had let me alone I'd been an honest man today. I had a family to support and had to do something. The detectives hunted me down so that I could get no employment. There's nothing in a criminal's career but misery for himself and family. I know that better than any one. No matter what he gets, he is a pauper in the end. It is from one prison to another; no sconer out than back again. I know not a single man of my associates, all of whom have handled thousands, that is in a position of comfort today. If I could get honest employment I would be only too glad to take it. My health is broken down from imprisonment, and I have'a cough that means death."—Cincinnati Gazette.

The gas escaped from the sitting room stove one day, and little Elliott exclaimed, "I don't like the breath of that stove."

That is to say, your lungs. Also all your breathing machinery. Very wonderfu breathing machinery. Very wonderful machinery it is. Not only the larger airpassages, but the thousands of little; tubes and cavities leading from them.
When these are clogged and choked withmatter which ought not to be there, vour lungs cannot half do their work. And what they do, they cannot do well.
Call it cold, cough, pneumonis, catarrh, consumption or any of the family of throat and nose and head and lung "mostructions, all arabad. All ought to be got if dof. There is just one sure way to got rid of them. That is to take Boschee's German Syrup, which any druggist will sell you at 75 cents a bottle. Even if everything else has failed you you may depend upon this for certain.

KING FROST" WAS KIND. MONTREAL REJOICES IN CARNIVAL WEATHER:

The City Gay With Bunting and Thronged

Palace.

Montreal, Feb. 4.—King Frost has been very kind to the carnival festivities and this morning citizens and visitors alike awoke to find the mercury 30 degrees below zero and the weather bright and cheerful. The city is gay with bunting and is becoming crowled with visitors.

Although not on the program the first event was the reception of St. George's Snowshoe Cub of Winnipeg. At 8 o'clock a large delegation of the local St. George's Club went to the Canadian Pacific Railway depot only to find the train four hours late. Prominent among the Reception Committee were President Bob Ross, Tom Gilmour, Dunk McIntyre and Ross Mackenzie. Sharp at noon the train steamed in and the visitors were warmly welcomed. It was found that only the Winnipeg and Port Arthur branches had arrived, the Brandon, and Portage la Prairie boys missing the train, and hence they will not arrive until to-morrow morning. The Winnipegers were taken to the New York House, where they were comfortably quartered and spent the rest of the day seeing the sights.

The first official item on the program was the reception of the Governor-General and party. It was a brilliant and enthusiastic one. The party, which consisted of Lord Vine, are taged, which the consisted of Lord Vine, are taged, which consisted of Lord Vine, are taged, which is taged, which was taged, and the consistency of the Mahon, A.D.C., were received at the depot by Joseph Hickson, General Manager of the Grand Trunk Railway, and a section of the committee, and escorted stence to the Windsor-Hotel through the snowshoers' living arch. The afternoon was spent by the Vice-Regal party, like the rest of the visitors, in inspecting the ice palace and visiting the toboggan slide, though it was a little too gold to stay out doors very long.

This evening the ice palace was illuminated and despite the drawbacks it had to undergo in the process of building by the mild weather looked very well. It was formally inaugurated by the Vice-Regal party and then there was a fireworks display on a small scale, just enough to show off the beauties of its construction.

After this the toboggan slides, which were brilliantly illuminated, were patronized and then all went to bed ready for Tuesday's program.

and then all went to bed ready for russide the day's program.

Among the chief attractions outside the ice palace is the mammoth ice lion, an exact imitation of Landseer's beauties in Trafalgar-square, London, the work of W. Mathews, father of W. L. Mathews of the Canadian Pacific Railway Hotel at Banff.

To-morrow the chief attractions will be the trotting races on the river track, the Hunt Club ball at the Kennels, and the entertainment of St. George's Snowshoe Club. A Collision in a Snowstorm.

The engine of the north-bound train was thrown off the rails and considerably smashed up. The driver and baggagemen received some injuries, but no one scriously hurt. Toronto, Feb. 5— Edward R. Cates, the foreman of the Central Prison workshops, who is accused of having systematically robbed the prison within the past twelve months, was placed on trial at the Police Court yesterday. Mr. James Massie, Warden, first testified. He identified certain goods produced as the property of the Central Prison, which had been stolen. The articles, he believed, had been stolen. On Saturday morning Mr. Bee paid Brown $500 on account with which to pay the men, but Brown left for Buffalo in the afternooi with the money. Besides losing this $500 Mr. Eec has had to pay $500 more to the workmeu and he is thus out about $1000.

Final arrangements for the building of Upper Canada College were completed on Saturday by the letting of the contract to Mr. John Herbert of Toronto. In reply to a question by Mr. Monk as to whether it was the intention of the Government to afford to the City of Ottawa and the County of Carleton the advantages of the Torrens Land Transfer Act on the same terms as was afforded to the City of Toronto and the County of York when first introduced, and if not, whether the Governmentwould allow the outer counties to take advantage of the machinery now established at Toronto at the general expense until the business shall warrant the County Councils in assuming the burden imposed by the act of 1887 for the establishment of local registries, the Attorney-General replied that circircumstances did not warrant the making of an exception in the case of Ottawa. In reference to the latter part of the question, it had been thought on the whole expedient to make such provision.

Mr. Clarke (Wellington) moved for an order of the House for a return showing the location of any Houses of Industry or similar institutions in the Province, together with statistics as to the number of inmates in each, surposed cause of pauperism, expenditure and other general information regarding such institutions. He trusted that the whole of the information asked for, when presented, would satisfy the House of the advisability of establishing such institutions on the municipal principle. Notwithstanding declarations to the contrary he would vonture to assert that they had more indigent persons at the present time in Ontario than ever before. He thought the matter of providing for the deserving poor one worthy of their consideration.

Mr. W. R. Meredith said he would advise the Government to move carefully in the matter, as to make too liberal provision for the indigent might have a tendency to create a class of chronic paupers. He would suggest a general adoption of the manual labor test in the case of those admitted, as statistics proved that such a test had the effect of greatly reducing their numbers. He would, however, gladly indorse any project ameliorating the condition of a growing dispos or relief of the indigent, etc.

the "Frofessor" a Nest Egg ?

Brockville, Feb. 4.—There is still great interest here in the Kaufman case and much speculation as to the amounts lost by the "Professor's" various victims. The sufferers themselves are as dumb as the proverbial oyster and their legal representatives are becoming adept in the giving of equivocal replies. Mr. Ed. Constock said last night that they had not calculated their losses as yet. He did not wish to talk on the matter. A loss that is large-enough to make the Constocks so desirous of not having it made public is much too large to attempt to figure on.

payment had been made to Kaufman on one of the notes.

Speaking with a gentleman who did business with Kaufman for some time, a reporter of The Brockville Times asked if he thought the Professor had any money put away. The reply was: "Yes, I think he has. He never paid out any cash. Shaves, interest, and principal on all notes were paid by new notes, and he generally got some cash for himself out of the cansaction."

"You do not think then," continued the reporter, "that the increase was brought about in the natural course of such proceedings, and that he is really no better off now than when he started."

"No, I am sure he has money somewher."

There are many wno agree with this view, there are others who hold that the heavy margins he allowed have, during the years in which he has been doing this sort of work, been piling up, until they represent the bulk of the indebtedness.

It is evident that if he gave $50 off a $350 contract and paid 20 per cent. interest on it he would at the end of the three years when he took is up have to execute a much larger forgery. Carrying on this sort of thing for fifteen years would naturally bring about an astounding increase in the face value of the paper he would have to keep afloat.

The first number on the programme was an instrumental solo, well rendered, by 'Miss Annie Fair. This was tollowed by a reading by Mr. Joseph Clarke, a song by Mr. James E' Fenning and a recitation by Miss Beecle Fair. A debate then took place on the subject, 'Besolved, that Weath tends more to Success in life than Character.' The speakers on the affirmative side were Messrs. David Deyell, Thos. Donaldson, Harry Earl and Robert Brown, while the negative was upheld by Messrs. Geo. L. Fair, Robert Lang, John J. Fair and Thomas M. Wilian. The speaking on both sides was good, the debaters manifesting close thinking and good reasoning, and practice only is is required to develop good oratorical ability. The chairman summed up the arguments and dedded that the negative had won by 39 points to 32. An excellent chorus by a number of ladies and gentlemen followed, and a dialogue in four scenes, 'Keeping Boarding House,' was given. Mr. Isaac Kerr gave a reading, and the last number was a good tableau entitled "Woman's Rights." A vote of thanks was tendered the chairman, and the entertainment was concluded with the National Anthem. The next meeting will be held on the evening of Tuesday, Feb. 19th.

THE MAYOR'S ADDRESS. Mayor Strevenson after a few introduc-tory remarks proceeded at some length to point out the many advantages that would rise from the union of the two munici palities. He said the only object Peter borough had in moving for this amalga-mation was to extend her boundaries and increase her population. Instead of having to say that the town had a population of so many inhabitants and Ashburnham so many they would be able to call it a city of 12,000 inhabitants. This would also, he held, increase their credit. Another con-sideration the village was interested in was the matter of manufactories. They had a number of factories on the raceway, but there was room for many more, and if it was their intention to keep up the prosperity of Ashburnham and Peterborough they must do it by bringing manufactories here. Port Hope and other places were bringing factories to those towns and people in town were beginning to think that they must do something to bring manufactories here. He said from the factories going to Port Hope there was a growing feeling of confidence in that town and property had increased in value. This he knew for his own property in that place had risen in value. They must appear a converge way to be tried summarily.

Am Assault Case.

Peter Lynch, a young man who was brought out here to the Bernardo Home but who has lately been working around town at livery stables, laid a charge of assault against Mr. Robt. White at the police of the benefits were $205,550, thereby in this advancement than this union with Ashburnham. He believed that the sullon with Ashburnham would increase in value, as city property was more valuable than that of a town or village. They could each, he knew, get along without the other, but the benefits were mutual. The taxes would not be increased and he believed that the workingmen were just the men who would be benefited. The factories and industries would be benefit at the property of Ashburnham would increase in value, as city property was more valuable than that of a town or village. They could each, he knew, get along without the other, but the benefits were mutual. The taxes would not allow this.

Mr. Moore then asked for and adjournment to enable him to put in the evidence for an important witness for the defence, but this was also refused. The Magistrate advised the prisoners to either restore the pony to Harvey or pay him the $100 promised and avoid a worse benefit of the workingmen were just the working around to work the workingmen were just the working ground on the matter and would go as the ratepayers decided. As regarded the re-mark of Mr. Rutherford's referring to him as Mayor, he said he felt as proud to be Reeve of Ashburnham as he would to be Mayor of the city of Peterborough.

Now you can understand what a hen my life has been for the last few months," he said, "knowing that he had committed the crime; and yet I had to sit with him, eat with him and drink with him, with the knowledge that he was a murderer, and Madge—good God—Madge, his daughter!"

Just then a knock came to his door, and Mrs. Sampson entered with a telegram, which she handed to Brian. He tore it open as she withdrew, and, glancing over it, gave a cry of horror and left it flutter to his feet.

Calton turned rapidly on hearing his cry, and, seeing him fall into a chair with a ghastly white face, matched up the telegram and read it. When he did so his face grew, as pale and startled as Fitzgerald's, and, lifting his hand, he said solemniy:

"It is the judgment of God!"

CHAPTER XXX.

After all, the true religion of Fate has been preached by George Eliot, when she says that our lives are the outcome of our actions. Every action, good or bad, which we do has its corresponding reward, and Mark Frettlby found it so, for the sins of his Mark Fretudy found it so, for the sins of his youth were now being punished in his oldinge. No doubt he had sinned gayly enough in that far off time when life's cup was still brimming with wine, and no asp hid among the roses; but Nemesis had been an unseen roces; but Nemesis had been an unseen ctator of all his thoughtless actions, and w came to demand her just dues. He felt newhat as Faust must have felt when phistopheles suggested a visit to hades, in ayment for those years of magic youth' d magic power. So Jong ago it seemed ce he had married Rosanna Moore, that, almost persuaded himself that it had been since he had married recently the almost persuaded himself that it had been only a dream—a pleasant dream, with a disagreeable awakening. When she had left him he had tried, to forget her, recognizing how unworthy she was of a good man's love. He heard that she had died in a Loudon hos He heard that she had died in a London hospital, and with a passionate sigh for a pershed love had dismissed her from his thoughts forever. His second marriage had turned out a happy one, and he regretted the death of his wife deeply. Afterwards, all his love centered in his daughter, and he thought he would be able to spend his declining years in peace. This, however, was not to be, and he was thunderstruck when Whyte arrived from England with the information that his first wife still lived, that the daughter of Mark Frettiby was illegitimate. Sooner than this, Frettiby agreed to anything; but Whyte's demands became too exorbitant, and he refused to comply with them. On Whyto's death he again breathed frest, so he widdenly a second possesser of his fatal secret started up in the person of Roger Moreland.

There seemed to be only one way open to third by which dogged his steps. He would write a confession of everything from the time te had first met Rosanna, and then—death. He would cut the Gordian knot of all his difficulties, and then his secret would be sife—safe; no, it could not be while Moreland lived. When he was dead 'Mořeland would see Madge and embitter her life with the story of her father's sins; yes, he must live to protect her, and drag his weary chain of bitter remembrances through life, always with that terrible sword of Damocles hanging over him. But still he would write out his confession, and after his death, whenever it may happen, it might help if not altogether exculpate, at least to secure some pity for a man who had been hardly dealt with by fate. His resolution taken, he put it into force at once, and sat all day at his desk filling page after page with the history of his past life, which was so bitter to him. He started at first languidly, as in the performance of an unpleasant but necessary duty. Soon, however, he became interested in it, and took a peculiar pleasure in putting down every minute circumstance which made the case stronger against himself. He dealt with it, not as a criminal, but as a prosecutor, and painted his conduct as much blacker than it really had been. Towards the end of the day, however, after reading over the early sheets, he experienced a revulsion of feeling, seeing how severe he had been on himself, so he wrote a defense upon his conduct, showing that fate had been too strong for him. It was a weak argument to bring forward, but still he felt it was for a revulsion of feeling, seeing how severe he had been on himself, so he wrote a defense upon his conduct, showing that fate had been too strong for him. It was a weak argument to bring forward, but still he felt it was help on he could make. It was quite dark when he had finished, and while sitting in the twilight, looking; dreamily at the sheets scattered all over his desk, he heard a knock at his door and hea

"Why, I thought you were ill," she answered, looking at him apprehensively.

"No, dear," he replied, quietly. "Not ill, has no received."

Oh! a friend of mine," answered Frettlby, "What—Roger Moreland?" Her father stared

A WORD FOR OUR BOYS.

WHY THEY LEAVE HOME SO SOO! AND DESPISE FARMING.

Little Fellows Are Worked Almost

I would like to say a word in favor of our farmer boys, who, as a class, are sadly overworked in the rush of spring work or through the hot days of barvest.

A great many farmèrs undertake so much that, in order to get the crops in in season, everything must come to time, while the boys, colts and everything else on the place is pressed into service for all they are able to do. Now, if the boys have to work so hard, it seems to me they should be allowed a shorter day, and not be compelled to go from sun up to sun down, as well as the older ones. They are really to be pittled, if one stops to think of it, for if anything is wanted while getting ready to go to the field, it is, "Here Tom, run and get it, and step lively," and as soon as that particular thing is brought, then something else is wanted, and when ready to go to work Tom has run enough to be already tired; then, "Now see that you keep those horses going" as a bit of parting advice.

Then, after a long day's plowing, there are the cows to be brought from the pasture. Of course, Tom being the youngest, has that to do, too. And after supper is over he must milk, all of which is well enough if he was only allowed a shorter day than the others, and very frequently while the others stop during the day for rest Tom must go for a jug of water, as "boys don't get tired." I believe in their working as they are able, but have known so many boys injured from overwork that I cannot refrain from saying a few words in the hope that they may do a little good. Our dear, warm hearted, willing boys, whose work we can only appreciate when they are ill or absent; then we see how much help they have been.

"THE PLOWS WERE ALL BROKE."

I was well acquainted with one boy, who helped break up all the ground for a large crop. He was only 14 and small of his age, and he worked right along with his father, a very strong man, until the crops were in, and the day they finished planting corn, at supper time, I said to him, when he came in: "Why, George, what is the matter?" Yor as them again. But for weeks he was not out of danger.

Now where was anything gained in that transaction. A long illness to be borne, a large doctor's bill to pay, besides the care and anxiety such an illness caused his parents. As he was slowly recovering, his physician said: "This illness was caused more from overwork than anything else; now, see that it is never done again."

Another case of boy's overwork, which I know to be true, was where a man set a boy of 11 years, of age to plowing, and the only way he could turn the plough was to put his head under the cross pieces, between the handles, letting it rest on the back of his neck, until he injured his spine and was taken sick and lived only a few days. In the intense heat of harvest is another terrible time for the boys; hard, indeed, for strong men.

MAKES A MOTER'S HEART ACHE.

Last summer our own boy, a stout you fellow of 16, who had worked from ea fellow of 16, who had worked from early spring with scarcely a day's intermission, or without a word of complaint, side by side with another man much older than himself, then through four or five weeks of harvest until a day or two before it was over, came into my room (I was ill at the time) looking so sad and worn that it frightened me, and I said to him: "What is the matter, dear, don't you feel well?" "Oh, ma," he said, "I am Just nearly dead, my head aches so, just look at my hands," holding up his hands, perfectly covered inside with callouses and blisters, while his lips quivered and tears stood in his dark eyes, something that I had not seen for years, for he is usually too proud to complain. "Yesterday my nose bled until I could hardly go of the Tellow would let me off this strengon; won't you ask him to?" mother can know, and there was a good d of bitterness in my thoughts that afterness I thought of my boy and his syrow face. His father did not mean to be hard, for illness he would then have counted his grain of very little worth beside the life of his boy, but he only thought then of the work on hand and that the resting could be done some other time. But that is one reason why so many boys leave their homes so soon and so thorough despise farming, when a little good judgment, tempered with mercy for them, would do more good than all the stern com-

What a pity all parent cannot see, before they meet with some suc trouble, and be really parents at heart in trouble, and be really parents at near in-stead of thoughtless taskmasters whose pres-ent prosperity is gained in a great measure at a fearful expense—the broken down consti-tutions of their boys.—One Who Loves Them in St. Louis Republic.

Exceptions to the rule of mariages de convenance are so rare as really not to count at all. To comprehend, however, that this does not inevitably lead to social stoppage and disaster, it is necessary to perceive that the same thing which might result very badly for us does not necessarily result very badly for us the French are. And this is an extremely difficult to realize that maxims which we have conquered for ourselves have not a universal very no means excludes the idea of love. Neither does the practice. No young girl in France looks forward to not loving her husband. She simply expects to learn to love him after marriage as our young girls are expected to do before as well. As a matter of fact, in the vast majority of cases this expectation is justified. Parents and society see to it that it shall be justifiable, and the result—always of course a lottery—is made dependent on old heads instead of on young hearts.—W. C. Brownell in Scribber's.

That is to say, your lungs. Also all your breathing machinery. Very wonderful machinery it is. Not only the larger airpassages, but the thousands of little tubes and cavities leading from them.

When these are clogged and choked with matter which ought not to be there, your lungs cannot half do their work. And what they do, they cannot do well.

Call it cold, cough, pneumonia, catarrh, consumption or any of the family of throat and nose and head and lung obstructions, all are bad. All ought to be got rid of. There is just one sure way to get rid of them. That is to take Boschee's German Byrup, which any drugglet will sell you at 75 cents a bottle. Even if everything dissensatially you you may depend upon this for certain.

LORD STANLEY "BOUNCED" VICE-REGAL DIGNITY BOWS TO THE FUN OF THE CARNIVAL.

Montreal, Feb. 5.—The second day of Montreal's winter carnival was ushered in by a snow storm, which raged with fury all day and effectually put a stop to all outdoor sport, except tobogganing, snowshoeing and sleighing. The trotting races fixed for this afternoon had to be postponed.

The Vice-Regal party spent the informing quietly in their rooms at the Windsor, receiving a few informal callers. In the afternoon Lord Stanley and staff braved the snow storm and drove out to the Tuque Bleue toboggan slide, where, after receiving a hearty bouncing at the hands of the big crowd present, he inaugurated the sliding by declaring the slide open and rushing down the icy incline himself several times.

Crowds of people have been pouring into the city all day, the railways are taxed to the utmost, and this evening, despite, a slight blookade owing to the snow, all the hotels are crowded. The number of visitors is far in excess of any previous year.

Everybody is on the quivive for the great event of to-morrow evening, the attack and defence of the ice castle, in which 3000 snowshoers, including the Winnipeg, Quebec and New York delegates, will participate the storm of to-morrow is the afternoon.

This evening the weather cleared and all the resorts were crowded with visitors.

Newrows, L. I., Feb. 5. Jim Davis and Jack, Desmond of New York fought eight rounds here early this morning under Marquis of Queenberry rules. The fight was awarded to Davis. Neither man was much the worse for the contest.

NEWS OF THE WORLD. THE IRISH PART OF THE TIMES

ake up the American part.

A witness named Beach testified that he oined the Fenians in 1865 and was appointed military organizer. After the failure of the invasion of Canada by the Fenians he oined a society known as the "B. C.," the object of which was to provide money to carry on the Irish agitation and to ship arms to Ireland. Witness said he remembered the visit of Messra. Dillon and Parmell to America in 1880. The meetings held during their stay in the United States were organized exclusively by the United Brotherhood or Clanna-Gaol. Witness attended several meetings at which Dillon and Parmell were present. Parmell attended the demonstration in Chicago at which bodies of the Clanna-Gaol and the Hibernian Rifle Guards were under arms. Beach produced a copy of the Constitution of the B.C. or Clanna-Gaol. It provided for concerted action with the Irish Brotherhood and kindred societies to bring a combination of the Irish revolutionary movements in all marts of the world to act hood and kindred societies to bring a com-bination of the Irish revolutionary move-ments in all parts of the world to act decisively against England. Witness said in 1878 Devoy and Millen were sent as delegates to Ireland, receiving $10,000 from the Skirmishing Fund and a further sum which does not appear in the official lists.

Beach said Egan also told him many-payments were made by the League which it was impossible to make public and he instanced the paying of Dutch officers sent from Amsterdam to assist the Boers during the Transvaal war. The witness had two interviews with Parnell. The first was held in the house of A. M. Sullivan at Clapham and the next in the lobby of the House of Commons, where, after conversing with O'Kelly and Parnell together, he had a talk with Parnell alone. Parnell said it rested wholly with the leaders of the revolutionary party to bring both parties into line. He asked witness to get Devoy to meet him in Paris and offered to defray Devoy's expanses. He also desired to meet Alexander Wiffivan, Hines and others.

"Doctor," he said to Beach, who is a physician, "I have long since ceased to believe that anything but force of arms can bring about the redemption of Ireland." Parnell also said he did not see why a successful insurrection should not happen in Ireland, adding: "I think we will have at the end of the year £100,000 in the League treasury. That's a pretty good nucleus. You people might do something more."

On seeing Parnell a third time witness conversed with him for a few seconds only and on bidding him good-bye he got his photograph, signed "Yours truly, C. S. Parnell," as a memento. He would produce the photograph. Witness then went to Dublin leaving letters of introduction to Mr. Kenny, M. P., and others of the League. He discussed an open movement with Sexton and Kenny, He was driven by Kenny to Kilmainham Jail, where he saw Dillon, Sheridan and Boyton. He returned to New York and others of the League. He discussed an open movement with Sexton and Kenny. He was driven by Kenny to Kilmainham Jail, where he saw Dillon, Sheridan and Boyton. He returned to New York in June, 1881, and tried to see Devoy and Carney with Parnell's message. He met Breslin, who with Hines and Devoy formed the revolutionary directory. Breslin expressed willingness to bring both parties into line, so also did Sullivan, Hines and Devoy, whom he met in Chicago. Dr. Carroll expressed himself as pleased to see that Parnell was returning to his senses on the revolution question, but he objected to any coalition between organizations. Witness was introduced to Parnell and others of his party as Major Lecaron, under which name he had been known for the past 28 years. He attained the rank of major in the Federal army during the civil war. He was also a major in the Irish republican army. He was researched and N. D. effers the failure of the VIENNA, Feb. 5.—This city was to-day entirely given over to mourning. The Emperor and Empress and Crown Princes attended a requien mass in the oratory of the palace at which the "Misercre" was sung by the court choir. The services ended at noon. The church bells then tolled. The funeral services held in the Capuchin Church were most impressive and the Emperor was deeply affected.

Ottawa, Feb. 5.—The Supreme Cours gave judgment this morning in the now famous libel suit appeal of Laflamme v The Toronto Mail. Chief Justice Ritchie was not in his place, owing to illness, and Mr.
Justice Strong voiced the judgment of the court. The judgment disallowed the appeal but reduced the amount of damages from $10,000 to $6000. Mr. Laflamme is given ten days to accept the verdict or in lieu thereof a new trial will be ordered on behalf of The Mail.

This suit has been before the courts for a period of three or four years and has been vigorously fought by The Mail people. It will be remembered that the plaintiff, who was originally charged by The Mail with inventing a patent ballot box stuffer, recovered $6000 on that score and $4000 was obtained on the plea of justification which Mr. McMaster, ex-M.P., filed. The justification traduced Mr. Laflamme's private character and he succeeded in raising the judgment from $6000 to $10,000.

It is understood that in case of Mr. Laflamme's non-acceptance of the $6000, which The Mail also offered before the case reach ed the Supreme Court, they will go on to the Imperial Privy Council with it.

The costs of the actions in the lower courts are awarded to Mr. Laflamme, these amounting it is said to something like $5000. No costs on appeal were awarded.

This sum is the highest that has ever been awarded as damages for any libel in Canada.

Toronto won an important suit against the Government in the Exchequer Court before, Mr. Justice Burbidge to day. The suit has created considerable interest among lumbermen and the plaintiff won his case hands

Kingston Penitentiary.

Kingston, Feb. 5.—This afternoon two convicts at the Kingston Penitentiary, F. M. Carroll and W. Black, made a daring but unsuccessful attempt to escape. They secreted themselves by means of a false bottom in the swill aleigh, hoping thereby to pass outside the walls. Their plot was discovered and frustrated by the guard at the north gate. Carroll was from Brampton and was admitted to the prison on June 15, 1886, to serve aix years for house-breaking and larceny. Black was from Simcoe. He entered Nov. 5, 1884, to serve ten years for burglary. Jarvis, who drove the sleigh and was in the plot, came from Toronto on August 27, 1886, to serve three years for highway robbery.

WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 6, 1889.

And while building up the spiritual temple you have not forgotten the material one. Lake the Royal Prophet of od you have been preparing the material to build up a beautiful eddice wherein to worship God. You have been laboring for years to gather up the handsome sum which you now leave to your successor, and you have signified your infention of increasing that large sum by a most generous donation of your own.

large sum by a most generous donation of your own.

Considering these and many other things, is it any wonder that we find it hard to say farewell, hard to save these ties that bind us so closely together, ties that are more ascered than those of fiesh and blood? But if there is any one thing more than another that you have taught us both by word and example, it is the raine of obedience and we obey the voice of our beloved Bishop, knowing that the Holy Ghost places the Bishops to rule the church of Ged.

We sak you, dear father, in conclusion to accept this purse as an earnest of our gratitude and good wishes. We feel that you will to continue to pray for us in the future as in the past, and we trust that you will be spared many years to give the consolation of our holy religion to your people, and finally we hope that you will be happy in your new home, and that we will all meet in that heavenly home where parting is unknown to those who dwell there.

PATHER O'CONNELL'S REPLY.

Douro, Feb. 8rd, 1889.

PATHER O'CONNELL'S REPLY.

Mr. Reeve, gentlemen and my dearly beloved people:—I feel to-day like a father about to leave home and family with a prospect of never returning. I feel the trying moment of our separation as priest and people. I feel my authority over you now expires.

When I look back on my twenty-three years spent among you, and consider how comfortable, joyful and happy you made my life, not only by your many acts of generosity, but especially by the practical virtue of your lives, manifested by the slorious testimony and efficacy of your faith, it is, no wonder that I should feel the anguish and sorrow of a father about to leave his good, faithful, loving and devoted children. Before leaving you it seemed pleasing to you to present me with an address accompanied with a aubstantial purse of $300, as the last mark of your love, cateem and good will. To say that I sincerely and heartily thank you would be too cold a form to express the feelings that now amimate me. To say that you surprise me would be to falsify the truth. Your address speaks too, of your own sorrow. I don't doubt it. I can read the language of your hearts through your tearful eyes, and feel the impression more roreibly than any written address can inspire.

The long experience of your generosity, fidel ity and love bound me so cless to you that there is nothing in this world that could or would entice or oblige me'to leave you but one thing, and that is the will of God made known to me by the the voice of our god, kind, amiable, beloved and princely Bishop. Obedience to him is the first duty and obligation of a priest, and to this end all natural inclinations and interests must yield.

I am not so vain to claim all the merit which

Be assured I shall never forget you in my future home, and whenever I shall bless my people I shall include you in my benediction.

And now, all I sak you in return is to remember me in your devout and fervent prayer, at home in your family circles and especially when you come here to assist at the holy ascrifice of the Mass, to pray to your Heavenly Father in the Name of our Lord Jesus Christ, His holy Mother, and your patron saint, St. Joseph.

Inseph.
So now I bid you a parting and loving farewell, and beg your acceptance of your generous present, to be applied to your new church, and may the blessings of peace, joy, union and charity of the Holy Trinity remain with you and was a man and the server.

Todoxro, Feb. 6.—Our legislators put in what might be called, for them, a full half day's work, yesterday. They sat two hours. The volume of petitions is on the increase, and bills are piling up wonderfully. The Private Bills Committee in the afternoon organized with Mr. Gibson as chairman, and its first act was to extend the time of feeciving bills another week.

Nine private and three public bills were introduced. The most important of these was a bill by Mr. Leys to confer certain powers on the Board of Trade. It is to compel the attendance of witnesses in arbitration cases, the taking of evidence under oath-in such cases, and enforcing the awards of arbitrators.

ORGAN RECITAL.—On Friday evening last Mr. J. S. Parker, organist of St. Paul's Pres-byterian church. Peterborough, gave an organ recital in ald of the organ fund, at byterian church, Peterborough, gave an organ recital in aid of the organ fund, at St. John's church, Lakefield, assisted by Miss Lily Jackson, the little daughter of Mr. Jackson, of Jackson & Co., organ builders of Feterborough, and Mr. William Scrymegeour, of Lakefield. By a quarter to eight the church was well filled and after a few words of welcome from the Rev. Mr. Farncombe, the programme was proceeded with, the choir singing hymn No. 439 "The Son of God goes forth to War," with organ obligato, St. Ann's Tune arranged by Suilivan, which was well rendered. The next number was an organ solo "Concert Stuck." We will not particularles any one of Mr. Parker's solos, but will say that each was played with a brillianty of execution and a finish which shows that Mr. Parker is a perfect master of the instrument and a thorough interpreter of organ music. His pedaling was perfect and was especially noticeable in "Home, Sweet Home," with variations, also in the overture "William Tell," by Rossini, and was a treat that will long be remembered by the music loving public of lakefield. Little Miss Lily Jackson sang her solos, "Sabbath Bells," "Thy Kingdom Come" and "Jesu, Lover of my Soul," in a very sweet manner, and with a style and expression that was positively surprising in one so young. We think we are safe in predicting that this little lady will make a name for herself in the musical world at no distant date. "The anthem "As Pants the Heart," (Spehr), by the choir in the second part of the programme was very well sung, the solo part being beautifully taken by Miss C. Strickland, who has a voice of great sweetness and volume, her high notes being taken without any seeming effort. Last, but not least, we would mention Mr. Whissilland, who has a voice of great sweetness and volume, her high notes being taken without any seeming effort. Last, but not least, we would mention Mr. Scrymegeour, who sang "O Salutaris" (Stearn) in his very best style. The solo with the organ accompaniment seemed to suit his full rich voice

Mr. O'Mearasaid that when this matter came up, which was a peculiarly High School matter, it would be unfair for the public school trustees tovote it down. He wanted to know whether the public school trustees were going to tell the Roman Catholic ratepayers that they would not allow the Boards to be separated. It was time that the Board should give an opportunity to the people to express their views.

This SECOND PART.

After a few minutes intermission the second part opened with a dialogue, "The Bacon, Edith Lyle, Maud Morrison and Lucy Edmison. Next a recitation "A Word to the Boys," was given in line style by Wallace Kennedy and was deservedly encorred. Mabel McGuire and Nettic McFadden contributed a pretty instrumental duet, which was followed by a recitation "Making Calls" by Laura McGuire. The school then sang "The Cry from Macedonia," and would be an advantage. There were pupils who had missed passing the entrance by a mark or two, and they would have to remain in the same room another six months

Rev. S.

J. Shorey then offered up an opening prayer, after which Miss Hattie Richardson was called upon for a recitation, and gave "Our Anniversary" very nicely. This number was followed by a vocal solo by Master Fred Benton, the chorus of which the school signed, and then Many Savard.

Committee consisting of Messrs Hill, Denne, McWilliams, Wrighton, Weir and Dr. Burnham, was appointed to strike the standing committees for the year. The committees retired and in a short time brought in the following report:—

Mr. Rufferpord said his motion had Mr. RUTHERFORD said his motion had been carried. Besides, the amendment included both a public and a high school matter, and Mr. O'Meara could only vote on the latter.

Mr. HUGHES wanted the votes for the different purposes kept separate. He did not want the vote by the people united, as he believed verything would then be defeated. He did not see what they wanted another Institute building for. They had spent a large amount on the present build-

The Mystery of a Hansom Cab

Ly FERGUS W. HUME. "How do you know it was Roger More-

"Oh! Brian recognized him as he went out."

Mark Frettly besitated for a few mo-"Onl Brian recognized him as he went out."
Mark Frettliby hesitated for a few moments, and then busied himself with the papers on his desk, as he replied in a low voice:
"You are right—it was Roger Moreland—he is very bard up, and as he was a friend of poor Whyte's, asked me to assist him, which id id."

poor Whyte's, asked me to assist him, which I did."

He bated to hear himself telling such a deliberate falsehood, but there was no help for it—Madge must never know the truth as long as he could conceal it.

"Just like you," said Madge, kissing him lightly with filial pride. "The best and kind est of men."

He shivered slightly as he felt her caress, and thought how she would recoil from him did she know all. "After all," says some cynical writer, "the illusions of youth are mostly due to the want of experience." Madge, ignorant in a great measure of the world, cherished her pleasant illusions, though many of them had been destroyed by the trials of the past year, and her father longed to keep her in this frame of mind.

"Now go down to dinner, my dear," he said, leading her to the door. "I will foliow soon."

soon."
"Don't be long," replied his daughter, "or I shall come up again," and she ran down stairs, her heart feeling strangely light.
Her father looked after her until whe vandad she heaving a varerful sich, returned shed, then heaving a regretful sigh, returned his study, and taking out the scattered papers fastened them together, and indorsed them, "My Confession." He then placed them in an envelope, sealed it, and put it back in the desk: "If all that is in that packet were known," he said aloud, as he left back in the desk." "If all that is in that packet were known," he said aloud, as he left the room, "what would the world say?"

That night he was singularly brilliant at the dimer table. Generally a very reticent and grave man, on this night he laughed and talked so gayly that the very servants noticed the change. The fact was that he felt n sense of relief at having unburdened his mind, and felt as though by writing "furt that confession he had laid the specter which had baunted him for so long. His daughter was delighted at the change in his spirits, but the old Scoteh nurse, who had been in the house since Madge was a baby, shook her head. "He's fey," she said gravely. "He's no lang for the warld." Of course she was laughed at—people who believe in presentiments generally are—but, nevertheless, she held firmly to her opinion.

Mr. Frettiby went to bed early that night, as the excitement of the last few days and the gayety in which he had lately indulged proved too strong for him. No sooner had he laid his head on his pillow than he dropped off to sleep at once, and forgot in placid slumber the troubles and worries of his waking hours.

It was only 9 o'clock, and Madge by her.

on to sleep at once, and forgot in placid slumber the troubles and worries of his waking hours.

It was only 9 o'clock, and Madge by herself in the great drawing room began to long for some one to talk to, and, ringing the beli, ordered Sal to be sent in. The two girls had become great friends, and Madge, though two years younger than the other, assumed the role of mentor, and under her guidance Sal was rapidly improving. It was a strange irony of fate which brought together these two children of the same father, each with such different histories—the one reared in luxury and affluence, never having known want; the other dragged up in the gutter, all unsexed and besmirched by the life she had led. "The whirligig of time brings in its revenges," and it was the last thing in the world Mark Frettlby would have thought of seeing: Rosanna Moore's child, whom he fancied dead, under the same roof as his daughter Madge.

On receiving Madge's message Sal came to the drawing room and the two were seen fancied dead, under the same roof as his daughter Madge.

On receiving Madge's message Sal came to the drawing room, and the two were soon chatting amicably together. The drawing room was almost in darkness, only one lamp being lighted.

They had been talking together for some time, when Sal's quick ear caught a footfall on the soft carpet, and, turning rapidly, she saw a tall figure advancing down the room. Madge saw it too, and started up in surprise on recognizing her father. He was clothed in his dressing gown and carried some papers in his hand.

dictates of the excited brain, the weary body had risen from the bed and wandered about the house. The two girls, drawing back into the shadow, watched him with bated breath the shadow, watched him with bated breath as he came slowly down the room. In a few moments he was within the circle of light, and, moving noiselessly along, he laid the papers he carried on the table. They were in a large blue envelope, much worn, with writing in red tink on it. Sal recognized is at once as the one she had seen the dead woman with, and with an instinctive feeling that there was something wrong, tried to draw Madge back as she watched her father's action with an intensity of feeling which held her spellbound. Fretilby opened the envelope and took therefrom a yellow, frayed piece of paper, which he spread out on the table. Madge bent forward to see it, but Sal, with sudden terror, drew her back.

Fletcher Beleased From Casiody—The Central Farmers Institute.

Yonowro, Feb. 6.—Mr. Justice Mac-Mahon gave his decision yesterday in the capias proceedings of Rice V. Eletcher. This is the case in which the defendant has been languishing some days in jail on an action for $20,000 for alienating the affections of the plaintiff's wife. Mr. Fletcher of Kankakee, it is alleged, was in the labit of coming to Canada and inducing the plaintiff's wife to reside with him at the leading hotels during her husband's absence. In support of the motion for the defendant's release from custody a number of affidavits were read, among others that of Mrs. Rice, who admitted visiting the defendant but denied any wrongful act. His Lordship, in a somewhat lengthy judgment, came to the conclusion that the defendant was a foreigner and residing merely temporarily here, his home being in the United States, and consequently was not liable to arrest under the statute. The defendant was accordingly ordered to be released from custody, but the $20,000 action will, it is understood, be pushed merrily along.

The feature of yesterday's session of the Central Farmers' Institute was the annual address of President Fuller, who began by referring to the pratifying success of the yong parazed with trepidation, but hard work had made the Institute a lasting success they organized with trepidation, but hard work had made the Institute a lasting success of the province 71 institutes representing 5000 farmers, but there are 12 electoral districts in which there are no institutes, and the president strongly urged his hearers to endeavor to plant the banner in these places. An unusually large number of burglaries and petty larcenies have been committed in Toronto during the past few days. Two boys entered the store of E. A sneak thief entered the Toronto Club on Saturday night and made off with a South Sea seal skin cap belonging to James McDonald. The residence of W. T. Bull, 153 Queen west, was entered on Monday night and a dolman belonging to Mrs. Bull and a quantity of clothing stolen, all of which was recovered. The butcher shop of William Kerr. 24 Arthur-street, was broken into on Monday night and $3 taken from the till. The rear door of Dack & Son's shoe store, King-street, was entered yesterday morning and two pairs of boots stolen. One pair was found in a lane near the premises.

The Necessity for Sheathing the Pipes in

The Necessity for Sheathing the Pipes in Something Besides Wood.

The second annual report of the fire marshal of the city of Boston for the year ending May I, 1888, contains, among other matters, the following interesting information:

I have been able to satisfactority trace the origin of but five fires during the year to steem pipes, and the circumstances surround. lords on the topic, to the present time, when the opinions of experienced persons interested in the matter seem to be somewhat conflicting, I find by far the preponderance of evidence in favor of the conclusion that wood, subjected for a number of years to the sheat of steam pipes, may evaptually reach such a state of carbonization as, with the addition of moisture, expostre to a draught of air, or under the influence of frietion, caused by expansion and contraction of the pipes, may begak into flame. As the ignition point of ordinary pine wood-has been determined, by experiment, to be 700 degs. Fahrenheit, it is evident that this must be reduced by some process in order to admit of its taking fire at 202 degs., the temperature of steam under-a pressure of sixty polyings.

I have found one of the most frequent causes of fires, which are directly traceable to steam pipes, to be the self ignition of dust, causes of fires, which are directly traceable to steam pipes, to be the self ignition of dust, fluit, small pieces of paper, waste, etc., which seem especially attracted to the neighbor-bood of inclosed steam pipes through almost imperceptible crevices. In several such instances the fires have been fortunately discovered and extinguished before doing any harm. P. A. covered and extinguished before doing any harm. P. A. Montgomery, secretary of the Western Manufacturers' Mutual Insurance company, in special report No. 5 of the Manfacturers' Mutual Insurance company, in special report No. 5 of the Manfacturers' Mutual Insurance company, refers to this same element of danger, and suggests, as a remedy, the use of a funnel shaped casting, cast in two parts, from three to six inches in height, fitting close at the top, and screwed to the floor, where the pipe passes through; and he further recommends that a thimble of some non-combustible material abould be put through the hole in the floor or partition and securely fastened on either side, in order to protect the wood from contact with the pipe.

The light sheathing by which the pipes are often covered, being obliged to contact with the pipe. The light sheathing reduced to such condition by being in close contact with the pipe, and so placed as to be susceptible to more or less friction, caused one of the five fires herein referred to; another was caused by lumber dust in the dry house of a planing mill sifting through the floor on to the pipes. The desirability of employing some sort of non-combustible covering for steam pipes, to prevent their contact with wood, dust, etc., is apparent. They should never be inclosed in wood sheathing. Professor Gibson, in a report to the Manufacturers' Mutual Insurance company, gives an exhaustive and instructive treatise on the merits of the various kinds of coverings.—

MONTREAL, Feb. 6.—The City by Mount Royal is noted for its weather and always maintains its reputation during the carnival. This year is no exception to the rule. Monday was cold enough to freeze a marble statue to death, Tuesday it snowed all day and all night and to-day the wind has-blown a perfect hurricane, reaching a velocity of 70 miles an hour, piling the snow in great digits and rendering any outdoor exercises impossible. All the events on the program were postponed and there were even fears until a late hour this evening that the great contre of the week's festivities, the storming of the ice castle by the snow-shoers, would have to be postponed. It was decided, however, not to disappoint the visitors, and so, aithough it was blowing great guns and the mercury gone down away below zero, the program was carried out.

away below zero, the program was carried out.

Dominion-square and its approaches were the centre to which all were attracted and by 8.30, the time fixed for the attracted and by 8.30, the time fixed for the attracted and 50,000 people around the ice palace. The mass of humanity stamped and kept itself warm the best way it could until 9 o'clock when the Field Battery guns gave the signal for the beating showshoes began avending their way down the mountain side. When, the snowshoers reached the square there were not less than 3000 in the ranks representing all the city clubs as well as the visiting delegates from Ottawa, Quebec, Winnipeg and New York. Then the attack began. Rockets flew into the air, and the besingers advanced straight for the castle, only to dash against the walls and be repulsed by the garrison inside. For an hour or so the interest less an elicitie may expressions of at last the castle capitulated and all was over.

The snowshoers went to their headquarters except the Tuque Bienes who held a grand concert in their clyb house, at which a large crowd was present including Erastus Wiman.

The Governor-General and party witnessed the attack and defence of the palace from the Windsor Hotel and expressed themselves as much delighted.

The carnival is proving a great success. One reason why the committee have been able to make it so great a success is that the railways are each giving one-fourth of their receipts for carnival excursion tickets toward the carnival fund. Heretofore they gave nothing. The railway tickets are a little higher this season on account of the arrangement but the public are quite satisfied.

ous assault. Mr. Laurier sant that he mean nothing personal in the attack, but he could look upon Mr. Dewdney's preference with naught but the gravest censure. Mr. Dewdney, first as an officer of the Government in the Territories, and later on as the Governor of those Territories, was alone to blame for the events which led up to civil war and the sacrifice of many lives on the banks of the Saskatchewar.

alone to blame for the events which led up to civil war and the sacrifice of many lives on the banks of the Saskatchewañ. Mr. Laurier reviewed at length the position of the halfbreeds in that country, their claims for justice that had been repeatedly made, their meetings and their threats which finally wound up in the fire of the first gun of the rebellion at Duck Lake.

"Who are the men responsible," demanded Mr. Laurier, for those Scenes of blood and strife in 1885? Was: it the poor wretches which had pleaded for their rights and afterwards took up arms? No, not at all? But it was the man who now sits on the Treasury benches as the Minister of the Interior. That gentleman had a duty to perform which he grossly neglected. He knew perfectly well about the dissatisfaction that existed among the half-breeds and it was his place and his duty to call the attention of the Government to these grievances. The hon. Minister of the Interior knew all about these agitations but he never once informed the Government of the serious aspect that had involved the half-breeds in the Northwest."

Sir John Macdonald in reply said: "I cannot forget that the hon. gentleman sympathized with the battle on the Saskatchewan and his views thereon were more warmly than loyally expressed. The Minister of the Interior, I think, is in every way the equal of the hon. gentleman sympathized with the battle on the Saskatchewan and his views thereon were more warmly than loyally expressed. The Minister of the Interior, I think, is in every way the equal of the hon. gentleman, and in many ways I would not compare them. The gentleman who has been so unjustly attacked had just as much to do with the events that preceded the rebellion as the gentleman who attacked him. He (Mr. Dewdney) had nothing whatever to do with the half-breed claims."

A voice: "Who had, then?" Sir John Macdonald: "The Government of that time to the extent of one-quarter of a section of land, He had nothing whatever to do with the half-breed claims."

rebellion or with neglect or with acts of commission or omission in respect to these troubles."

Then Sir Richard Cartwright took a hand in the talk. He declared that the only thing in which he did not agree with Mr. Laurier's remarks was the statement that Mr., bewdney was to blame for the rebellion. The First Minister, by his own admissions, was primarily to blame.

The other business of the House consisted of the introduction of a couple of bills, the answering of questions and the consideration of various notices of motion. Clarke Wallace introduced his bill for the prevention and suppression of combinations formed in restraint of trade. The bill, which is as follows, was read a first time:

Lonnon, Feb. 6.—At the session of the
his evidence. He said that Breslin was which proved to be a failure. Another firm huilt a boat which lay on the New Jersey

Attorney General Webster quoted from The Irish Nation extracts from a speech made by Father Sheehy, who advocated abolition of landlordism and said he would give no quarter in Ireland until the country was nationally independent. The speech was delivered Jan 3, 1882, and O'Connor and Healy were present.

Witness said he received from the directory a circular giving a report of the convention. The circular stated that the doctrine which the convention adopted was that the people living under an unnatural government and wishing to be under a natural one were entitled to overthrow the unnatural and establish a natural government.

English Government at no time, since then they had not been in this possession. Sullivan, he said, went to England in 1883 and remained there two months.

The Attorney-General: "Howid d- yo know?"

Witness: "By the underground telegraph."

The Attorney-General: "What is that?"
Witness: "Through associating with those in the confidence of the Brotherhood. Of my own knowledged know that Sullivan went to England."
Witness said Sullivan upon returning from England made a statement to him. Sir Charles Russell objected to the reception of this statement and Justice Hannen said the question in its present form was inadmissable. The witness, on Sir Charles request, left the court room. Justice Hannens asid if the question had been formed to elicit an answer to the effect that there was any arrangement come to regarding something—to be done in the future then it was obvious that a statement of what had occurred might legitimately form a part of the answer to such question.
When the witness returned Attorney-General Webster asked: "Did you converse with Sullivan regarding plans for future warfare?"

Witness: "Yes."
The Attorney-General: "Did Sullivan refer to what passed with any of the leaders in the United Kingdom?"
Witness: "Yes, later in the day."

Father Coveney's Prayer.

DUBLIN, Feb. 6.—It is stated that con-

Father Coveney, referring in a speech at Skibbèreen to the arrest of Father McFadden and the killing of Inspector Martin at Gweedore, said the people murdered by the police at Youghal, Middleton and Michellatown had now been avenged. "May Almighty God," exclaimed Father Coveney, "strengthen the hand that murdered Martin." Father Coveney's utterances were cheered.

London, Feb. 6.—Although the Rt. Hon.

Before Mr. Smith's transfer to the House of Lords the firm of Smith & Son, news vendors, of which he is the head, will become a limited company under a new name.

After the bodies were taken to an undertakers Frederick Mann, a linen importer, entered £the hotel and being told of the shooting was overcome with grief and raved around exclaiming: "It was a life thrown away," and "Oh! the brute." He then started on a run for the undertakers, where he threw himself upon the woman's body, kissing her hands and face unmindful of the blood which stained her clothing and face. It was some minutes before he could be dragged away from the body. He then glared for a moment at Bradley's body and with an oath said: "Oh! the thief, villain, brute, let me get at him." Mann then made a rush at Bradley's body and would doubtless have thrown, it upon the floor had not officers dragged him from the floor had not officers dragged him from the mant the had known Mrs.

Mann stated that he had known Mrs. Bradley since childhood and knew all about her troubles. He was very fond of her and had repeatedly warned her against Bradley. He said Mrs. Bradley had decided to part from her husband and that was the direct cause of the shooting. While Bradley was in prison Mann escorbed Mrs. Bradley to and from her night assignment. This made Bradley insanely jealous, and with Bradley is dissipated habits led to frequent quarrels and culminated in to-day's tragedy. Mrs. Bradley was formerly connected with the stage.

plan he advocated was the election of a number of commissioners in each riding, these to hold office for two years, to be paid, and to transact all the business with the exception of such as might be relegated to the various municipalities and to the Legislature. On motion of Allan Pringle and J. B. When Harry Thorner, the dudish young man about town, charged with defrauding Alexander Gemmel of $15 by means of a worthless check, came up on remand, Mr. Gemmel stated that the prisoner had paid him the amount and asked His Worship to dismiss the charge. Col. Denison would not accede to the request and as the fraud was a barefaced one he sentenced young Thorner to 60 days' imprisonment.

A man named John Green was charged with perpetrating a fraud on Joseph P. Sullivan, to whom the latter sold as Gladstone cutter on Saturday last and was paid by a check on the Bank of Hamilton. He presented the check on Monday morning, when the teller reported no funds. Having heard something of Green's reputation in the meantime he swore out a warrant for his arrest. A great many checks had been presented against that balance of $1. Green was committed for trial.

DEFYING THE LAW. IT was a singular thing that the Board of Education did, at its organization meeting, when it appointed Mr. J. R. Stratton on a committee. It was well known that Mr. Stratton had vacated his position as a trustee by violating a salutary provision of the law that no member of the Board should have business dealings with that body. This action should be explained. Does the Board mean to condone the offence? Does it intent to fgnore the matter and, by permitting a member to persistently violate the law, defy the statutes?

In Lindsay, when it was pointed out that members had illegally transacted business with the Board, some of them to a trivial extent, they promptly resigned and relieved the Board from embarassment. Mr. Stratton's transgression was neither technical or trivial, but a violation of the spirit and letter of the law. If he has not sufficient self-respect to withdraw from the anomalous position he now occupies, the Board should not shirk its duty, which s to notify the clerk of the municipality hat the seat is vacant so that the Council may make an appoinment.

What good is there in law if it may be thus set at defiance? What excuse is there for expending large sums of money every year to have M. P. Ps. assemble. nto to enact laws if they may be dis-

It may be true that no member cares to move against another, and the fact that the other is in a position to set in operation more than one influence may have an effect, but where the transgression has enect, but where the transgression has been so flagrant, and where the law is so plain, the Board should not shirk a duty imposed on it by the authority that gives it existence. Mr. Stratton's presence on the Board cannot be so indespensible, when the most important business transacted for years was attended to on Tuesday avaning while he was absent. Is timday evening while he was absent. Is timber out of which school trustees are made so scarce that he cannot be replaced by a ratepayer who would bring as much zeal and discretion into the position? The assumption would be laughable if it did not involve a principle so serious.

As a member of the Legislature that adopted the school act Mr. Stratton should be the last to violate its provisions, instead of persistently disregarding them and retaining his seat on the Board. But having broken the law, and the fast being known, the consequences must follow and Mr. Stratton cannot remain on the Board, at positions of school trustee and servant of We again call the attention of Mr. Strat-

the High School Act, which reads as fol-

No high school trustee shall enter into any contract, agreement, engagement or promise of any kind, either in his own name, or in the name of another, or either alone or jointly with another, or in which he has any pecuniary interest, profit, or promised or expected benefit, with the corporation of which he is a member, or have peculiary claim upon or receive compensation from such corporation for any work, engagement, employment, or duty on behalf of such corporation, and eyery such contract, agreement, engagement, or promise shall be null and vold, and such trustee shall also ipso facto vacate his seat, and a majority of the other trustees shall declare the same vacant, and notify the clerk of municipality."

The contest was not equal on account of the absence of one of the speakers on the affirmative and stood two or three on the negative. The chairman gave the decision in favor of the negative. A very amusing dialogue in two parts was given by two young ladies and two gentlemen which brought down the house and was highly appreciated by the audience.

Factory Act.

Torogro, Feb. 5.—The session of the Legislature yesterday was brief, and the business transacted was not of great importance. A lull in the flow of bills and petitions was apparent, and the time of the House was chiefly occupied by Hon. Mr. Fraser explaining the amendments to the Octario Factory Act, which passed the second reading. The alterations are intended principally to prevent the occurrence of certain misconceptions as to the persons brought within the operations of the act to prevent girls under 14 years of age being employed, and stating more definitely the time employes shall be allowed for refreshment when engaged under certain conditions longer than ten hours per day. Also making it compulsory on the part of employers or others when arraigned for a breach of the act to give evidence on behalf of the prosecution, and permitting them in turn to give evidence in their own behalf.

Mr. Metcalf yesterday presented a petition asking an amendment to the game law, allowing the shooting of migratory birds, particularly the various species of ducks, which breed in the United States and take their fight north fin the spring. The petitioners complain that American sportsmen drive the Canadian game by various devices into American territory, and under their game laws they are allowed to kill them as migratory birds. The Canadian sportsmen therefore ask that they may be allowed to retaliate.

A COMMOTION IN GRIMSBY.

Lively Times Over the Arrest of an Alleged Scott Act Offender.

St. Catharines, Feb. 6.—Early on Monday morning, Constable Root of Beamsville arrived in Grimbsy with a Scott Act warrant for the arrest of Mr. Adam Konkle, charged with a breach of that-law for the third time. Konkle on receiving the information asked pernjasion to go to his bedroom and dreas for the journey to St. Catharines. In doing so he was followed by Root, who, as Mrs. Konkle states, stood in the door of the room where she was just getting out of bed and dressing. She asked Root to retire for a few moments but he declined, which conduct so exasperated her that she slammed the door in his face and locked him out. Root was in doubt as to whether he could break in the door to sectre his prisoner, and after a long parley sent for Scott Act Magistrate Davis and some constables. On the news spreading through the village a large crowd gathered, and the constables, who were around the house, remilited until after dinner, when the door of the room was smashed and the man secured. During the excitement, it is said, Könkle fired several shots, and his father broke one of the windows in handing him up a club with which to defend himself against the housebreakers. The prisoner was finally brought off to St. Catharines jail in a sleigh, and the affair is the subject of much comment as to whether the charge upon which he was arrested justifies the authorities in breaking into the man's house or otherwise.

AN ACTOR'S LIFE.

FRED WREN, NOW MAKING BRICK, GROWS REMINISCENT.

Thirty-three Years' Experience Makes Young Man a Veteran-A Family of Actors Who Early Utilize Their Talents.

"Was I ever bit by bloodhounds?" echoed 'Fred Wren, the veteran comedian, as he and a Newsreporter chatted together the other day; 'look here, and here, see the scars? I have marks all over my body from them, and yet I never got a scratch from them in earnest. I have two big holes in my right leg, but I got them by interfering in a fight between two bloodhounds. One made a grab at the other dog and caught me. The others are from snaps made at canes, umbrellas and so on."

"Yes," he replied, in answer to a question, "I have quit the show business, and I'm going to make brick."

Mr. Wren sat in his office at eight White building. Some years ago he bought a farm at Lancaster, and finding that a brick clay bed lay beneath the surface soil, has organized a company, and the merry Marks promises to make as much money in brick as he made in his long theatrical career.

"How did you come to buy a farm?" he was asked.

THE YEARNING FOR A HOME.

THE YEARNING FOR A HOME.

"Because I wanted a home. Not that a home was an use to me, for I was hardly ever Eome. But all actors have the same longing. They all like to speak of 'home.' They say 'my home' with a tremor in their voice when thousands of miles away. It is one of the bright spots in their memory. Joe Jefferson with all his wealth and his beautiful home finds it no home to him, for he's there but rarely. What are Booth and Barrett and all the rest but tramps—wanderers on the face of the earth? I tell you I'm tired of it all, and I've settled down here in my home and going to make brick. I've got a nice home, nice wife, nice children, nice cook and nurse girl, and I'm going to enjoy the rest of my life."

wife, nice children, nice cook and nurse girl, and I'm going to enjoy the rest of my life."

"How old are you?"

"How old are you?"

"About 40." Then falling into reminiscence Mr. Wren continued: "It's a long time ago since I took to the stage. Father had a good business here as vessel painter. Old residents will remember him. There were nine of us and all but Will took to the stage. My brother George ran away to Cincinnati and headed a company with Barney McAuley. He came back in two years and father forgave him, and then gave him permission to put up a little stage in the barn. That was on Seventh street, above Maryland; I don't know but the old barn stands there yet. Our first play was "Bombastes Furioso," then we played "Timothy Toodles," Burton's old play, and he afterwards took me and taught me it well. The Swan family were with us, and I tell you we played to crowded houses, for it was cheap. That went on for a year; then, in the winter of '55 and '56, George conceived the idea of taking us on the road. We played "Toodles," 'Loan of a Lover,' 'Crossing the Line,' 'Middy' Ashore,' 'Jenny Jones,' 'A Tinker and Tailor' and several other English comedies of the day. We went through Canada and Michigan, doing well, got back home and started out again. That company was the Wren Juvenile comedians, eight of the Wren family in it, and we had a good show. We played before President Buchanan's cabinet in the winter of '57 and '58."

Mr. Wren talked away entertaininely

A Pittsburg natural gas expert has made the calculation that each day 600,000,000 ubic feet of natural gas are drawn from the earth for use in that city. Tals amount weighs over 12,000,000 pounds, of which 8_c-000,000 pounds are carbon. He is of the opinion that, with the withdrawal of so much material, something will give way. Already since the development of natural gas in western Pennsylvania there have been saveral "shakes."

Ly FERGUS W. HUME.

But it was too late; Madge had caught sight of the names on the paper—"Marriage—Rosanna Moore—Mark Frettlby"—the whole awful trath flashed upon her. These were the papers Rosanna Moore had handed to Whyte. Whyte had been murdered by the man to whom the papers were of the man to whom the papers were of value—

"God! My father!"

She staggered blindly forward, and then, with one piercing shriek, fell to the ground. In doing so, she struck against her father, who was still standing beside the table. Awakened suddenly, with that wild cry in his ears, he opened his eyes wide, put out feeble hands, as if to keep something back, and with a strangled cry fell dead on the floor beside his daughter. Sal, horror struck, did not lose her presence of mind, but, snatching the papers off the table, she thrust them into her pocket, and then shrieked aloud for the servants. But they, already attracted by Madge's wild cry, came hurrying in, to find Mark Frettlby, the millionaire, lying dead, and his daughter lying in a faint beside her father's corpse.

CHAPTER XXXI.

HUSH MONEY. soon as Brian received the telegram h announced the death of Mark Frettlby As soon as Brian received the telegram which announced the death of Mark Frettlby he put on his hat, stepped into Calton's trap, and drove along to the St Kilda station, in Flinders street, with that gentleman. There Calton dismissed his trap, sending a note to his clerk with the groom, and went down to St. Kilda with Fitzgerald. On arrival they found the whole house perfectly quiet and orderly, owing to the excellent management of Sal Rawlins. She had taken the command in everything, and although the servents knowing her antecedents, were disposed to resent her doing so, yet such were her administrative powers and strong will that they obeyed her implicitly. Mark Frettlby's body had been taken up to his bedroom, Madge had been taken up to his bedroom, and Brian sent for. When they arrived they could not help expressing their admiration at the capital way in which Sal Rawlins had managed things.

"Sthe's elever girl that "whitnered Cal.

"She's a clever girl, that," whispered Cal-ton to Fitzgerald. "Curious thing she should have taken up her proper position in her father's house. Fate is a deal cleverer than we mortals think her."

Brian was about to reply when Dr. Chinston entered the room. His face was very grave, and Fitzgerald looked at him in alarm.
"Madgo-Miss Frettiby," he faltered
"Is very ill," replied the doctor; has an his hand.

"The sight of her father walking in his sleep, I suppose," said Chinston, buttoning his glove, "and the shock of his death, which took place indirectly through her, accounts for the brain fever."

"Madge Frettlby is not the woman to seream and waken a somnambulist," said Calton, decidedly, "knowing as she did the danger. There must be some other reason."

"This young woman will teil you all about it," said Chinston, nodding toward Sal, who entered the room at this moment. "She was present, and since then has managed things admirably; and now I must go," he said, shaking hands with Calton and Fitzgerald. "Keep up your heart, my boy; Fill pull her through yet."

After the doctor had gone, Calton turned sharply to Sal Rawlins, who stood waiting to be addressed.

"Well," he said briskly, "can you tell us what startled Miss Frettlby!"

"I can, sir," she answered, quietly. "I was in the drawing room when Mr. Frettlby died—but—we had better go up to the study."

"Why?" asked Calton, in surprise, as he and Fitzgerald followed heraup stairs.
"Because, sir," she said, wh of they had entered the study and she had locked the door, "I don't want any one but yourselves to know what I tell you."

"More mystery," muttered Calton, as he glanced at Brian, and took his seat at the scritoire.

Both Calton and Fitzgerald started, and the latter grew pale.

"He-came down the room and spread out a paper on the table where the lamp was. Miss Madge bent forward to see what it was I tried to stop her, but it was too late. She gave a scream and fell on the floor. In do ing eo she happened to touch her father. He awoke, and fell down dead."

"And the papers" asked Caiton, uneasity. Sal did not answer, but producing them from her pocket, laid them in his hands. Brian bent forward as Caiton opened the envelope in silence, but both gave vent to an exclamation of borror at seeing the certificate of marriage which they knew Rosanna. Moore had given to Whyte. Their worst suspicions were confirmed, and Brian turned away his head, afraid to meet the barrister's eye. The latter folded up the papers thought fully and put them in his society. To be Continued.

FINE COMPLEXIONS.

CONSIDERATION OF A MATTER IN TERESTING TO LADIES.

Water the Best of All.

Do More Harm Than Good—Clear, Soft Water the Best of All.

Of all the gifts that go to the making up of beauty, nothing catches the eye so distinctively and instantaneously as the clear red and white tints that render the most ordinary face an attractive one. The lack of at least a good complexion dims all other beauties, and with a course or dings skin the most perfect Grecian profile excites no admiration.

Therefore it is that from the beginning of history women have resorted to all sorts of devises for improving their complexions, from the pleasant and luxurious milk bath to the repulsive application of raw veal, and the discomfort of masks and poultices. Many of these devices sound anything but cleanly; yet the end to be attained was deemed worthy of any inconvenience or suffering.

The constant and persovering use of water only, had these ancient dames but knfown it, would have effected the desired transformation far more thoroughly; but a fixed article of belief with them in securing a good complexion was to abstain from washing the face. This idea is said by a keen writer to have had some grains of sense in it, as, when the dogma prevailed, bathing the body was not practised to any extent, and had the face alone been favored with ablutions the unclogged pores would speedily have brought to the surface the impurities that should have escaped through the numerous outlets kept in working order by the daily bath.

JUST A LITTLE SOAP.

This error prevailed a long time ago; but even now a traditional woman, somebody's grandmother or great grandmother, who must have had something feline in her nature, is brought to the front with her bit of flannel, which she never even dampened, merely polishing off her pretty face with it every morning; and because of this habit—we say in spite of it—she had a complexion of lilles and rosses?

It is quite possible to go to the other extreme, and utterly ruin the skin with soan and stant texture to a liberal use of common brown soap; but as this soap is the coarsest and stron satin texture to a liberal use of common brown soap: but as this soap is the coarsest and strongest of alkall preparations, nature had probably been extra generous in this case, and given a complexion that remained beautiful in spite of the most ignorant attempts to spoil it. Twice a week is often enough for the use of soap, which should be of the purest and most delicate kind; and just before retiring is the best time to apply it. satin texture to a liberal use of com years over n, anways waster, using white Castile soap once or twice a week. Her hands did the work of a wash rag and the soap was rinsed off with a soft sponge. The complexion should never be exposed to the outside air nor to the fire within an hour after washing, and the same time should elapse after a walk or drive before applying water to the face. It should at all times be protected from wind and sun by a veil, the thicker the better, and green and gray are the best colors to use, as blue draws the sun and causes freekles.

Sleeping in a mask can scarcely be called a comfortable proceeding, but it is said to be a marvelous whitener of the complexion; and two, or three hundred years ago it was in common use among the French court ladies. The fashion has been revived in the "cesmetic masks" so often advertised, and used with very powerful applications. But soft water and a closely fitted face covering of quilted cotton or chamois skin are mere efflectious, than these claborate and expensive appliances, and they are certainly harmless.

own Florida and rose even better.

A salt bath, too, is excellent; and it is not necessary to go to the sea shore for it, as a few cents' worth of rock salt will supply the luxury for a month. A good sized lump dissolved in a basin of water is all that is needed for a single application. Besides invigorating the system, this bath is said to freshen the complexion and restore the, appearance of youthfulness. One certainly "feels good" after it.

system.
Prevention, however, is always better than cure; and a proper or improper diet is sure to tell upon the complexion.—Harper's Bazar.

New Method of Sinking Shafts. New Method of Sinking Shafts.
The old method of sinking wells or shafts by a wooden-orb surmounted by masonry is superseded of late in Belgium by the use of Bollow cylindrical sections of cement tubing of the required diameter, smooth externally, with inside collars jointed with liquid cement. As the excavation proceeds, sections of the tubing are added at the top-until the required depth is obtained, when the opening is closed with a cement slab, having a manhole in the center.—Chicago Times.

That is to say, your lungs. Also all your breathing machinery. Very wonderful machinery it is. Not only the larger airpassages, but the thousands of little tubes and cavities leading from them.

When these are clogged and choked with matter which ought not to be there, your lungs cannot half do their work. And what they do, they cannot do well.

Call it cold, cough, pneumonia, catarrh, consumption or any of the family of throat and nose and head and lung obstructions, all are bad. All ought to be got rid of. There is justone sure way to get rid of them. That is to take Boschee's German Byrup, which any druggist will sell you at 7s cents a bottle. THE DOMINION ALLIANCE.

The Advocates of Total Prohibition Meet at the Capital.

OTTAWA, Feb. 7.—The annual convention of the Dominion Alliance for the Total Suppression of the Liquor Traffic met this morning in the City Hall. There was a numerous gathering of enthaliatio Prohibitionists from all parts of the Dominion, Toronto being largely represented. An invitation had been extended to all members of Parliament to be present, but very few responded to the request.

This stated: Never before in the history of our country was there a more general belief pervading all classes of the righteousness and expediency of the total prohibition of the liquor traffic. The progress of temperance sentiment and the increased effectiveness of our prohibitory legislation are strikingly evidenced by the fact of the remarkable and steady decrease in the quantity of spirits consumed in our country.

the Montreal convention be made the constitution of the Council of the Dominion Alliance.

That in accordance with the provisions of the new quastitution a meeting of the council of the alliance on the new basis be held at some central point of the Dominion during the summer of the prosent year.

The report was adopted. Is was resolved that with regard to the reintroduction of the prohibition resolution to Parliament that matter be left to the direction of the friends of the Alliance in the House,

At the evening session a strongly worded resolution was usused condemnatory of the license system in the Northwest Territories in defiance of the provisions of the Northwest Territories Act, and the legislative committee of the Alliance was requested to bring before the Government a strong remonstrance asking that they abrogate the regulations under which Lieutenant-Governor Royal issued these permits and licenses for the sale of intoxicating liquors.

Several fainting fits followed and more difficulty was experienced in breathing. The respirations were quick and hard to the number of 53 to the minute. Her pulse was over 80 and her temperature 98. Beach explained the symbols standing for secretary and treasurer, the secretary's being a double square with one right angle placed over the other, while the treasurer's was a cross. In March, 1884, witness attended a district convention of the V. S., where he saw Sullivan and Lomassey.

Attorney-General Webster asked witness what services Lomassey had rendered that the brotherhood should support his family. Witness explained that a convention of the re-united sections, now known as the V.B., was held in June, 1888, when a delegate from Detroit, where the widow of Momassey lived, introduced the subject.

Sir Charles Russell asked the Court whether this was evidence against the Parnellites.

whether this was evidence against the Parnellites.
Attorney-General Webster held that these organizations were really all one and that the evidence was admissable because Egan, Sheridan and others were directly connected with the I.R.B. and the I.U.R.B. Sir Henry James also contended that the witness alleged conversation with Parnell made his evidence admissable. Parnell had requested the witness to do certain things when he arrived in America and it had been proved that the request was carried out.
Mr. Reid said the Attorney-General, before proving proceedings in America against the Parnellites, should produce more definite evidence of the arrangement and conduct of the conspiracy and in a spirit other than that in which the evidence had so far been tendered. It was not sufficient to show conversations innocent in themselves without provlng guilty knowledge of such object as was contemplated.

Attorney-General Webster said he had never been prepared to suggest that Parnell or other members of Parliament were personally connected with murderous outrages. His contention was that they were allied with people whom they knew to be, or could have known if they had made proper inquiries, to have been prominently connected many years with such outrages. He did not contend that Parnell and his associates planned murders, but that they had allied themselves intimately with the LR.B., and availed themselves of its money. Knowing the character of the I.R.B. they continued their alliance with it after most distinct and positive notice. It had been proved that several members of the House of Commons attended four-or five League conventions in America where the I.R.B. controlled the proceedings, and the harmony between them was referred to in a document read at the convention, in which the hope was expressed that the tree which Davitt had planted in Mayo might grow until it had grown into an organization that would effect Ireland's freedom.

The Courf decided to admit the evidence. Beach then said Luke Dillon, Egan, Devoy, Samuel Morris and Connor attended the convention which unanimously ordered the executive to protect Lomassey's family. Beach said he accomptnied Egan and other delegates to the Boston convention in August, 1884. Egan explained his escape and told how he received information from Dublin Castle regarding the intended movements of the authorities. He knew of the order of arrest for him twenty mintes after it was issued, and immediately returned home, packed his satchel, and destroyed all the documents in hie possession concerning the I.R.B. and Carey's letter. Beach said Egan told him Brennam was walking on the Strand with Lord Mayor Sexton at the time. They crossed the street, turned into an alley and separated. Brennan went home and packed his value. Sexton bought a ticket for Calais and went with it from Charing Cross to London Bridge, where he met Brennan, to whom he' transferred the hicket. The

to the same intent was also tabled by Mr. Lyon.

To amend the Municipal Act—Mr. Austen, Mr. Cruess and also Mr. Ferguson.

Hon. Mr. Ross (Huron) moved ito ratify an Order-in-Council approved by His Honor the Lieut. Governor providing that the St. Vincent de Paul Hospital, Brockville, be hereafter taken as named in Schedule "A" of the Charity Aid Act, and receive aid accordingly from the date of its opening, Nov. 28, 1887, and that the sum of $277.80 be placed in the estimates on account of work done by the hospital between Nov. 28, 1887, and Sept. 30, 1888.

Mr. W. R. Meredith asked if the Government had decided upon any settled policy in the affording of aid to such institutions. He regarded it as miscreble that a number of the smaller institutions should receive financial agsistance, while in many cases the larger were overlooked. The expenditure in this direction was rapidly increasing, and he hoped that now the Government were equipped with their seven Cabinet Ministers, they would offer the House some definite policy in the matter.

Hon. Mr. Hardy replied that the claims of each institution were considered upon it merits.

Compensation for Injuries Act. After a detailed explanation the bill passed its second reading.

Mr. French moved the second reading of his bill to amend the law of slander. The aim of Mr. French's bill is to protect women from the slanderous tongues of others. He pointed out many cases where innocent women had lost their character through the vile reports 'circulated about them by malicious parties and showed that this act would give injured parties redress and punish their slanderers. The measure was discussed at length by Messrs. Meredith, Hardy, Fraser, Mowat, O'Connor, Waters, and Harcourt. Messrs. Hardy and Meredith objected to it on the ground that it would be the cause of untold litigation, and this would have the effect of placing slandered women ira worse position than they were at present. The other gentlemen agreed with the bill, though they thought the provisions might be modified. The debate on the bill was adjourned.

Mr. Meredith asked if it was the intention of the Government to acquiesce in the recent decision of the High Court of Justice which held that certain provisions of the act to provide against frauds in the aupplying of milk to cheese or butter manufactories, were beyond the power of the legislature. Premier Mowat replied the Government would not acquiesce but would have an act passed in the legislature enabling them to appeal.

HAMILTON'S BURGLARS.

The Mystery of the Ing and Blanze Robbertes Cleared Ip.

Hamilton's, Feb. 7.—A couple of days ago Augustus Liddy, Wm. Doyle and Wm. Baird were tried at Cobourg for burglary and were each sentenced to five years in the Kingston penitentiary. The local detectives have succeeded in connecting these same crooks with the Ing and Blanze burglaries, which were committed on the nights of Jan. 14 and 16. The Ing burglary was a peculiar one, because about a week after it occurred half of the jewelry stolen was returned by two boys, who had been given a parcel on Vine-street with instructions to leave it at Ing's store. The other robbery was not a very extensive one, the thieves being satisfied with several bottles of wine and whisky and a couple of boxes of cigars.

The principal crook and leader of the gang was Augustus Liddy, a German, who came here about a year ago. He was discharged from the Kingston Penitentiary on Jan. 21, after serving four years for stealing a horse at Berlin. Liddy is a blonde, with curly hair, and is well educated, speaking French and German very fluently. When he first arrived here he boarded with a family who lived opposite the jail. He was also a time. He occasionally took trips to Toronto, remaining away several days at a time. He was one of the bodg guard which received Lord Stanley on his visit here. The det ives learned that Liddy and his partner, William Doyle, a Toronto thief whom he introduced as a law student, boarded at seven or eight different houses in this city. The morning after the Blaaze robbery they were then boarded in Parkstreet, and were somewhat behind in their board. They wanted to leave, and in order to secure herself the landlady kept their overcoats. Detective Reid afterwards searched the pockets of the overcoats and found a number of cigars similar to those which were stolen from Blaaze's hotel.

The detectives discovered that Liddy and Doyle had left here for Toronto, going from the tope that the burglars would call for it. Doyle and Liddy made somewhere in the city, but they wer afraid that the thieves would get away be fore they recovered it. On Doyle an Liddy wert found two of the shirta which were stolen from Mr. Blaaze.

The circumstances were as follows: On the night of Feb. 11, 1887, the tailor shop of Thomas Wilkinson, 159 Bay. Street, was feloniously entered, and several articles of wearing apparel carried off. Detectives traced the robbery to Thomas Jordan, who fied to Detroit, where a couple of months later, he was sent to State Prison for two years for burglarising a drug store. On the expiration of his term, Jordan returned to this city and fell into the clutches of the police when drunk. He then gave the name of George Billings.

ST. ANDREW'S CHURCH.

The Close of the Memorable Year in the History of the Congregation.

The congregation of St. Andrew's church turned out in large numbers last night to their annual congregational meeting. There was an unusual interest and enterest and ente thuslasm in the church work prevading the congregation as it was the close of a memorial year in their history and was the first annual meeting they could meet and know that they were free of debt. Rev. Alex. Bell, the pastor, occupied the chair.

After the opening exercises Rev. Mr. Bell presented the report of the church session which showed that they had began the year with 119 families in the congregation and now 121, and that there had been an increase of 18 in the number of communin in the church work prevading the crease of 18 in the number of communi cants, making a total of 218. The report said the attendance at the services during the year had been very good and urged the year had been very good and urged upon the people certain home arrangements so as to enable them to attend. The prayer meetings had been better attended then any previous year and the Sunday school was prospering remarkably.

The pews they were taken as read. The Treasurer's statement showed the amount raised for ordinary purposes to have been $3 215 36, and the society reports told of the flourishing condition of these branches of the church work.

The two vacancies which occur annually on the Board of Managers, were filled by the names of Dr. Bell and Mr. T. H. Best. Mr. Alex. W. Brodle, who was Secretary-Treasurer of the Managing Committee, resigned his position owing to his anticipated departure from town, and Mr. Wm. Thompson was elected to fill the office. The ladies of the church served tea in the school room between six and eight o'clock, which was excellently served and partaken of by a large number.

The Question of the Location Discussed—The Proposed Site Objected to.

To the Editor of the Review.

DEAR SIR,-Permit me to use your column to express my dissent as a ratepayer to the action of the School Board at its final meeting action of the School Board at its final meeting for the year 1888, re the proposed Collegiate Institute. Not that I object to the building, nor to the appropriation. On the contrary, I fully agree with the strongest advocate for advancement in this line, for not only do I think that the old building is inadequate to the present day requirements, and a more suitable one needed, but would desire to see one that we would all take a pride in; appropriate and in keeping with the growing prosperity and importance of our town. With that in view I submit that the appropriation is altogether too low.

As a young married citizen, I claim to have a voice in the selection of such a site. I have lived here all my life and proposes to spend the balance of my days.here. My views as shortly expressed are concurred in by numbers of prominent citizens.

Hon. Edgar Dewdney laid on the table of the Department of Indian Affairs. The report is a book of 250 pages and is very complete in its details. The Indian population of the Dominion in 1880 was 105,000, it is now 124,689. British Columbia has 37,944, Ontario 17,700, Quebec 12,465, Manitoba and the Northwest 28,368, the Athabasca District 8000, the Mackenzie district 7000, Eastern Rupert's Land 4016, the Arctic coast 4000, and the balance is scattered in other sections. There are 1974 Indian pupils attending school in Ontario, 445 in Quebec, 2941 in Manitoba and the Northwest, and 512 in British Columbia. Of the Indian population in Ontario 9479 are Protestants, 6273 are Roman Catholics and 1161 pagans. Of the 3862 Indians on the Grand River 2000 are Protestants and 862 pagans. The personal belongings and the value of the products of the Indians of Ontario for the year amounted to $137,949.

The report says: "In reviewing the condition of Indian matters in Ontario one cannot but feel that the position is certainly a gratifying one, but their progress would be very greatly enhanced were the facilities greater for imparting to the young, more generally than is now the case, thorough practical instruction in useful occupations, which would admit of their taking their places in the ranks of the Indian question would be greatly expedited in so far as this province is coucerned.

The general condition of the world at the pre-sent time would lead one to believe that man thought more of cash than of character, more of money than manhood, more of party than principle and more of time than of eternity. What was this power that ok hold of men? What name could they give it? It was the disease of avarice, an in-ordinate desire to gain wealth. This power was in society, it was creeping into the was in society, it was creeping into the church and going into the homes. It was not the miser's greed, but men wanted money for the good things that it would bring them. This principle was ruining our electorate to-day, and he said the man who was valued as a candidate for member was one who had plenty of money and knew how to spend it. He referred to the prac-tice of bribery at elections and said from what he had seen at three election trials it was shown that it was the drinker and the stead of elevating them they should des-pise them and in time they would get above these principles. In municipal elections every year the cry was "The taxes must be lowered," and the man, who got them lowered, it mattered not how, was the man elected. He was taken into the station and apparently had little life in him. A doctor was summoned, and after administering restoratives the man braced up slightly. He was kept in the cells and at the Police Court this morning gave his name as A. O'Leary, of Dindsay. The Magistrate discharged him.

SAVINGS SOCIETY.

There was organized in town last month, The audience that turned out last night to hear the Rey. G. W. Dewey lecture on "The Need of the Hour' filled the Opera House beyond its seating capacity. The meeting was held under the auspices of the W.C.T.U. The address of Rev. Mr. Dewey was a most plain and practical one, and the speaker gave his opinion of the usages they needed was to put their case in God's hands and leave it to Him. The lecture closed with another very pretty hymn.

LOCAL DIVINES SPEAK.

The lecture of the boom depends wholly upon the number of citizens who embrace the opportunity for becoming householders that hands and leave it to Him. The lecture what was needed to work a reform and drawing many a true picture.

Rev. P. (Pitton Parker occupied the chair and seated on the platform were Rev Messers. Pearson, A. C. Wilson and S. J. Shorey. After the opening hymn and prayer, the Chairman made a brief address referring to the work of the wellow the referred to the seott Act and repeated by the rapid strides that had been made in temperance work during the last twenty-live years.

Rev. Mr. Demzer in opening referred to the seen little boys and said he did not know what his audience expected of him but he intended to give them some plain facts, which in England they would recall a "respect they would for him but he intended to give them some plain facts, which in England they would shedy would recall a "respect they would for him but he intended to give them some plain facts, which in England they would she would take the opportunity to facilia "straight tip," or in the States "one from the shoulder," but which in Canada they would shed would take the opportunity to facilia "straight tip," or in the States "one from the shoulder," but which in Canada they would call a practical talk. He hoped that the meeting would be attended with good results. He asked everyone who thought of the meeting would be attended with good results. He asked everyone who thought of the metter must admit that "Although the Scott Act had not been tree closed with another very pictuty when and sead to the made a short and refered to the sounder the number of clizens who embrace the opportunity for becoming householders that is greated by the Scotlety. He said everyone who thought of the matter must admit that there was something wrong in the world to-day. There was one thing sure that until the youth of our country took in the relative value of character and cash, money and manhood, party and principle, time and eternity, they could never acthing in their power to make it a failure.

Rev. Mr. Dewey returned his thanks for the expressions of appreciation and by special request sang "Save the Boys" in touching style.

The doxology and benediction closed the meeting. system enables a person who can only have the small sum of $1 or $2 per month to have a place where he can deposit it with profit to himself, and it also enables the borrower to repay his loan in the easiest manner possible, by the monthly instalment plan. The following illustrations show how the chema works. A shareholder who has $250 desires to purchase a $1,250 house. He borrows $1,000 on five shares, for which he pays per month $5 as an investor, and $5 as a borrower, the first $5 going to a fund to accumulate to $200 like all other investors, and the latter being for the use of the loan. In addition he pays a premium of say 40 cents per share or $2 per month, which makes his total payments $12 per month—$144 per year. 10½ years at $144, $1,512; cash paid at time of purchase, $250; taxes say $10 j.er year, $105; insurance, say $1 per year, $10.50; total, $1,877.50. Deduct 10% years' rent at say $120, $1,260, which you would have paid to owner, and for $617 you have a house worth $1,250.

THE LOCAL SOCIETIES POSITION. The establishment of this society will have a most pronounced influence in giving a great stimulus to the building trade and on a most sound and healthy basis. The Peterborough society has already had 200 shares $200 each subscribed, on which are payable $1 per share per month. Any member of the society may take any number of shares, and it is expected that there will be a large attendance at the meeting of the society on Monday night next. Any person who is sufficiently interested in the concern is cordially invited to be present The mass books and necessary materials for the association have been ordered and the life of the organization in town is assured. The officers of the society are:-

Ly FERGUS W. HUME.

Sai was sient for a moment, and then looked up with a flush.
"You needn't think I'm going to split," see said, indignantly, recurring to her Bourke street slang in the excitement of the moment. "I know what you know, but s'elp me G——I'll be as silent as the grave."
"Thank you," said Brian, fervently, taking ber hand; "I know you love her too well to betray this terrible secret."

"I would be a nice un', I would," said Sal, with scorn, "after her lifting me out of the dead."

Calton looked up quickly. It was plain Sal was quite ignorant that Rosanna Moore was her mother. So much the better; they would keep her in ignorance, perhaps not altogether, but it would be folly to undeceive together, teleptone to the at present.

"I'm goin' to Miss Madga now," she said, going to the door, "and I won't see you again; she's getting lightheaded, and might let it out; but I'll not let any one in but myself," and so saying she left the room.

"Cast thy bread upon the waters," said Calton oracularly. "The kindness of Miss Frettlby to that poor waif is already bearing fruit—gratitude is the rarest of qualities, was even then indexty."

Fitzgerald made no answer, but stared out of the window, and thought of his darling lying sick unto death, and he could do noth-

"Well," said Calton, sharply.
"Oh, I beg your pardon," said Fitzgerald, turning in confusion. "I suppose the will must be read, and all that sort of thing."

Yourself and Chinston," answered Calton "so I suppose," turning to the desk, "we can look at his papers, and see that all is tained the whole narration of the crime and-how it was committed.

"We will read it, of course," he said, hesi-tating, half hoping that Calton would pro-pose to destroy it at once.

"Yes," answered Calton, "the three execu-tors must read it, and then—we will burn tors mist read it, and them—we will burn it."

"That will be the better way," answered Brian, gloomly. "Frettlby is dead, and the law can do nothing in the matter, so it would be best to avoid the scandal of publicity. But why tell Chinston?"

"We must," said Calton, decidedly. "He will be sure to gather the truth from Madge's ravings, and may as well know all. He is quite safe, and will be silent ar the grave. But I am more sorry to tell Klisp."

"The detective! Good God, Calton, surely you will not do so?"

"I must," replied the barrister, quietly. "Klisp is firmly persuaded that Moreland committed the crime, and I have the same dread of his pertinacity as you had of mine. He may find out all."

"What must be, must be," said Fitzgerald, elenching his hands. "But I hope no one claw will find out this miserable story. There's Moreland, for instance."

"Ah, true?" said Calton, thoughtfully. "He called and saw Frettlby the other night, you say?"

"Yes. I wonder what for?"

called and saw Erettlby the other night, you say?

"Yea. I wonder what for?"

"There is only one answer," said the barrister, slowly. "He must have seen Frettlby following Whyte when he left the hotel, and wanted hush money."

"I wonder if he got it," observed Fitz-cerald.

"I wonder if he got it," observed Fitzgerald.

"Oh, I'll soon find that out," answered Calton, opening the drawer again, and taking out the dead man's check book. "Let me see what checks have been drawn lately."

Most of the blocks were filled up with small amounts, and one or two for a hundred or so. Calton could find no large sum such as Moreland would have demanded, when, at the very end of the book, he found a check torn off, leaving the block slip quite blank.
"There you are," he said, triumphantly, holding out the book to Fitzgerald. "He wasn't such a fool as to write in the amount on the block, but tore the check out, and wrote in the sum required."

"And what's to be done about it?"

"Let him keep it, of course," answered Calton, shrugging his shoulders. "It's the only way to secure his silence."

"I expect he cashed it yesterday, and is off by this time," said Brian, after a moment's pause.

by the time sand brane, ander a moment pause.

"So much the better for us," said Calton grimly. "But I don't think he's oft, or Kilsip would have let me know. We must tell him, or he'll get everything out of Moreland, and the consequences would be that all Melbourne will know the story; whereas, by showing him the confession, we get him to leave Moreland alone, and thus secure silence in both cases."

"Did I ever eat muskrat!" said Deputy Register, James A. Visger to a reporter.

"Well, I should remark. It's the nicest, gamiest and most delicious meat you ever put into your mouth. But, you have to look out when you catch 'em. See that finger."

Mr. Visger held up the index finger of his right hand, It was all scarred and mutilated at the top.

"I had speared twenty-six muskrats that day, about thirty years ago. It was down on the river at Ecorse. When I speared one fellow I took hold of him by the head instead of the tail, and he nearly bit that finger off. But I would sooner eag one muskrat than five pounds of porterhouse-steak. When the boys used to go on a muskrat hunt in the old days, and catch fifteen or Twenty apiece, they would sit down in the muskrat houses and play cards, to see who would win the lot. At the meeting of the Civic Markets and Health Committee yesterday Governor Green, in answer to Ald. Davies' question in Council as to whether it was true that while the unfortunate 'drinks' were made to dig down the jail hill, those convicted of felonies were allowed to idle away time in the jail, stated that such was a fact. It unfortunately happened that the Government regulations forbade less than two guards to every six mea convicted of felony, and this was too great an expense. It would suggest that these men be made to walk around the jail yard all day with thie usual intervals of rest carrying weights. He could arrange this if two extra guards were appointed. One result of the work on the jail hill was that they could not be compelled to work if guilty of larceny, actually were beginning to steal-in order to save their muscle. The commisties determined to give the Governor the two extra guards, and endorse his intention of making the larcenists walk round.

The semi-annual meeting of the council of the Ontario College of Pharmicey was concluded yesterday, the most important matters being, in connection with the recent developments in which Mr. Pearen's name is mixed up. The Executive Committee reported, and recommended that the resignation of Mr. Pearen as a member of the council be accepted and that if possible his name be struck from the roll of membership, the committee being convinced that Mr. Pearen had done wrong in transferring his business to an undergraduste. The Council accepted the resignation but took no action as to the proposed striking off of Mr. Pearen's name, further action being deferred till the meeting next August.

At 11.30 last night a general alarm was sounded for an incipient blaze on the Esplande at the foot of Jarvis-street. In November, 1888, witness read the reports causing much laughter.

Lecaron said he had practised medicine and kept a drug store and had become rich. He had held a high military office in the brotherhood, but never an executive office. Bradley of Philadelphia was now at the head of the ex-cutive. The brotherhood in 1882 numbered 22,000. The membership is now higher and is increasing. The suppression of the League and the arrest of Irish members of Parliament gave an imputus to the organization. In 1881 both parties in the brotherhood were unanimous concerning outrages.

He may have been at Chicago last fall when I was thefe, and perhaps he was around when some of us were talking in sympathy with Parnell.

THE GRAND TRUNK PETITION.

A Revival of the Bostility With the Canadian Pacific Railway.

LONDON, Feb. 9.—The Grand Trunk petition to the Governor-General seems to be reviving all the hostility between the companies which it was hoped might now abate. The Canadian Pacific is sending broadcast Mr. Van Horne's letter defending the company. The preface remarks that but for its Untario lines the Canadian Pacific would be entirely at the mercy of the Grand Trunk, and the object of Parliannent in creating a Canadian transcentinental route would be hampered.

Meanwhile some-Grand Trunk holders are resenting what they regard as the Trunk's persistence in an aggrassive policy. The Trunk board yesterday issued correspondence between a holder named Gramshaw and Sir Henry Tyler. Gramshaw, speaking on behalf of himself and others, declares that Mr. Hickson's policy is an absolute failure, and says that many feel that the time has come for a change of managers in Canada. He suggests that Mr. Wainright succeed Mr. Hickson, and says there is no use talking about preventing the Canadian Pacific is there, and the Trunk must make the bestof it.

Sir Henry Tyler, in replying, refuses to take the criticisms seriously, and says Mr. Hickson's policy is the board's policy. He denies failure and predicts that Mr the rates are maintained and ovents prove favorable results will restore satisfaction.

Maritana at the Grand. The American Opera Company gave Maritana (which will be produced here on Monday evening) at the Grand Opera House, Toronto, last night and the Mail this morning says: "Vincent Wallace's opera 'Maritana' was preformed last night by the New American Opera Company with the above cast. There was a larger with the above cast. There was 'a larger audience than on the opening night, and the enthusiasm manifested was almost as great as that aroused by 'Lucia.' The opera was attractively mounted, and the introduction of a ballet of twelve young ladies, pupils of the American School of Opera at New York, proved a welcome variation from the mode in which the opera has been presented in Toronto in past years. Miss Alida Varena made a very favourable impression by her singing. She has a voice of very agreeable quality, and sang her music with great care. A decided success was made by Miss Lizzie MacNichol, who has a mezzo-soprano voice of a very sympathetic timber, and to form a Branch and at once proceed to organize. "Yes, of course. I will telegraph to him and Klisip to come up to my office this afternoon at 3 o'clock, and then we will settle the whole matter."

"That depends upon the will," replied Calton, dryly. "If it specifies that the money is left to 'my daughter, Margaret Frettiby.' Sai Rawlins can have no claim; and if such is the case, it will be no good telling her who she is."

"And a better."

"And what's to be done?"

"Sal Rawlins," went on the barrister, without noticing the interruption, "has evidently neaver given a thought to her father or mother, as the old hag, no doubt, swore they were dead. So I think it will be best to keep silent—that is, if no money is left to her, and, as her father thought her dead, I don't think there will be any. In that case, it would be best to settle an income on her. You can easily find a pretext, and let the matter rest."

"In that case," said Calton, gravely, "there is only one course open—she must be told everything, and the dividing of the money left to her generosity. But I don't think you need be alarmed; I'm pretty sure Madge is the befores."

DE MORTUIS NIL NISI BONUM.

Dr. Chinston had received Calton's telegram, and was considerably astonished thereat. He was still more so when, on arriving at the office at the time appointed, he found Calton and Fitzgerald were not alone, but a third man whom he had never seen was with them. This latter Calton introduced to him as Mr. Kikisp, of the detective office, a fact which began to make the worthy doctor uneasy, as he could not divine the meaning of the presence of a detective. However, he made-no remark, but took the seat handed to him by Mr. Calton and prepared to listen. Calton locked the door of the office, and then went back to his desk, having the other three rested before him in a kinfor'd semicircle.

"In the first place," said Calton to the doc-

"In the first place," said Calton to the doo-r, "I have to inform you that you are one the executors under the will of the late Mr. Frettlby, and that is why I asked you to come here today. The other executors are Fitzgerald and myself."
Oh, indeed," murmured the doctor, po-

"Nothing to do with the will," answered Calton, gravely, "but the fact is Mr. Fretilby was implicated in the affair."

Dr. Chinston glanced inquiringly at Brian, but that gentleman shook his head.

"It's nothing to do with my arrest," he

"It's nothing to do with my arrest, he said, sally,
"What do you mean?" he gasped, pushing back his chair. "How was he implicated?"
"That I cannot tell you," answered Calton, "until I read his confession."
"Ah?" said Kilsip, becoming very atten-

"Yes," said Calton, turning to Kilsip, your hunt after Moreland is a wild goose hase, for the murderer of Oliver Whyte is liscovered."
"Discovered." cried Kilsip and the doctor scovered!" cried Kilsip and the doctor breath. 'Yes, and his name is Mark Frettlby."

"Yes, and his name is Mark Fretthly."
Klisip shot a glance of disdain out of his right black eyes and gave a low laugh of nair furfously and arose to his feet.

"This is monstrous," he cried, in a raga. "I ron't sit still and hear this accusation

"Unfortunately, it is too true," said Brian, Ally.

"How dare you say so!" said Chinston, urning angrily on him. "And you going to narry his daughter!"
"There is only one way to settle the question," said Calton, coldly. "We must read his confession."

his confession."

"But why the detective?" asked the doctor, ungraciously, as he took his seat reluctantly.

"Because I want him to hear for himself that Mr. Frettliby committed the crime, and that he may keep it quiet."

"Not till I've arrested him," said Kilsip, leterminedly.

"But he's dead," said Brian.
"I'm speaking of Roger Moreland," retorted Kihsip. "For he and no other murdered Oliver Whyte."
"That's a much more likely story," Chin

"God knows I would like to preserve Mark Fretilby's good name, and it is with this object I have brought you all together. I will read the confession, and when you know the truth I want you all to keep silent about it, as Mark Frettlby is dead and the publication of his crime can do no good to any one." To be Continued,

A HOST OF DELEGATIONS.

CALL ON THE PREMIER OF ONTARIO

In the Freyline Advented.

Toronto, Feb. 9.—The House did not sit long yesterday; on its rising Mr. Mowat and his colleagues received a number of important deputations in the library, which was crowded on the occasion.

The Canadian Women's Enfranchisement Association had, for spokeswomen Mrs. Brethour, Mrs. Dr. Emily—Stowe, Mrs. Macdonnell and Mrs. Parker. Mrs. Dr. Stowe explained that the intention of their society was to extend to our women the right to vote in parliamentary as well as in municipal elections. Their privilege of municipal voting none would say had been abused. The exclusion of women from participation in government virtually classed them with infants, imbeciles and the insane. They asked for the ballot for all women on the same conditions as to men, but they would accept any portion of their request that honorable gentlemen would grant.

"Ladies," said the Premier, "I am delighted to have heard you. I am quite sure my colleagues share my delight. I have listened with the greatest possible Interest to the addresses that have been made here. They have been eloquent and forcible and, ladies, if anybody can answer the reasons you have given I cannot. (Applause.) As a practical politician, I do not say you can attain your object this year or next year; but I hope I shall remain long enough in office to be the instrument of its attainment. [Laughter.] The movement you urge is making great progress at least, in all the English speaking portion of the world. What has been done in municipal elections in this country has added strength to your arguments."

Mr. F. S. Spence was the spokesman of a delegation from the Dominion Alliance asking for amendments to the Crooks Act. Mr. Spence said the Alliance was anxious to have the Crooks Act improved so that liquor could not be sold to be drunk in barrooms, but would have to be consumed in the rooms of guests or off the premises; that those who wished to sell liquor should be compelled to produce a petition signed by eighty out of the hundred ratepayers shou ment to adopt a policy for further the construction of railways.

Mayor Gorham of Port Arthur spoke of the now well known mineral resources of the Algoma region, the value of which our American cousins had appreciated by buying of it largely. Extending further to the north and west of these regions were enormous timber tracts. If these lands were so valuable as to be contested before the Privy Council surely the Government would support those who were trying to open up the country.

After addresses with reference to the Manitoulin Island railway and the Parry Sound Colonization Railway the big James Bay railway scheme came up.

Mr. Ince explained that the proposed railway would run from North Bay to Lake Tamiscaming, thence to James Bay. "As a business matter," he urged, "it is worth while for the Government to assist this railway enterprise."

while for the Government to assist this railway enterprise."

Mr. Mowat: "I recognize the importnee of these objects and take much interest in the statements you have made in support of your various claims. The Government will carefully consider your proposals."

The bills to amend the Assessment Act this session are numerous. Yesterday Mr.
Balfour, in moving a bill to amend it explained that where assessments were made in July, August or September in a separate town or municipality, and when an addition is made to the town of a place where assessments are made on the lat of January there is no provision in the present law to collect the assessment. Mr. Balfour by his bill proposes to remedy this defect.

Mr. Balfour next pointed out a great abuse, which he said was often resorted to by deputy-returning officers, viz: marking abuse, which he said was often resorted to by deputy-returning officers, viz: marking ballots in order that in case of secrutiny they would be thrown out by the judge. Mr. Balfour's bill is to have the Election Act amended so as to have the ballots proveit to be so marked counted in favor of the candidate for whom they are cast.

Amongst the petitions yesterday presented was one by Mr. Wood of Brant, asking an act permitting George W. Hill to practice medicine. Hill is a Six Nation Indian, who has worked many successful cures amongst his tribe by the use of medicines made from roots and herbs. He has acquired a great reputation amongst his people, and the petition asking for the act is signed by 28 chiefs of the Six Nation and the president of the Council. They say that Hill is their "Great Medicine Man" and is very skilled in the treatment of diseases.

Again in Belicate Health.

Berlin, Feb. 9.—In the Lower House of the Prussian Diet to-day the Emperor's civil list bill passed the second reading after a debate in which the Progressiate emphatically protested against the increasing of the imperial allowance by 3,500,000 marks.
The minority had rine difficulty in proving that the wealth of the imperial family is already enormous, the Emperor having at his disposal not only his revenue of 13,250,000 marks but also other resources from extensive family domains. The supporters of the bill could not show any necessity for the increase of the imperial income, but rested their demand upon the argument that as the Emperor's functions and work were increasing his revenue ought to be enlarged.

The state of the Emperor's health is again delicate. With the renewal of severe weather the ear trouble has been aggravated. Dr. Bergmann has been aggravated. Dr. Bergmann has been specially summoned three times this week.
The constantly recurring caraches do not provent the Emperor's incessant pursuit of work. He rises at 5 o'clock. If he is unable to sleep during the night he writes notes on his work. He always keeps pencil and paper within reach of the bed. He makes his children share his own severe regime. The Princes are aroused at 6 o'clock, when they take a cold bath. They often breakfast with their father at 6.30 and their lessons begin at 7 o'clock. The Crown Prince has just attained his first grade in the army, having been appointed a corporal. He has now his

Both the Emperor and Prince Bismarck have held long conferences with Lord Charles Beresford, land the Emperor has given him and the chiefs of the German navy a banquet. During the interviews the conversation turned upon England's state of preparation for a war against the combined naval forces of France and Russia. Prince Bismarck, it is reported, advised Lord Charles that an Anglo-French war was nearly as probable as one between France and Germany, and that if the Boulanger clique saw a possibility of beating England by a sudden attack they would prefer the risk to taking the chances of the terrible results of defeat by Germany. Prince Bismarck declared his readiness to conclude a defensive alliance with England. He told Beresford to strongly represent to his Government the urgent necessity that England should put her house in order.

Snow has been falling incessantly since Wednesday throughout Central Germany, railway traffic is interrupted and several trains are imbedded in the snow. TROUBLES OF FLOQUET ... ANOTHER CRISIS IN FRANCE SAID T

BE IMMINENT.

To be Fought on Thursday.

PARIS, Feb. 10.—It is expected that the Chamber of Deputies will pass the scrutin d'arrondissement bill to-morrow after a short debate. The real issue between the Cabinet and the Opposition will be fought on the revision scheme Thursday. The fate of the Ministry is doubtful.

For the Sake of the Exhibition PARIS, Feb. 10.—The Chamber of Depu-les yesterday decided by a vote of 594 to 9 o consider the bill for the revision of the onstitution on Thursday. In his address to consider the bill for the revision of the constitution on Thursday. In his address to the Chamber M. Floquet informed the members that the Government would make both the scrutin d'arrondissement and the revision bills a question of confidence. The Cabinet, he said, thought the present Chamber should fulfil its mandate until the expiration of its legal term, thus assisting in the holding of the approaching exhibition in the meeting place of the nations.

Floquet's remarks were applauded.

Parisian Socialists' Demands.

Paristan Socialists Bemands.

Paristan Socialists From the Socialist revolutionary societies met at the Labor Exchange to-day and then proceeded to the residences of Premier Floquet, M. Mellie, and M. Leroyer, President of the Senate, leaving at each house a copy of the resolution adopted by the workmen's conference at Bordeaux. The resolutions demand reductions of the daily working hours, the fixing of minimum rates of wages to correspond with the minimum expenses of workmen in each locality, prohibition of manual labor by piece work, etc.

Extensive police precautions had been taken in the neighborhood of the Elysee Palace and the Palais Du Bourbon for fear of an Anarchist riot. The services of the police were not required, however, as no disturbance of any kind occurred. The delegates declared their intention to wait upon M. Floquet and the Presidents of the parliamentary bodies on Feb. 24, to receive their replies. Similar deputations called upon the prefects of Lyons, Bordeaux and Maraeilles and presented their demands. In reply the prefects said the Government was already considering many of these demands, while others had no substantial foundation. The workmen, they said, must not expect everything to be settled by Feb. 24th.

The workmen, they said, must not expect everything to be settled by Feb. 24th. Finally they begged the deputation to exer-cise their influence-to avert disorder. LONDON, Feb. 10.—Mr. Kent, landlord of the Gloucester Hotel at Swanses, was killed by a burglar this morning. He retired with his wife late last night, after locking all the doors including those of his bedroom. Early this morning the wife heard a match struck in the room and saw a negro lighting a candle. She awoke her husband and he grappled with the intruder while his wife took a pistol from underneath the pillow. As it was too dark to take aim she lighted a candle. She then fired and the negro fell wounded in the thigh. Cursing the woman he crept under the bed, but as she was unlocking the door he emerged and threw a mirror at her. It missed her, but extinguished the light and the negro escaped. When she re-lighted the candle she discovered that her husband's throat was cut with a razor. Kent lived long enough to describe the murderer. An alarm was raised and about noon the negro was discovered at a dry dock badly wounded and covered with blood. He is a seaman named Tom Allen.—He said his motive was robbery. He concealed himself in the room before the house was closed on Saturday night.

Washington, Feb. 10.—No information has been received at the State Department in regard to the appointment of a British Minister to this country. The department has, however, been informed that Mr. Edwards, first secretary of legation at Washington, who has been in London for sometime, has sailed for this country. On his arrival here he will assume charge of the affairs of the legation. His return at this particular time is understood by certain officials to mean that there is so immediate prospect of the appaintment of a successor to Sackville.

Mr. Oliver, who was walking and within half a mile of his hone, was ordered by one of the men who jumped out of the cutter and held a pistol at his head, to deliver up his money. Mr. Oliver, who was unarned, had to hand over the $600 of taxes he had in his possession which he had just collected during the day. TORONTO TOPICS.

TORONTO, Feb. 11.—It will be remembered that when the Cardwell election petition was called for trial at Orangeville the other day, Thomas Smith, the petitioner, withdrew and Samuel Stubbs, the brother of the defeated candidate, applied to be substituted as petitioner, alleging that a corrupt arrangement had been arrived at by the original petitioner and the respondent for the dismissal of the petition. The application was enlarged to be heard at Osgoode Hall before Judge Street. On Saturday Mr. Aylesworth asked that the name of Stubbs be substituted for that of Smith.

Mr. Patterson appeared to oppose his clienty. Stubbs be substituted for that of Smith.
Mr. Patterson appeared to oppose his client's (Smith) 31000 deposit being retained in court, which is a part of the application.
Mr. D'Alton McCarthy argued to oppose the substitution of the new petitioner; Samuel Stubbs. The case was again adjourned until 10 o'clock two weeks from Thursday.

A MAN WHO WOULD SHOOT

LECARON APPEARS IN THE WITNESS-BOX.

Denials of Various Portions of Denials of Various Fertions of Bis Testimony Coming in Fast.

London, Feb. 10.—Complaint of dulness of the Parnell Commission proceedings has suddenly ceased. Nobody disputes the interest and importance of Major Lecaron's evidence, which has occupied the whole week. He is by his own admission a spy; in his own view a military spy. He has been in the secrets of the Fenians and other extreme Irish sections in America, a member of their societies, trusted by them, and all the while in the pay of the British Government. His evidence, taken as a whole, is intended to show that the Irish Parliamentary party, with Mr. Parnell at their head, were cognizant of the doings of the Invincibles and dynamiters, and connected with them. Mr. Davitt, of course, is included. So is Mr. O'Kelly, whose share was an active one. So is Mr. Egan, whose close connection with the Invincibles is again asserted. He represents Mr. Egan as saying that Mr. Parnell is a revolutionist to the backbone. Mr. Egan and indiction of the House of Commons he had long ceased to believe anything but arms would ever bring about the redemption of Ireland. Mr. Parnell, too, was for bringing into line the League and Clan-na-Gael erganizations, and this, according to the witness, was done in 1881.

Major Lecaron gave many details of conventions, secret committees and immer circles held by different Irish sections in America, showing apparently complete familiarity with the working of the Irish-American machine. Mr. Alexander Sullivan figures-prominently in these scenes. So do Mr. Finnerty, Mr. John Boyle O'Reilly of Boston; Dr. Gallagher, the dynamiter, now serving out a life sentence in an English prison; Mr. Egan, over and over again; Mr. Sheridan and many others. Mr. Egan described to Major Lecaron his escape from Ireland, antireresting narrative. Original documents issued by all these Irish-American societies were produced in large numbers, documents the genutineness of which seems not to be questioned. The defendants admit Major Lecaron's story to be true Testimony Coming in Fast.

to see him, and a brilliant audience.—He was perfectly cool, collected, deliberate and keen; never allowed himself to be hurried, never lost his temper when pressed; seldom made a mistake, and scored off his tormentor more than once. The critical part of the cross-examination is yet to come. Major Lecaron is guarded by five detectives. A bystander said to him yesterday: "You will take a good deal of guarding." Answered Major Lecaron: "I have carried my life in my hands for twenty-five years. Do you suppose I am afraid of these fellows now?" He looks like a man who would shoot quick.

Lecaron's Army Record. hecaren's Army Record.

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 10, —Inquiry here shows that the claim of Lecaren to have been a major in the Union Army and to have served in Gen. Anderson's and Gen. Buell's body guards is false. He was chief bugler of a cavalry company which was intended as a body guard for Anderson and afterwards for Buell, but which never acted in that capacity. Lecaren finally became a first Lleutemant in a colored regiment, but never held a higher office.

DETROIT, Feb. 10.—Ex-Senator Jones of Florida yesterday received the following cablegram:

LONDON, Feb. 10.—Notwithstanding a heavy snow storm, the demonstration in Hyde Park to-day, to denounce the Government's coercive measure in Ireland, and to express sympathy with William O'Brien, was successfully carried out. Thousands of citizens, chiefly from the workingmen's and Radical clubs, attended the meeting, marching to the park through the storm with hands and banners. Speeches were delivered from twelve platforms. The speakers denounced the Government generally and Mr. Balfour especially. A resolution put simultaneously at all of the platforms and carried amid great cheering declared that:

"The citizens of London condemn the brutal policy of coercion, profest against the Government's uncivilized treatment of political prisoners and demand the release of Irish patriots whose only crime is the exercise of the ordinary rights of free speech."

The, Socialists occupied one platform, which was displayed a banner with the inscription:

REMEMBER CHICAGO.

The speakers at this platform also de-nounced landowners and capitalists. Per-fect order was maintained and the host of policemen present had nothing to do except to regulate traffic.

Molley's Trial.

LONDON, Feb. 10.—The case of Patrick Molloy, charged with having given false testimony before the Parnell Commission, was resumed in the Bow-street Police Courty vesterday. Patrick Delaney testified that Patrick Egan, while treasurer of the League, was a Fenian and Invincible. He was the organiser of the League, the League originated the Invincibles. Byrne, the secretary of the League, was an Invicible, as was also Matt Harris, who was a leading member of the League. The Invincibles received funds from the League through Egan. "No. 1" used also to bring money. The League officers supplied the Invincibles with firearms, knives and daggers. Witness saw Molloy in the League offices.

On cross-examination Delaney said he joined Albe Fenians in 1868. Afterwards he was in prison for five years, having been convicted of highway robbery. Byrne attended the councils of the Invincibles and named the persons to be murdered. Witness had

A PART OF THE PLAN. A PART OF THE PLAN.

SIR BYCHARD CARWRIGHT will invite the Canadian Parliament to ask the Imperial authorities for power to make commercial trasties direct with foreign nations. Canadia is not suffering because it has not this power. Great Britain does not make treaties that affect this country without obtaining the consent of the Canadian Parliament. She sees that a Canadian has a voice in the negotiation of treaties dealing with Canadian matters. And when a treaty is made the power of Great Britain a voice in the negotiation of the day and when a treaty is made the power of Great Britain is behind the Dominion in seeing that it is respected, An the case of the Washington treaty Sir John Macdonald was a member of the Commission, and when the recent and abortive fisheries treaty was negotiated Sir Charles Tupper sat with Mr. Chamberland and Lord Sackville, having equal power with them. And the treaties were not binding on this country until they were sanctioned by the representatives of the people. This country is not forced into bargains that it does not wish to enter into. What more is wanted?

We'l, Sir Richard asks that Canada' be given the power to make treaties without

Well. Sir Richard asks that Canada' be given the power to make treaties without Great Britain assenting to them. As it is now, the Mother Country and this country have a voice in the matter. Under Sir Richard's plan Great Britain would have nothing to say. But would Great Britain feel bound to—would Canadians ask her to—give her influence or her power to secure the anforcement of treaties as to which she ent of treaties as to which she had no voice in making? She would not be a party to them and would then have nothing to do with them.

It is clear that the Liberal party desire this power solely for the purpose of making treaties with the United States. They do not sek for commercial arrangements with any other country. They laugh at endea-ors to make arrangements with other countries. They advocate a commercial combination with the United States and against all other countries, including Great Britain. Such a combination—the com-mercial union scheme—would be involved in details and likely to cause disputes When trouble arose could we turn to Great Britain to aid us in securing our rights under a bargain by which, in making it, we under a bargain by which, in matring it, we struck a direct blow at her interests? No, and if we did it is easy to know the reply we would deserve and would receive. Canada desires and needs Great Britain's aid; she should not refuse Great Britain a voice in making the treaties and should accept her assistance then, especially as nothing is lost but much gained by doing so. The dealings of the United States with weaker countries is not such as to inspire confidence in that nation. When the nation that offends the eagle is Hayti the United-Blates may is ready to leave its shelter and proceed to the attack. Mr. Mowat said recently that the United States was as a recently that the United States was as a nation hostile to Canada. And Sir Richard Cartwright wishes to place Canada in a position separate from Great Britain in order that a treaty may be made with that nation. Would it be a judicious—would back her depresents attention for the canada and control of the care that the care it not be a dangerous—step to take?

This motion put forward by Sir Richard is a part of the plan for weakening the ties that bind Canada to the mother land, and for drawing the Dominion closer to the United States and making it dependent upon the Republic. Another part of the plan in unrestricted reciprocity or commercial union.

"RED-NOSED MIKE" ON TRIAL.

He Tells the Story of the Wilkesba Tragedy—Bis Accomplies Arrested.

Wilkesbare, Pa., Feb. 10.—The trial of "Red-Nosed Mike" Rezzllo was continued yesterday and the murderer took the stand. His story was the narration of one of the most terrible orimes ever conceived in the brain of man and executed by human hands. His bearing on the stand at times was indicative of that bravade and confidence that must have belonged to his guilty heart from the start, but when he came to the shooting of the two innocent men in the mountain fastness he completely brok down. His swarthy complexion, burnt by an Italian sun, became pale as death and tears coursed in a steady stream down his cheeks. His voice was choked. He managed, however, to say that he took no part in the killing.

GLADSTONE AND ROME.

Why the G. O. M. Resigns His Contemplated Visit to the Elevant City.

New York, Feb. 9. —The Catholic News has the following from Rome: Your correspondent has been informed by an unimpeachable authority that Gladstone will not come to Rome and that he resigns his contemplated visit to the Eternal City at the express wish of the Italian Government and in accordance with carnest requests from parsons high in the diplomatic service of England. Since the announcement made by the Grand Old Man some weeks ago that he would call on the Pope while in Rome, Signor Crispi has brought all the inituence he could command to make Mr. Gladstone change his hind or return to England without visiting Rome.

One of the Pope's domestic prelates explains this move in a very plausible way: "This is only another proof," said he, "that the Italian Government fears the influence of Leo XIII. on the minds of men who come into personal contact with him. Everyone recalls how the Government succeeded in having the interview between Leo XIII. and Emperor William cut short. This time it was feared that Gladstone might sanction an appeal to the nations and give countenance to a scheme which it is known the Holy Father has in view."

Ten Fine Farms Sold by the Sheriff-Farm READING, Pa., Feb. 10.—The sheriff of Berk's County yesterday sold ten fine farms in this county aggregating nearly 1000 acres. During the present winter the sheriff has sold some 20 other large farms besides the stock of twenty farmers, all of which have failed. This indicates that farming no longer pays, as a similar state of affairs exists in other counties in this section of the state.

Saveral other members of the gang are yest to be apprehended.—It took about twenty-five officers to make the arreats, as the men are desperate characters. The band was regarded as one of the most dangerous and successful in the country. Thousands upon thousands of dollars of bogus coin have been passed in different states by the counterfeiters.

Puddlers Wages Reduced.

READING, Pa., Feb. 10.—The Brooke Ron Company of Birdsboro, have reduced the wages of their puddlers from $3.25 to $3 per ton. This is the lowest figure paid since the panic. Nearly 200 men are affected and they do not seem inclined to accept. The mills at Pottstown and other places recently made similar reductions.

where Mr. Stratton is introducing amendments to the Municipal Act and Public School Act, might he not try to remedy a defect in the law by asking the Legislature to fix a penalty for violation of section 57 of the High School Act? By not having the change retroactive, and by obeying the law hereafter, he could escape the penalty.

Mr. Mowar says the Legislature may be asked to pass a Cheese Factory Act to take place of the one adopted last session. If Mr. Mowat is an infallible constitutional lawyer should he not have known that the act he placed on the statute book was beyond his authority to enact? That he did not know it is shown by the fact that he was only aware of it after the court decided that Mr. E. B. Edwards was right in contending that the act was ultra vires.

An Old Relident of Eramosa Found on a Beel of fee.

Gubler, Jan. 10.—A horrible story of suffering was brought to the city yesterday by two residents of Eramosa. Robert Burton, who lives on the second line of that township in a house with one George Snelling, is the victim of the sad affair. The two men have the contract of cutting a quantity of wood on the farm of George Best. They ran out of provisions on Wednesday night and Burton started for Mitchell's store in Eramosa to secure a fresh supply. On the return journey the unfortunate man lost his way, and after wandering about for some time became exhausted and lay down on the ice near Alonzo Birge's mill. His limbs became helpless with the cold, and he could not raise himself again, and was compelled to remain where he had fallen till assistance came. In the morning Messrs. Birge and James McIntosh noticed the man and went to his assistance. He was found to be very weak, and his hands and feet were badly frozen.

Moore, the Indianapolis defaulter, was connected; Dan Hurt and Jackson's son had been in the bar drinking and indulging in some boisterous language and were asked to leave. Out on the sidewalk the quarrel was renewed and Hunt strove to pacify them, when Scribner drew a knife and plunged it into Jackson's abdomen. The latter raised his cane and struck Scribner over the nose and, with a yell, "I'm stabbed," fell to the ground. An examination disclosed an ugly wound about two inches in length at the left side of his abdomen, which may prove fatal. Scribner was arrested.

SEVEN DRUNKS IN COURT.

The Police have a Busy Sunday—An Unfortunate Woman. When Magistrate Dumble took his seat in the magistrate's chair at the Police Court this morning there was an imposing look-ing row seated on the prisoner's bench-five men, one woman and a little boy. This was the harvest the police had gathered or

A POOR PLACE TO BORROW.

Robt. Miston was the first one called up to the bar. He was charged with having been drunk and disorderly on Sunday after-noon. He pleaded not guilty, and the Chief was sworn to prove the charge. It appeared that Miston came into the police station about five o'clock yesterday aftermoon to borrow a revolver to shoot a dog and when told that his room would be far more pleasant than his company he became indignant and abusive and was locked up. A unrecognizable mass of battered tin which was said to have once been a pail was brought into court as svidence to show the wildness of the prisoner's conduct in the cells. Carsival Views.

Mr. R. M. Roy, the enthusiastic amateur photographer, was in Montreal last week and secured a number of views in connection with the carnival. Among them are two views of the ice palace. One is taken from the north-west, looking towards St. Peter's Cathedral and showing part of that edifice. The other is from the south-west corner, showing the Windsor hotel. The pictures are very accurate and each block of fee in the palace is plainly distinguishable. Another picture shows the Trappeur anow shoe club in their car in the carnival drive, and another carnival drive view drive drive drive drive drive drive dr vent and it was the same at Calgary and Prince Albert. Yesterday morning Rev. A. B. Chambers, LLB, occupied the pulpit of the Charlottest. Methodist church and preached a missionary sermon. The rev. gentleman based his discourse on the words:

THE EVENING SERVICE.

In the evening the annu little Methodist. as did the stars when the sun rose, when they contemplated the great scheme of re-demption, and the speaker in striking language dwelt upon the plan of re-demption and its results. The students were the celestial beings—the seven classes of angels—and they learned through the church the wisdom of God. These stude were in heavenly places, in the presence of God, and were pure spirits and intelligent students. What must be their knowledge, of the honor due the workers in the mission ary fields.

A MISSIONARY'S ADDRESS.

Rev. Mr. Maclean addressed the congregation for over an hour and that he insterested his hearers was plainly evident from the attentive and interested manner in which his remarks were listened to. He object of their worship was God; and they object of their worship was God; and they were benevolent students, for they learned that they might communicate. He believed that in some way they were benefitted by Christ's death. The preacher closed with a reference to the love of God.

While the subscription envelopes were being distributed, Mr. Wilson said that he believed tens of thousands of dollars were kept out of God's treasury because people would not give anything when they could not give as much as they would like. Sixsevents of the money raised by the Metho-dist Church for missionary purposes was made up of contributions of from between 25 cents and 20 dollars. He urged them to

The case was argued before Street, J., in court on the 1st February, 1889, and judgment was delivered on the 9th February.

ing the words " male issue " as being re stricted to sons are greater that those which arise when the words are given their prima facia meaning as including the whole line of descendants to an estate in tail male would go. If the will is treated as giving, by force of the rule in Shelley's case, an estate in tail male to Richard Batten, then the eldest son and his male desendants take the same estate in due course of descent from Richard Batten. and upon failure of the estate in them, the second and other sons and their male descendants take in the same way, unless the estate tail is barred, either by Richard Batten or some one of the persons who

This is the construction which I think should be placed upon the will, and I therefore certify and declare that in my opinion Richard Batten, upon the facts stated is entitled to an estate in the lands in question as tenant in tail male.

The Mystery of a Hansom Cab

Ly PERGUS W. HUME. "I know," resumed Calton, addressing the detective, "that you are fully convinced in your own mind that you are right and I am wrong, but what if I tell you that Mark Prettiby died holding those very papers for the sake of which the crime was committed?"

Rusip's face lengthened considerably.

"What were the papers?"

"The marriage certificate of Mark Frettlby and Rosanna Moore, the woman who died in

"What!" cried Klisip.

"Yes; Moreland, in coming out of the hotel, evidently saw Frettlby, and threatened to expose him unless he paid for his silence."

"Very strange," murmured Klisip to himself, with a disappointed look on his face.
"But why did Moreland keep still so long?"
"I cannot tell you," replied Calton, "but no doubt the confession will explain all."

"Then for heaven's sake read it," broke in Dr. Chinston, impatiently, "I'm quite in the dark, and all your talk is Greek to me."

"One moment," said Klisip, dragging a bundle from under his chair, and untying it," "if you are right, what about this?" and he held up a light cost, very much soiled and ald up a light coat, very much soiled and weather worn.

"Whose is that?" asked Calton, startled.
"Not Whyte's?"
"Yes, Whyte's," repeated Kilsip, with great satisfaction. "I found it in the Fitzroy gardens, near the gate that opens to George street, East Melbourne. It was up in a fir tree."

"Then Mr. Frettlby must have got out at Powlett street, and walked down George street, and then through the Fitzroy gardens into town," said Calton.
Klisip took no heed of the remark, but took a small bottle out of the pocket of the coat a small bottle out of the pocket of the coat and held it up.

"I also found this," he said.
"Chloroform," cried every one, guessing at once that it was the missing bottle.
"Exactly," said Klishp, replacing it. "This was the bottle which centained the poison used by—by—well, call him the murderer. The name of the chemist being on the label, I went to him and found out who bought it. Now, who do you think?" with a look of triumb.

"No, Moreland!" burst sut Chinston, greatly excited.

"Neither," retorted the detective, calmly. "The man who purchased this was Oliver Whyte himself."

"Himself." echoed Brian, now thoroughly surprised, as, indeed, were all the others.

"Yes. I had no trouble in finding out that, thanks to the Poison act.' As I knew no one would be so foolih as to carry chloroform about in his pocket for any length of time, I mentioned the day of the murder as the probable date it was bought. The chemist turned up his book and found that Whyte was the purchaser."

"And what did he buy it for!" asked Chin-

"That's more than I can tell you," said Kil-sip, with a shrug of his shoulders. "It's down in the book as being bought for medici-nal uses, which may mean anything." "The law requires a witness," observed Cal-ton, cautiously. "Who was the witness?" Again Kilaip smiled triumphantly. "I think I can guess," said Fitzgerald. "Moreland!"

"Moreland?"
Klisip nodded.
"And I suppose," remarked Calton, in a slightly sarcastic tone, "that is another of your proofs against Moreland. He knew that Whyte had chloroform on him, therefore he followed him that night and murdered him?"
"We a lot of second and the state of th

"Well, I"—
"It's a lot of nonsonse," said the barrister impatiently. "There's nothing against Moreland to implicate him. It's he killed Whyte, what made him go and see Frettlby?"
"But," said Kilsip, sagely nodding his head, "if, as Moreland says, he had Whyte's coat in his possession before the murder, how is it that I should discover it afterwards up a fir tree in the Fitzroy gardens, with an empty chloroform bottle in the pocket?"
"He may have been an accomplice," suggested Calton.
"What's the good of all this conjecturing?" said Chinston impatiently, how thoroughly tired of the discussion. "Read the confession, and we will soon know the truth, without all this talk."

sion, and we will shoot and out all this talk."

Calton assented, and all having settled themselves to listen, he began to read what the dead man had written.

CHAPTER XXXIII.

"What I am now about to write is set forth by me so that the true circumstances connected with the 'Hansom Cab Tragedy,' which took place in Melbourne in 18-, may be known. I owe a confession, particularly to Brian Fitzgerald, seeing that he was accused of the crime. Although I know he was rightfully acquitted of the charge, yet I wish him to know all about the case, though I am convinced, from his altered demeanor towards me, that he is better acquainted with it than he chooses to confess. In order to account for the murder of Oliver Whyte, I must go back to the beginning of my life in this colony, and show how the series of events began which culminated in the committal of the crime.

"Should it he necessars to write series of the committal of the crime.

A TRAMP'S PHILOSOPHY.

Men Who Are Claimed by the Fraternity—The Good Qualities Possesse Genuine Article of Tramp-Foolish Prejudice Against Dirt.

"Yes, I am a tramp, pure and simple. Ashamed of it, do you ask? Why should I be?" The most wretched man that ever invaded the domain of the Bridewell was not sorrier the domain of the Bridewell was not sorrier looking or dirtier than the invidual who spoke these words. He stopped The Herald reporter on his way home near the corner of Wells and Kinzie streets, to ask for a quarter. The reporter, after rapidly taking in the healthy looking form of the beggar, denounced him as a tramp, and was about to pass on when he was arrested by the words quoted, which were uttered in tones of wondrous richness.

"There are tramps and tramps," said the man, not the least disconcerted. "I grant you there are men of my calling who violate the eighth commandment. So, doubtless, there are men of yours, whatever itemay be. The Saviour had his Iscariot, but shall you say in consequence that Peter, John and Bartholomew were traitors and scoundrels?"

eration?"
"A thousand might readily be named. What was Jacob when he fled from the wrath of Esau, and raised his bethel in the robber infested wilderness! Have you not heard of Cadmus, the Phoenician, who introduced letters into Europe? His restless spirit caused him to sail up and down the Mediternaneau, and, doubtless, oftentimes to go far out upon the swollen waters of the guest Atlantic. Going back in history, is there not Moses, who for forty years tramped to and fro out upon the swollen waters of the great Atlantic. Going back in history, is there not Moses, who for forty years tramped to and froin the desert, idle and indifferent, gathering his food as it fell from the clouds? Pompey, Cesar and Anthony were very princes of tramps, betaking themselves here and there, wherever there was novelty of scenery or rich treasuries to be despoiled. Columbus was a very illustrious member of my confraternity, dying as he lived, as veritable a nomad as the swart Arabs of the sandy wastes of the old world. The spirit of the rover was stamped indelibly on Napoleon, so that not even the seductive blandishments of an imperial court could enchain him within the precincts of Paris, the beautiful. Tramps! he continued, after a very brief pause, raising his voice and talking rapidly. "What but tramps were Cook, "Magellan, Behring, Dr. Kane, Gordon Cummin, Livingstone, Stanley and the entire army of travelers and vayageurs. What are you, sir?" he asked sharply, turning upon the reporter.
"Precisely," he continued after he had been truthfully answered. "I had thought as much. Let me tell you that honored as your calling. I do not fear to enter the lists with you and volunteer to name a Roland of a distinguished tramp for every Oliver of an illustrious journalist you may recall."
"What quality, for instance, do you possess that fits you to be classed with the long line of illustrious individuals whom you have named?"
"It might name a thousand had you time."

sess that fits you to be classed with the long line of illustrious individuals whom you have named?"

"I might name a thousand had you time or patience to bear. Primarily I am educated. The child of wealthy parents, I had, first, a private tutor; then instruction in an academy, and finally I completed the full course at one of our leading universities. I am now 36. Until three years since, when I entered the large army of which I am now a member, I was a great reader, devouring all kinds of books that came in my wäy. Since I began my travels I have not read books so earnestly, because of the petty prejudice of vulgar minds, which decline to come in close contact with men who are, as I am, a trifle negligent in their attire.

"It is all a mattex of taste. I am not sympathetic. My father being rich I was raised in luxury and became selfish. I never employed my mind in aught but reading, and was trained to esteem all mankind as robbers ready to prey upon me and all the other sections of wealth. The old gentleman, my sire, in his declining years went on Wall street, and in a year his great fortune was swallowed up. He was so silly as to be honest and refused to save aught from the wreck. The mortification of the thing killed him and my mother, both dying within a month after his failure. My jewels, fine clothes and the thousand or two of pocket money my father had given me kept me in idleness for four or five months. One morning I awoke to the fact that I was absolutely penniless and friendless. After mature deliberation I resolved to let the world rowded with beggars? Do not grave senators beg their seats? Is there an officeholder in all this broad land who does not own his place to his pitcous pleadings? Did you ever attend a church that falled to shove a contribution box under your nose? Is

"Those men, however, give something in return."

"While I do the same thing. All systems of religion declare it is more blessed to give than to receive. Why, I declare to you that full a thousand times my own heart has beaten with gladness as I have seen the happiness upon the face of a good woman after she had passed over to me food I had asked for. These good people are trained to believe that he who gives to the poor lends to the Lord, and when they give to me they fully believe they are laying up treasures in heaven.

"It is true the tramp is dirty, but Diogones, who was a philosopher of some merit, though he lived in a tub never used one for bathing purposes. His garments were not as respectable as mine, nor was his person as cleanly. If you were a reader of theological history you would know that the Eastern bishops present at the first Nicene council, which met to discuss and settle the matter of the divinity of Christ, were so fithy in their habits and so afflicted with vermin that the Western bishops sat apart from them in the council chamber. Yet were Diogeness and those bishops famous, despite their lack of personal cleanliness. The Russian people are decidedly averse, as a class, to water. Yet Russia is a great nation. There is too great prejudice against dirt, anyway, since out of it comes all our food, and, indirectly, our raiment."

Jane Connolly was called into the witness box at the Police Court yesterday to give evidence against her husband, James Connolly, who, three weeks ago on Saturday night, assaulted her in a ferocious manner, inflicting injuries of such a serious nature that her life was despaired of. She only left the hospital for the first time since the assault yesterday morning. Mrs. Connolly, as in similar cases, pleaded for her husband, and accepted all blame in the matter and said she provoked him. He was given an extra five days.

John Spence, the Central Prison guard, who is accused of robbing the prison, was called before the magistrate yesterday, who found him guilty and sentenced him to 60 days in jail. Edward R. Cates, foreman of the Brandon works, received the same sentence.

John P. Hockin, foreman in the machine shop at the Central, on a similar charge was remanded for a week, bail being re-

Judgment was delivered yesterday by Mr. Justice Falconbridge in Ball v. Woodstock. This is the case in which the plaintiff applied for an injunction to restrain the defendant corporation and a Mr. Morrison from carrying out out a contract for the electric lighting of the town of Woodstock. The case was heard at the last Woodstock assizes. Judgment was given in the plaintiff's favor with costs against the defendant Morrison.

The detective department has good reason to specific a ground of a big haul which two of their officers made yesterday. Wellington, west of Bay. There they succeeded in making a saizure of fully $500 worth of stolen property, the outcome of many robberies, dating some of them one year back. The booty consisted in great part of robes, cutlery, jewelry, purses, boots, canvas bags, canvas, overoests, pants and horse blankets. The police have identified among the spoil Fred Wort's $150 wolverine robe, stolen on Jan. 25, 1888; a canvas tarpaulin stolen from the Warren-Schaffe Co. on No. 1, 1888, a canvas hose belonging to the same firm and

JACK THE RIPPER AT LAST

The Avrest of Mer [Musband Who is Probably the London Butcher.

London, Feb. 11.—A sensation has been caused at Dundee by the finding today by the police of the mutilated body of a woman. The abdomen was ripped up and the body squeezed into a wooden chest. It is thought by many to be the handiwork of "Jack the Ripper." The woman's husband has been arrested.

A despatch from Dundee says the murderer of the woman whose mutilated remains were found in a cheat to-day is W. W. Bury, the victim's husband. Bury was a resident of Whitechapel, London, and his antecedents suggest that he is subject to fits of unconscious murder mania. The post-mortem proved that the woman had first been strangled and then her body mutilated, the abdomen being ripped open and the legs and arms twisted and broken. Bury says he left Whitechapel three weeks ago. He refuses to say why he left there. He says he and his wife dramk heavily last night and he does not know how he got to bed. Upon awakening he found his wife upon the floor with a rope around her neck. Actuated by a sudden unaccountable mad impulse he saized a knife and slashed the body. Upon resson returning he became alarmed and hastily crushed the body into the chest, thinking to escape. He found he could not leave his wife's remains and finally resolved to inform the police.

The theory of the police is that Bury a wife knew of facts connecting him with the East End atrocities and that she took him to Dundee hoping to prevent a recur rence of the crimes.

THE ONTARIO LEGISLATURE.

The Voters' Lists Act—Prisons and Public Charities Report.

Toronto, Feb. 72.—There was another brief session of the Legislature yesterday. The Provincial Inspector presented the 19th annual report of the Inspector of Prisons and Public Charities on the Provincial Hospitals. The number of cases treated in all the hospitals during the past year was $292, being an increase of 70 over the preceding year. Ten years ago the number of cases treated was 4612. The number of cases treated last year showed an increase over the preceding year in almost all the hospitals, There were but three exceptions, viz: The City Hospital, Hamilton, with a decrease of 70, and the St. Catharines Hospital with a decrease of 12.

The table showing the collective stay of patients in all the hospitals during the past year made a total of 252, 216 days as against 242, 410 in 1887, an increase not in proportion to the large number of patients, as the average stay per patient dropped from 32, 25 days to 30.55. and Dr. Sproule also took issue with the motion.

The debate will be resumed to-day, Mr. Macdonald of Huron having the floor.

There were several important questions down on the paper yesterday, the most important being those relating to the rumored invitation of the Parliament of Canada to take a free trip through the United States with free lunch, free sleeping cars and free whisky thrown in, and that referring to a reduction of the postage to two cents.

Mr. Choquette's question.: "The Government has not directly or indirectly received an invitation to be presented to the House from any person or persons to visit the principal cities of the United States. I might say," added the Premier, "that I received a private note from an American gentleman saylag that it would be a very good thing if this arrangement could be made."

In answer to Mr. Therieu the Postmaster-General said: "It is not the intention of the Government at present to reduce the rate of foetage on letters to two cents."

Mr. Bowell told Mr. Choquette that before the Government had assumed the printing of the Dominion voters' lists $414,572 had been spent upon their preparation, printing, revising, etc., that to date $21,502 had been expended, in addition to $63,849 for plant.

The Minister of Millitain informed Dr. Platt that the Government had purchased a house in Kingston for the use of the Commandant of the Royal Military College at a cost of $12,500, and that it was 2000 yards from the college building.

The Minister of the Interior told Mr. Davies that the Government would not this session amend the Dominion Lands Act.

The Minister of Justice introduced a bill providing for the extension of the Speedy Trials Act to Nova Scotia, which province alone in the sisterhood has up to date not had the benefit of this measure.

Mr. Ellis of New Brunswick introduced a bill providing for the assessment of the salaries and incomes of the civil servants and employes of the Government. Mr. Ellis said his bill was intended to make these gentlemen pay municipal taxes on their incomes like other people. [Applause.]

Mr. Shanly's bill to incorporate the Allerta Railway and Coal Company, and Mr. Mara's bill respecting the Rootenay and Athabasea Railway were read a second time and went to the Railway Committee.

Mr. Eain of Weintworth, made a 20 minute speech on a motion for a return of the correspondence, etc., respecting the sale and ownership of the Dundas and Waterloo turppike. Since the return is prought do farmers of the property of the state of the THESDAY, FEBRUARY 12, 1889.

From the Toronto Empire.

A most determined attempt is now being made by a portion of the press to arouse indignation agaist the Dominion Government because it refused to go out of its legitimate sphere and interfere with the Legislature of Quebee disposing of its own funds in the way it pleased by the Jesuita' Estates Act.

Legislature of Quebec disposing of its own funds in the way it pleased by the Jesuita' Estates Act.

If the agitators could confine the effect of their inflammatory appeals to their primary object—an attempt to overthrow the Government of Sir John Macdonald—they might be looked on with comparative indifference, for the confidence which the people of Canada repose in their veteran statesman is too deeply scated to be shaken by such appeals, where his action—or rather, refraining from action—has been so clearly constitutional and prudent. But in attempting to gain their object they are striving to rouse the devil of sectarian feeling, reckless of consequences; and it is in view of this serious aspect of the case that it behooves sensible men to pause and consider whether they are prepared to risk the results that may ensue, and if they are not, then to set their faces against the agitators and put down the agitation.

We do not wish to be misunderstood. In our opinion, the pretence which lies at the foundation of Mr. Mercler's Act, that the present members of the Jesuit Society have some claim to the property formerly owned by members of a society bearing the same name, but which reverted to the Grown on the suppression of the society by the Pope, is so utterly untenable that it would not be considered for a moment by any but those whose partiality blinded them. to the facts; but, aside from this altogether, the people of Quebec have an undoubted right through their chosen representatives, to make a free gift of their own money to the Josuits, the Oddfellows, the Foresters, or the Man in the Moon if they please; and, while their disposition of funds does not affect the other provinces, and they do not ask thers to bear a share of the burded, no one outside Quebec has any right to interfere.

On what ground do those who are raising this cry against the Dominion Government one outside Quebec has any right to interfere.

On what ground do those who are raising this cry against the Dominion Government for refraining to disallow the Act profess that it ought to have interfered? They cannot even clearly argue that it was a case where a minority was being oppressed, and it was necessary for the central authority to interfere for its protection; for, while $400,000 was granted to the Jesuits, $60,000 was given to Protestant education, and if the representatives of the Protestant minority believed the Act to be an outrage, they ought to have spurned the gift and denounced the transaction—instead of which they quietly asented and allowed the Act to pass without a protest, and as with their representatives, so with the people of Quebec, hardly a word was said, and certainly there was no general agitation against the bill before it passed the Legislature.

Under these circumstances it certainly was not a case in which the Dominion General contents of the case of the contents of the case of

Priest Killed by a Man Whom He Had

A Priest Killed by a Man Whom He Mad.

MEMPHIS, Feb. 11.—A terrible tragedy was enacted early this morning, which resulted in the killing of Father Ashfield, a Catholic priest connected with St. Peter's Cathedral. Several months ago A. Reeves, a young man well known about town, was confined in jail on account of mental troubles. Father Ashfield visited him in jail and was instrumental in having him released. Strong friendship grow up between them and Reeves was a frequent caller at the priest's house, which adjoins the Cathedral in Adams-atreet.

This morning at 6 o'clock Reeves rang the bell of the house and when the door was opened he pushed the porter aside and went direct to Father Ashfield'sroom. The porter thought him drunk and ran to the station house, which is only a square distant, for a policeman. When the two returned they found Reeves sitting on the floor careasing the head of the priest, who was dead.

It was evident that Reeves had stabbed moor careasing the head of the press, who was dead.

It was evident that Reeves had stabbed him while asleep, as the bed was covered with blood. Several wounds just over the heart were found, any one of which would have been fatal. The weapon used was an ordinary pocket knife. When asked why he had committed the deed Reeves replied: "God told me to do it." At the station he said: "He was my best friend and as I was going away I wanted him to join me."

The priest was 50 years old and came to Memphis two years ago.

INGERSOLL, Feb. 12.—Last Saturday Constable Capron, accompanied by Inspector Cook, made a raid on Wm. Oliver's hotel and secured a small quantity of something such as is sold for liquor in Scott Act towns. The same parties took a trip to Mount Elgin and went through what is known as the Gould House, occupied by P. Sackrider. They were successful in capturing quite a quantity of beer and whisky. Not American Butterflies.

Edward Everett Hale says: "I was brought up to consider Charles I a saint and a martyr, and Oliver Cromwell a fanatic and a murderer, simply because the people who wrote the books which I read as a child chose to think so, and lived in England. Why, as lately as when Agasstz first came to this country, he went into a Cambridge printing office, where they were printing a book of natural history. They showed him the sheets with some pride, and Agassiz said: 'Yes, I see. An American school book with pictures of three butterflies, and not one of the butterfles was ever in America? That is the way to bring up children in a colony."

num; so, reckoning the increase by geometrical ratio, it is evident that the bride who receives a dower of a dozen of these very large, long haired. dogs is well stated in life. But of course the majority of these fine animals are not destined to survive their first year, as they are full grown when about 8 months old, and their fur attains perfection in winter, so that only those required for breeding are allowed to see the spring. All over the northern part of these vast Mongolian and Manchurian territories these dog farms are scattered, and there are thousands in which a few hundred dogs are annually reared for the market, while others merely raise enough to supply robes and mats for home use. There are a good many—sases in which one can scarcely afford to think of antecedents, and certainly this slaughter of perhaps the handsomest race of dogs in the world for the sake of their coats is peculiarly unpleasant.—Blackwood's Magazine.

Inherited Peculiarities.

Inherited Peculiarities.

"A Mother" writes, giving an interesting case of inherited peculiarity, which, although it does not come precisely within the category of transmission of an artificial injury, is yet worth recording, if only to prove how trivial marks of parents may reappear in the offspring. Her first child, a boy, at present aged 21 months, was seen, shortly after birth, to possess two small holes, each about the stee of a pin's head, in "the upper part of each of his ears." The mother's attention was drawn to the peculiarity by her husband, who remarked the fact (of which till then she was completely ignorant), that he possessed the same marks, situated in precisely the same position, as they occupied in his son. Further inquiry amongst the relatives showed that the child's grandfather (on the paternal side) possessed the same peculiarity of ears. No information could be obtained respecting the original cause of the peculiarity. It is striking to find such markings, not only sor faithfully propagated, but descending strictly on the male side for three generations. There is no trace of the marks in the second child—a girl—of the family.—Herald of Health.

The Mystery of a Hansom Cab

Ey FERGUS W. HUME.

"I came to the colony of Victoria, or rather, as it was called then. New South Wales, in the year 18—. I had been in a merchant's office in London, but not seeing much opportunity for advancement, I looked about to see if I could better myself. I heard of this new land across the ocean, and though it was not; then the El Dorado which it afterwards turned out, and, truth to tell, had rather a shady name, owing to the transportation of convicts, yet I longed to go there and start a new life. Unhappily, however, I had not the means to go, and saw nothing better before me than the dreary life of a London clerk, as it was impossible that I could save out of the small salary I got. Just at this time, however, an old maiden aunt of mine died and left a few hundred pounds to me, so, with this, I came out to Australia, determined to become a rich man. I stayed some time in Sydney, and then came over to Port Phillip, now so widely known as Marvelous Melbourne, where I intended to pitch my tent. I saw that it was a young and rising colony, though of course, coming as I did, before the days of the gold diggings, I never dreamt it would spring up, as it had done since, to a nation. I was careful and saving in those days, and indeed, I think it was the happiest time of my life.

"I bought land whenever I could scrape the moneytogether, and, at the time of the Jud rush, was considered well to do. When, however, the cry that gold had been discovered was raised, and the eyes of all the nations were turned to Australia, with her glittering treasures, men poured in from all parts of the world, and the Golden Age' commenced. I began to get rich rapidly, and was soon pointed out as the wealthlest man in the colonies. I bought a station, and leaving the riotous, teverish Melbourne life, went to live on it. I enjoyed myself there, for the wild, open air life had great charms for me, and there was a sense of freedom to which I had hitherto been a stranger. But man is a gregarious animal, and I, growing weary of sol Ly FERGUS W. HUME.

of solitude and communings with Mother Nature, came down on a visit to Melbourne, where, with companions as gay as myself, I spent my money freely, and, as the phrase goes, saw life. After confessing that I loved the pure life of the country, it sounds strange to say that I enjoyed the wild life of the town, but I did. I was neither a Joseph nor a St. Anthony, and I was delighted with Bohemia, with its good fellowship and charming suppers, which took place in the small hours of the morning, when wit and hamor reigned supreme. It was at one of these suppers that I first met Resanna Moore, the woman who was destined to curse my existence. She was a burlesque actress, and all the young fellows in those days were madly in love with her. She was not exactly what was called beautiful, but there was a brilliancy and fascination about her which few could resist. On first seeing her I did, not admire her much, but laughed at companions as they raved about her. On becoming personally acquainted with her, however, I found that her powers of fascination had not been overrated, and ended by falling desperately in love with her. I made inquiries about her private life, and found that it was freprocable, as she was guarded by a veritable dragon of a mother, who would the contraction to describe the contraction to describe the contraction of a mother, who would let no one average her described the contraction to describe the contraction of a mother, who would let no one average her described the contraction of a mother, who need not tell about my courtship, as these phases of a man's life are generally the same, but it will be sufficient to prove the depth of my passion for her when I at length determined to make her my wife. It was on condition, however, that the marriage should be kept secret until such time as I should choose to reveal it. My reason for such a course was this: my father was still alive, and be, being a rigid Presbyterian, would never have forgiven me for having married a woman of the stage; so, as he was old and feeble, I did not wish him to learn that I had done so, fearing that the shock would be too much for him in his then present state of health—I told Rosanna I would marry her, but wanted her to leave her mother, who was a perfect fury, and not an agreeable person to live with. As I was rich, young and not had looking, Rosanna consented, and, during an engagement she had in Sydney, I went over there and married her. She never told her mother she had married me; why, I do not know, as I never laid any restriction on her doing so. The mother made a great noise over the matter, but I gave Rosanna a large sum of money for her, and this the old harridan accepted and left for New Zealand. Rosanna went with me to my station, where we lived as man and wife, though, in Melbourne, she was supposed to be my mistress. At last, feeling degraded in my own eyes as to the way I was living to the world, I wanted to revent our secret, but this Rosanna would not consent to. I was astonished at this and could never discover the reason, but In many ways Rosanna was an enigma to me. She then grew weary of the quiet country life, and longed to return to the sittler and glare of the footlights. This I refused to let ber do, and from that moment she took a dislike to me. A child was born, and for a time she was engrossed with it, but soon wearfed of the new plaything, and again pressed me to allow her to return to the stage, I again refused, and we became estranged from one another, I grew gloomy and irritable, and was accustomed

COWBOY VENGEANCE.

HEY HANG HORSE THIEVES IN SORT OF RELIGIOUS FERVOR.

Are Pursued-One Is Captured and tion-Embalmed in Red Pepper.

W. G. Alexander, who for many years horse thieves,

"A horse," said he, " was considered of more value in the Lone Star state some years ago than a man. The desperado who killed a companion or who 'put out the light' of a tenderfoot took a high place in society, but if hestolea horse-well, he was jerked higher.
Sometimes in the speedy administration of justice the wrong man was strung-up;
sometimes a man was shoisted for taking his justice the wrong man was strung-up; sometimes a man was hoisted for taking his own horse, but, as the victims of the mistake never complained, little was said about the errors. You know, the cowboys in Texas had a saying that it was better that 100 innocent men should be hanged than that one horse thief should go unpunished. Among the more cultivated and reverent that was believed to be culled from the Ten Commandments, and the cowboys pinned it to the ponmucls of their saddles.

HIS TOES CRUSS-CROSSED:

"On one occasion we were driving a herd hrough New Mexico, and had not a horse to pare. Every animal was in use, and we were early careful of them, as we had a long ride. The trail was dotted with 'strays,' fellows who had no headquarters and whose business who had no headquarters and whose business was that of hores stealing. One morning we avoke to find three of our best mustangs gone, with saddle, bridle, lariat—run clean off. Half a dozen started in pursuit of the thieves, who were not more than five hours ahead. We knew they daren't leave the trail, and it was only a question of endurance on the part of the horses. All day we rode, but never got a sight of them. It was agreed that we should ride for a couple of hours after dark, and, saving the time of cooking, make so much orr-the thieves. The chase began again early in the morning, and the ride was hard and fatiguing. In the afternoon we saw a horseman leave the trail and strike away for the hills. We gave a yell. One of the thieves had 'petered' out and had been left behind. We spurred on and saw that he intended to make the chase a long one. To intercept him we had to make a wide detour, and we knew darkness must be on us before we captured him. Our mustangs showed signs of fatigue, but a cowboy would rather lose half a dozen animals legitimately than see one carried off by a pirate. So we piled rope and spur and in a couple of hours we got in bullet range of one man. We began popping at him, more to draw his fire than anything else, as we cared neither to kill him nor cripple the horse. He couldn't hit a barn and his gun was soon useless. Then we dashed up and one of the boys dragged him from the saddle. We asked him in questions."

"You've lost the others," he said.

"Vegetation was scant there, but we took the highest we could find and dragged him up until his head was within two inches of the limb he was almost as naked as when he was born."

"Something dead in the late of the limb he was almost as naked as when he was born."

"We struck the trell again and helter! for some was almost as naked as when he was born."

SOMETHING DEAD IN FEONT.

"We struck the trail again and halted for a rest, The horse we had recovered was almost played out, and the others were in a very bad condition. The pursuit was over for a good many hours, and we needed the thought of one man caught and hanged to buoy us up. All the next day we followed, and when we took supper we began to think we had done the best we could. Some were for giving up the chase, but it was decided to spend another day on the trail.

"In the morning the air was loaded with the taint of vultures. We could see the carrion eaters like specks against the white clouds.

rion eaters like specks against the write clouds.

"They're going to pay their respects to the man behind us,'said one of the party.

"He's finished long ago,' was the reply. 'Boys, ther's somethin' dead in front.'

"We mounted again, and as we rode the vultures became thicker. We followed their light, and by midday we saw hundreds of headstone like birds off on the plains. The trail of the horse thieves was at an end. The vultures arose and hung over us as we rode up to the place of the feast. By the side of the brown skinned man lay a pile of bones, wet yet, but fleshless. The bones of the horse thief were as clean as if he had been bolded.

not been devoured.

"'Nor they won't, 'said the man who told us 'somethin' ' was dead in front. 'He's a Spaniard, an' so full of red pepper that a vulture won't touch him.' I had heard the boys say that before, and did not believe it. But there the man lay, perfect as when he dropped from his horse through fatigue, and by his side lay the clean bones of a man who had fallen with him. And there he would lie for months, and at the end of that time would give no signs of decomposition but would give no signs of decomposition, but every day the elements would steal from him something of his humanity, and at last he would become as the dust of the plains. We took up the trail very leisurely, and got to the herd without trouble."—San Francisco

Try Not to Cough.

A physician, who is connected with an institution which contains many children, says: "There is nothing more irritating to a cough than to cough. For some time I had been so fully assured of this that I recently determined, if possible for one minute, at least, to lessen the number of coughs heard in a certain ward in the hospital of the institution. By the promise of rewards and punishments I succeeded in inducing them simply to hold their breath when tempted to cough, and in a little while I was myself surprised to see how some of the children entirely recovered from their disease.

"Constant coughing is precisely like scratching a wound on the outside of the body; so long as it is done the wound will not heal. Let a person when tempted to cough, draw a long breath and hold it until it warms and soothes every air cell, and some benefit will soon be received from the process. The nitrogen, which is thus refined, acts as an anodyne to the irritated mucous membrane, allaying the desire to cough and giving the throat and lungs a chance to heal. At the same time a suitable medicine will aid nature in her effort to recuperate."—Baltimore News.

Wants the Inside Track.

A lady has been arrested in Atlanta for wanting the inside of the sidewalk. She not only wants it, but she gets it, whenever she goes out to walk. The lady says she will have the inside track if she has to fight for it until she dies.—Cincinnati-Commercial Gazette.

is misery. Indigestion is a foe to good nature.

The human digestive apparatus is one of the most complicated and wonderful things in existence. It is easily put out of order. Greasy food, bough food, sloppy food, bad cookery, mental worry, late hours, irregular habits, and many other things which ought not to be, have made the American people a nation of dyspepties.

But Green's August Flower has done a wonderful work in reforming this sad business and making the American people so healthy that they can enjoy their meals and be happy.

DOINGS IN THE DOMINION. THE CANADA HOLINESS CONVENTION AT TORONTO.

Queer Strike—Bishep Dewling of Peterbore Appointed to the Diocese of Hamilton—Ambitions City Note s.

Torogrof, Feb. 13.—The annual convention of the Canada Holiness Association is nession at Temperance Hall. There were about fifty delegates present at the morning meeting yesterday, which took the form of a love feast and experience meeting. Rev. W. Burm of Toronto presided. With him on the platform were Secretary Colling of Simcoe, and Rev. Mr. Mitchell of Sheffield. Pending the arrival of delegates from outside towns, the afternoon and evening meetings were of an informal nature.

Wilton, the fellow who was convicted of assaulting a little girl on the Kingston road and sentenced to two years' imprisonment and 50 lashes, will receive the first dose of the eat on Friday morning. It was represented a little time ago that it was hardly fair to compel the drunks in the jail to work and permit the thieves to pass the time in idleness. The Governor held that he hadr't a large enough staff of assistants to deal with prisoners of that class in an emergency. He, however, accepted the suggestion, and yesterday morning tried an experiment. He turned out twenty-six prisoners into the jail yard, where he showed them a like number of barrows, which he ordered them to fill with sand and wheel to a dump a short distance away. Five of them obeyed, but twenty-one refused point blank, one of them saying. "They would leave the jail first." They were ordered back to their cells, and the Governor is now trying to work as colution to the problem.

One of the members from British Columbis who has just arrived stated to me to-night that the Canadian customs officials and already been instruced to co-operate with the American consul at Victoria in following up shipments from the factories to their destination and bringing the guilty parties to justice. He says that it is impossible to estimate the magnitude of the frauds which are at present being perpetrated upon the United States Government through snungfled opium, which traffic is being carried on right under the eyes of the United States officials, who so far have been helpless to break up the gang.

The discussion which will follow the introduction of the subject in Parliament promises to bring out some interesting and startling facts in consection with the illicit traffic.

ONTARIO LEGISLATURE.

The First Division of the Session-A Flood

The First Bivision of the Session-A Flood of New Bills.

TORONTO, Feb. 13.—In the Legislature yesterday afternoon Mr. W. R. Mercdith moved, on the third reading of the bill respecting voters lists, introduced by Hon. Mr. Fraser, that clause 14 be so amended as to prevent the judge, unless noditively certain, from striking the name of any voter off the list.

Hon. Mr. Fraser objected, and Mr. Meredith at once raised the cry of "Divide, divide."

Meredith at once raised the cry of "Divide, divide."

This aroused the entire House from the comparative lethargy into which they have fallen during the present session, and the whips were at once dispatched to the Government side of the House to bring in straggling supporters, recognizing the disadvantage they were at by the numerous vacant benches on their side.

The amendment was rejected, 33 to 47.

There was a flood of new bills yesterday. Among the more important measures introduced were these:

To enable the City of Ottawa to issue debentures for the construction of waterworks and for other purposes.—Mr. Bronson.

THE POLICY OF DYNAMITE.

DELIBERATELY SUPPORTED BYATH V. C. ORGANIZATION.

sir Charles Russell, counsel for the Farnellistes, and Sir Henry James, counsel for The Times, have announced that they had agreed not to produce the documents which were the subjected of discussion last Friday.

Witness said the Government had paid him 2000 between February, 1868, and August, 1870. He spent every cent for public purposes. The V. O. organization, which numbered 23,000 members, deliberately and knowingly supported the dynamite policy. In the convention of 1881, 182 of the delegates favored the use of dynamite. The convention held in Madison-square Garden, New York, in 1884, advocated the dynamite policy.

Lecaron said Senator Jones was considered a "carpet bag" senator. He had not heard of any crime being attributed to Jones. Lecaron produced a photograph of Farnell. He said he had received two of these photographs. One was mailed to him in care of Brennan at the League headquarters, Dublin. The envelope was stamped with the House of Commons stamp. Parnell in witness' presence signed one photograph: "Yours very truly, C. S. Parnell." The other photograph was similarly signed. Lecaron was unable to swear whether the photograph produced was Parnell's gift or the one mailed him. Egan gave him his photograph, which was signed "Best regards," in Paris in 1881. Egan also gave him a photograph produced was Parnell's gift or the one mailed him. Egan gave him his photograph, which was signed "Best regards," in Paris in 1881. Lecaron said the convention of 1881 in Chizago unanimously agreed to carry on a secret warfare. The V. C. comprised the dynamite party apart from the O'Donovan Rossa party. The secret organization was first conceived in 1869. The V. C. dated from 1872.

Witness had just received from America one of John Devoy's original letters dated, "Office of James Reynolds, No. 4t. Oranze-street, New Haven, June 24, 1881." It reads:

Able to Unload Sixteen Grain Cars in Twenty Minutes.

Chicago, Feb. 18.—A Winnipeg man who was in the city yesterday gave an interesting description of the Canadian Pacific's new grain elevator just completed at Fort William, on Lake Superior. Elevator B, as it is called to distinguish it from the first elevator built there by the Canadian Pacific Railway Company, has a capacity of 1,400,000 bushels. There are 14 elevating legs, each capable of elevating 7000 bushels per hour. Each of these legs is furnished with a self-cleaning boot, the invention of W. J. Loss, the company's Superintendent of Buildings. Owing to a provision having to be made for the tightening of the bels which carries the elevating bushels there has always been a certain amount of grain remaining in the boot which requires to be frequently cleaned out by hand, and always so when changing from one grain to another. This boot has an ingenious arrangement by which a shield is attached to the frame carrying the pulley. This shield is always just kept clear of the beakets no matter what position the pulley takes in the boot while tightening the belt from time to time. Grain men will understand the advantages of always having a clean boot to start elevating with. The whole of these legs are driven by friction clutches attached to the shafting, two lines of which are run the entire length of the elevator. These two lines of shafting are driven by a single, massive seven-ply rubber belt 36 inches wide and over 3000 feet long. This method was first tried in Elevator B at Montreal, and found to work so satisfactorily that it was deeded to accopt the same arrangement at Fort William. This elevating machinery, with the steam shovels, will enable a train of 16 cars to be unloaded and stowed away in the bins in 20 minutes.

disorderly conduct consisted in his asking

BOULANGER'S PROGRAMME.

Ir seems that Gen. Boulanger has con-cluded that the time has come for him to cluded that the time has come for him to make known to France his idea of what its constitution should be. He would, as far as the position of the President is concern-ed, adopt the United States system, except that he thinks the President's term should be ten years. There was some discussion in the United States after the last election regarding the President's term, many realizing that the disturbance of pusinesses. realizing that the disturbance of business that accompanied the election every four years was an evil, and the lengthening of years was an evil, and the lengthening of the term was suggested as a remedy. Yet this remedy would increase the objection of the admirers of responsible government to the United States system. The President-is, during his term of office, an absolute la, during his term of office, an absolute ruler in the executive department. He is not responsible to Congress, and the only check on his administration is the concurrence of the Senate required to confirm certain of his acts. But whether he proves to be a good or had ruler—whether or not he adopts a polloy at variance with the wishes of the people—he is enthroned for four years, and there is no option but to submit unless he so openly acts the part of a traitor so that he may be impeached. If the term should be extended to ten years this danger would be increased, for neither a President or a Cabinet Minister can be removed during the term, the President choosing his own secretaries or ministers choosing his own secretaries or ministers choosing his own secretaries or miniments outside of Congress.

At the present time Gen. Boulanger appears to be the most popular man in France. He aims at being raised to the Presidency, and if he were elected President for the term of ten years, and was those with his Cabinat not responsible to dent for the term of ten years, and was along with his Cabinet not reeponsible to the Chamber or Senate, what would be the result? His opponents believe he wishes to be dictator, if not actually emperor, and it is said that he desires to emulate Napoleon's example. Outside of France, as well as by many in that country, he is feared and his strength in the country is believed to be a menace to Europe as well as to the Franch Republic. Under these circumstances the adoption of the United States constitution, as proposed by Gen. Boulanger, could not be viewed otherwise than with strong misgivings.

THEIR FAITH WAS STRONG.

And They Were Cured of Diseases Wastsamed Medical Skill.

Niagara Falls, Ont., Feb. 13.—Considerable interest is being manifested throughout this neighborhood by the remarkable healing of different diseases by the much-talked-of faith cure. Situated in the Wesley Park property is the Young Ladies' Seminary, open during the summer season, which has for its principal Mrs. Rev. J. E. Irvina. Some time last fall Mr. Irvine, who had been pondering seriously over the faith cure question, became convinced that there was really something in it, and the result was the conversion of the seminary into a mission and divine healing establishment.

Three weeks ago Miss Amelia Ziegler of Buffalo came to the mission to be healed of a disease in her eyes of five years' standing, which caused her much páin and greatly impaired her sight. She had been treated for it by specialities and other doctors in vain, and given up as incurable. After remaining here and attending the meetings for twe days, she was ready to believe in Christ for healing, and at one of the Sunday afternoon meetings was instantly healed through faith and the laying on of hands. A few days after she gave her testimony at a meeting in the house in the presence of Rev. John Mordy, Rev. Mr. Emery, Rev. Mr. Hobbs and a number of others. She also answered the many questions very satisfactorily, concerning her disease and the healing, which were put by the clergymen. Miss Ziegler has returned to her home in Buffalo, and writes that the cure has been permanent.

Another young lady, Miss Brennan, went to Hamilton intending to take treatment at the Hospital for severe diseases of long standing, and hearing of the wonderful work being done here, decided to come and try the faith oure remedy She soon became deeply convinced of her need of salvation, and received Christ as a Saviour from her sins and then believed Him for physical healing. She is new rejoicing in Christ as the Saviour of both body and soul.

An Amendment to the American Arbitration Conference Bill.

Washington, Feb. 12.—Representative Townshend of Illinois to-day introduced a bill amending the act authorizing the President to arrange a conference between the United States and the republics of Mexico, Central and South America, Hayti, San Domingo and the Empire of Brazil, so as to include Canada in the conference.

The objects of the conference are the devising of some plan of arbitration for settling disputes that may arise and to consider the establishment of regular and frequent communication between the ports of the several countries. Mr. Townshend hopes that Canada's participation will settle the fishery and other questions that have vexed the United States and Canada.

Montreal, Feb. 13.—A young Frenchman named Emile Victor Michen, halling from Valence, France, has been arrested on the charge of having forged in France a title deed on which he raised $600. He has been in Montreal since June last and has worked for Mr. Beullac, the art decorator on Notre Dame-street. His forgery was discovered by a letter sent from France to the Consul-General for that country at Quebec, Mr. Dubsil, who instituted enquiries and located him at Beullac's. The Consul-General yesterday afternoon appeared hefore Judge Dugas in Chambers and applied for a letter of extradition. Evidence was tendered concerning the forgery, after which the application was adjourned. The young man on being arrested said that he had been working hard to repay the money, and expressed a doubt as to the legality of the proceedings.

Ferkins was a brother-in-law of C. W. Powell dealer in window shades, 220 King-street east, and had worked with him for about six years. It is not known what was the cause of death, but Dr. Griffin, who examined the body, is of the opinion that the young man took a fit and was amothered.

Lifting the hat is a custom that had a military origin, it is said. In olden times soldiors, were helmets to protect their heads from assaults by the sword or battle axe, and to remove this head covering was to show confidence in the man to whom the salute was extended. No gentleman was expected to split a man's head open after this mark of trustfulness, though he was sometimes treachtrustfulness, though he was sometimes treacherous enough to do so. To lift the hat gracefully is considerable of an acquirement, requiring long practice. There is a man in New York who has become such an adept at it that he can lift half a dozen hats at a time, if he can sneak into a hallway while the folks are at dinner.—Texas Siftings.

A Countess a Factory Girl Now.

This is what we are coming to. One day a young and pretty girl came to a magistrate in a town in Austria, demanding the regulation Dienstbuch into which the particulars about the antecedents of any one in search of work are entered, the booklet having to be shown to employers on application for employment. On looking through the girl's papers the magistrate found that his fair applicant was Melanic Countess Keglevich, born at Presburg, in 1874. As her papers were in good order, the booklet was handed over to the young countess, and her ladyship is at present earning her living as a factory girl.—Pall Mall Gazette.

Something Needed.

The last six months' experience with air brakes on freight trains has shown conclusively that we must have less slack between the cars, and that the master car builders' coupler will soon have an opportunity of showing what it is worth. This opportunity will arise from the fact that railway companies who have had experience with air brakes on their freight trains in connection with a tink and pin coupler feel compelled, by reason of the serious breakages, to use some sort of a close connected coupler. Something must be done to reduce the slack between cars or fast freight service will become an impossibility.—Railway Review.

I have this application repeated several times, the first day, and less frequently the following days.—Good Housekeeping.

Welcome news in Hamilton.

A despatch from Hamilton to the Toronto World says:—"The announcement of Bishop Dowling's appointment to the See of Hamilton is welcome intelligence to the thousands of members of the Roman Catholic Church in the Diocese of Hamilton, to whom the name of Bishop Dowling is a household word. There never, it seems, has been any disposition on the part of the authorities at Rome to oppose the desires in this matter of the clergy of the Hamilton diocese, who, it is well known, voiced the unanimons opinion of their people when they presented the name of the good Bishop of Peterborough to the Pope. And, though willing, to render obedience to any Bishop, whom the Holy Father might set over them, many nd doubt would have been disappointed had the report of the project to sand a distinguished prejate from the Old Quuntry to the diocese been verified. Bishop Dowling will receive a right hearty welcome when he returns to the scene of his youthful struggles in this city, and to the diocese in which for years he labored so faithfully and with never-varying success for the welfar of the flocks placed under his care."

Up from below came Robert Scriber to the Police Court this morning, after having spent yesterday afternoon and last night in one of the apartments which the municipality with great forethought and kindness have provided for the accommodation of all those who may at any whose so forget themselves as to break the laws of their country so flagrantly as to merit police attention. Scriber was charged with having ebtained money under false pretences from John Britton, a well known cooper of town.

The prisoner elected to be tried sum-marily by the Magistrate. Mr. R. E. Wood, C. C. A., was present for the Crown. THE WAY IT WAS DONE.

THE WAY IT WAS DONE.

The manner in which the prisoner extracted the lucre from Mr. Britton was told in the evidence something like this: Near the end of the month of November last Scriber agreed to get out one hundred cord of stave bolts for Britton at $2.50 a cord.

The prisoner after making the contract went away and in about two weeks he came to Britton and asked him to advance a little money on the bargain, stating that came to Britton and account in the and his brother were getting along well with the work and were cutting about four cords a day. He also wanted a new cross-cut saw. Britton gave him the five dollars and bought him the saw. The next Saturday Scriber came again to the complainant and reported progress good and again ask-ed for money. He was given another five dollars and also a hundred of flour. The dollars and also a hundred of flour. The next week he came again and this time said they had over a hundred cord cut and asked for some money. Britton wanted him to send some of the boits on by train and the prisoner said he had arranged with the railway to bring them here at $4 a carload. He also stated that he had three cords cut at Birds-lead we continue the remainder at Norstated that he had three chainder at Nor-wood. Britton gave him money a few more times and then refused to give him any more until some of the timber was brought to town. Scriber said his family was desti-tute and by this plea got a couple of more dollars and some more flour. At last Mr. Britton went to Norwood where the man said he had twenty cords of bolts at the station, and found no botts at the station, and when he went to the woods with Scriber and when he went to the woods with Seriber the latter could only show him one dead tree he had out which would probably make about two cords for the two months work. The prisoner then confessed that he had been lying about the work and Britton gave him another chance and got him timber to cut near town but the man cut only two trees and then quit. THERE MONTHS IN GAOL.

Death of Mrs. Manning.

The news of the death of Mrs. Manning wife of the Rev. Thos. Manning, of Orilla. was received here with great regret. Mr Kanning was several years ago pastor of the Charlotte-st. Methodist Church, and Mrs. Manning as well as her husband were

"The great cricketing event of the year was the match with the Seabrights. Although they brought a very strong eleven, including the famous C. A. Absoim, of Cambridge University, and Kent, yet they were easily beaten. The match with Hamilton was also a new one, and it is to hoped it will be kept a regular feature. Towards the end of the season great interest was taken in matches between the Colts and Veterans. No fewer than eight matches were played, each side winning four.

Mr. John Mervin also gave evidence to the effect that Wilcox came in and went up stairs on Sunday night at about haif past ten, but he did not see Wallace at all Constable Stewart said be saw Wilcox on Sunday night about ten o'clock and that his dress at that time tallied with the girl's discription.

THE MAGISTRATE'S OPINION.

The Magistrate said he thought the prisoner had extracted money under faise representations and he could see nothing but fraud in it. "If Mr. Britton was as well acquainted with you as I am, he would have broken some of your bones."

"If it had been thirty-five years ago," said Britton, "I would have had satisfaction out of his hide, but I have quit that now."

The Magistrate sentenced the prisoner to three months in gaol at hard labor.

By FERGUS W. HUME.

is plunged into a whird of dissipation, trying to drown the memory of my married life. My friends, of course, thought that my loss amounted to no more than that of a mistress, and I soon began to-doubt that I had ever been married, so far away and visionary did my life of the year previous seem. I continued my fast life for about six months, when suddenly I was arrested upon the brink of destruction by—an angel. I say this advisedly, for it ever there was an angel upon earth, it was she who afterwards became my wife. She was the daughter of a doctor, and it was her influence which drew me back from the dreary path of profligacy and dissipation, which I was than leading. I paid her great attention, and we were, in fact, looked upon as good as engaged, but I knew that I was still linked to that accursed woman, and could not ask her to be my wife. At this second crisis of my life Fate again intervened, for I received a letter from England, which informed me that Rosama Moore had been run over in the streets of London, and had died in an hospital. The writer was a young doctor, who had attended her, and I wrote home to him, begging him to send out a certificate of her death, so that I might be sure she was no more. He did so, and also suclosed an account of the accident, which had appeared in a newspaper. Then, Indeed, I felt that I was free, and closing, as I thought forever, the darkest page of my life's history, I began to look forward to the future I married again, and my domestic life was a singularly happy one. As the colony grew greater, with every year I became even more wealthy than I had been, and was looked up to and respected by my fellow citizens. When my dear daughter made her appearance one day—a disreputable looking creature, smelling of gin, and in whom I could not recognize the respectably dressed woman who used to accompany Rossans to the theatra. She had spent long ago all the money I had given her, and sank lower and lower, until he now lived in a sium off little Bourke street. I made inquiries affection I became reconciled to the loss of my wife. A young Irish gentleman, called Brian Fitzgerald, came out to Australia, and I soon saw that my daughter was in love with him, and that he reciprocated that affection, whereat I was glad, as I have always esseaged him highly. I looked forward to their marriage, when suddenly a series of events occurred, which must be fresh to the memory of those who read these pages. Mr. Oliver Whyte, a gentleman from Londou, called on me and startled me with the news that my first wife, Rosanna Moore, was still living, and that the story of her death had been an ingenious fabrication in order to deed to the loss of

Oliver Whyte, a gentleman from London, called on me and startled me with the news that my first wife, Rosanna Moore, was still living, and that the story of her death had been an ingenious fabrication in order to decive ma. She had met with an accident, as stated in the newspaper, and had been taken to an hospital, where she recovered. The young doctor, who had seen the certificate of her death, had fallen in love with her and wanted to marry her, and had told me that she was dead in order that her past life might be obliterated. The doctor, however, died before the marriage, and Rosanna did not trouble herself about undeceiving ma. She was then acting on the burlesque stage under the name of 'Musette,' and seemed to have gained an uncaviable notoriety by her extravagance and infamy. Whyte met her in London, and she became his mistress. He seemed to have a wonderful influence over her, for she told him all her past life and about her marriage with me. Her popularity being on the wans in London, as she was now growing old, and had to make way for younger actresses, Whyte proposed that they should come out to the colonies and extort money from me, and be had come to me for that purpose. The villain told me all this in the coolest manner, and I, knowing he held the secret of my life, was unable to resent it. I refused to see Rosanna, but told Whyte I would agree to his terms, which were, first, a large sum of money was to be pald to Rosanna, and secondly. Whyte wanted to marry my daughter. I, at first, absolutely declined to sanction the latter proposal, but as he threatened to publish the story, and that meant the proclamation to the world of my daughter's illegitimacy, I at last agreed, and he began to pay his was ungaged to Fitzgerald, so after a severe struggle with mywelf I told Whyte that I would give him whatover sum he would like to name. On the night he was murdered became to see me, and showed me the certificate of marriage between myself and Rosanna Moore. He refused to take a sum of money, and said unl

The Newspaper School.

Emile Zola has written the preface to "Morass," a volume compiled by the editors of the principal newspapers of Paris, all of whom contribute anecdotes, experiences and souvenirs of their professional lives. Zola devotes himself entirely to the consideration of journalism, and apropos of the off mooted question as to whether a newspaper training is of advantage or disadvantage to the man who aspires to become a great writer, the "Frince of Filth" gives the following decided views of interest and importance to young writers: " views of interest and importance to young writers:

"Exery time a young man appeals to me for advice on this subject I urge him to rush immediately into the thick of the literary bat the—into journalism—in the sense of newspaper work proper. There is nothing which so successfully decides the ability of a writer as the daily conflict of the press. Here he will learn of men and things, and how to tell others about them. Here he will find the stimulus of competition. Here he will learn to buckle on his armor and stand his ground. And in defiance of the daily assertion that newspaper work is death to literary inspiration, I affirm that, if the inspiration exist, it will in time formulate itself into the voice, which must be heard, and it will be just as forceful after the training of newspaper work, which is the apprenticeship of literature, which teaches a man, by sheer force of daily habit, where to choose his word, by which end to scize his idea, and the inestimably valuable lesson of conveying that idea in the fewest possible words.

"The habit of scratching off articles on the corner of a table in hot haste neither spoils the style nor perverts the idea. On the contrary, 'style' is born like the color of the eyes; and newspaper work, rapid, fanciful, exacting, makes the mind supple and the pen ready. If one falls in this battlefield, it is because he has not strength to stand. The man who is fitted for his work will come, unscathed, out of this trial by fire and demonstrate the survival of the fittest."—Current Literature.

Cunning Swallows.

Birds are often said to possess instinct, as distinguished from intelligence, by which is meant, apparently that such knowledge as they have is inherited, not acquired. "A bird always builds its nest in one way," it is said, but few statements could be less exact. Our common cliff swallow, known also as the eave swallow and the "Republican," formerly built against the face of a cliff, and as a protection against the weather, the nest, instead of being open at the top, was bottle shaped, the entrance being through a kind of neck at the side. Now that the country has become populous, however, this-swallow has taken to nesting under the eaves of barns, where it is shielded from rain by the overhanging roof.

Little by little, therefore, the wise bird has actic by little, therefore, the wise bird has given up its more elaborate method of construction, till now you may see, side by side, nests that are simple mud saucers, nests that are built in the old fashioned bottle method, and nests half way between the two extremes, showing plainly that a process of adaptation is going on.

A Pennsylvania newspaper lately reported a very clever piece of work by a pair of these same cave swallows. They had built a nest in the old style under the caves of a barn, and when it was done an English sparrow took possession.

The swallows made frantic efforts to dislodge the intruder, but could not drive her out. Then they went deliberately to work and plastered up the neck of the bottle with mud, burying the sparrow alive, after which they built another nest close by and occupied it as if nothing had happened.—Youth's Companion.

Blocking Fire Escapes.

"Why don't people who live in flat houses keep their household goods off the fire escapes!" said a fireman to the writer recently. "They know it is against the law, for every now and then somebody is flaed for it; and they must know how dangerous it is in case of fire. I have known people deliberately cover up the opening in the floor of the fire escape with boards, so that their children might play on the balcony in safety, or so that the washerwoman might hang out the clothes without getting nervous; seeming to care nothing that by so doing all access from one story to another was wholly cut off. This seems to be a favorite place, too, for the family refrigerator, a neat little thing to remove in a hurry in case of a stampede from the flames. I have seen so much stuff piled up there that the shutters could not actually be opened wide enough to let a child pass through, let alone a woman half crazed with fear. The carelessness of tenants down town, too, about fire is remarkable. They seem to think that if they have their goods insured that is all that is necessary. If there were no insurance, I don't believe there would be half so many fires."—New York Tribune.

DOMINION PARLIAMENT.

DEBATE ON MR. JAMIESON'S PROHI

trel of Telegraphs-The First Division of the Session.

Triawa, Feb. 13.—This afternoon and tonight in the House of Commons was decidedly miscellaneous. In fact there was a little of everything in parliamentary routine and politics. The event of the day's sittings was expected to be the Jamieson prohibition resclution, the delate on which having proceeded offered this afternoon, reads:

That in the opinion of this House it is expedient to prohibit the manufacture, importation and sale of intoxicating liquors except for scramentar-medicinal, scientific and mechanish proposes; that the enforcement manufacture is also as may call the enforcement of the ppointed officers,

Mr. Fisher (Lib.) was the seconder. Then
Ir. Wood (Con.) Brockville, and Mr. Hicky (Con.) followed up with this amendment:
That after the word "purposes" be inserted;
when the public sentiment of the country is iple for the reception and enforcement of such ineasure of prohibition."
Mr. Taylor (Con.) and Mr. Roome (Con.)
It once sprung an amendment to the amend-

This is of course the old proposition of tak-This is of course the old proposition of taking a nlebiscite.

Mr. Jamieson addressed the House at length in support of the main motion. He said that prohibition was one of the greatest questions that this Parliament and future Parliaments would have to deal with. It was the greatest moral question of the present day. He would be quite prepared to contribute his share of compensating the men who were in the liquor business for their loss if they were able thereby to secure the blessings of prohibition. However, the proper time to consider the question was when a measure for the suppression of the liquor traffic was before the House.

and Mr. Wood a desire to shirk the main question. Mr. Fisher also spoke of the way in which politics had always blocked the propers of the prohibition movement.

Mr. Taylor arose to reply, but he was declared to be out of order because he had already made a speech moving his amendment, To relieve him from this embarrassment Mr. Mitchell moved the adjournment of the debate, and Mr. Taylor proceeded to speak. He declared that the Dominion Alliance merely lad this prohibition resolution introduced every year with the hope of injuring the Dominion Government. He also said that the reason the Scote Act was not a success in the counties where it had been passed was because the officials of the Ontario Government did not enforce it.

The House, while it paid very little attention.

cause the officials of the Shants development.

The House, while it paid very little attention to the debate, was getting ready to vote on the amendment, but the Speaker merely put the motion by Mr. Mitchell to adjourn the debate, which was declared carried. The prohibition motion therefore goes to the bottom of the paper and it may be several days before it is heard of again.

Considerable interest was centered in the questions which Mr. Barron had put on the paper on Feb. Swith reference to the Jesuits Eatates Act. The questions ran as follows:

1. Has the act yet been before the Government!

did not make this part of his answer to Mr. Barros.

Sr John Thompson, in reply to Mr. Roome, said it was not the intention of the Government to legislate this session the distribution of the Scots Act fines, now accumulated in the index of the different county treasurers, among the numicipalities.

To Mr. Burdeet the Minister of Public Works said he would have to wait until the supplementary estimates were brought down to indout if a sum would be voted to aid in the crediton of a drill shed in Belleville.

Mr. Turcot was told by the Postmaster-General, as was the House last night, that the weight of 3-cent letters would be increased from b ounce to I ounce, but it was not intended to lessen the parcel postage.

Col. Denison of Toronto renewed his protton of last session for the appointment of a select committee to inquire into the describility of the Government sequiring all the electric telegraph lines in Canada. Mr. Denison, as on the occasion of his remarks last year, offered a good argument in favor of file motion. He said-that the only countries in, the world in which the Government did not tribed States.

The Minister of Public Works complimented Mr. Denison on the case he had made out, but he gave the same answer that he did before: The time has not yet arrived when the Covernment was in a position to consider the grant which was one of gigantic proportions.

Wood (Brock). Wood (West).—191:
Mr. Lepine, the Labor member from Montreal, voted with the Government.
The speakers of the evenine were Dr. Macdonald of Huron, Mr. Smith of Ontario, Hou. John Carling, Mr. Mulock, Mr. Porter, Mr. Semple and Mr. Masson.
It was arranged to start the debate on Sir Riohard Cartwright's treaty resolution on Monday immediately after routine, and it was made the first order of the day for that date:
The House adjourned at 10.40.

Tariff Grievances Laid Before the Domin

Tariff Grievances Laid Before the Dominion Ministers.

Offiance and Customs were busy this morning receiving deputations who had journeyed to the frozen Capital to lay their tariff grievances bare. Mr. Foster and Mr. Bowell will no doubt be kept going with deputations of various kinds up to the date of the Budget speech, which is probably a couple of weeks off yet. The most wealthy and extensive deputation seen here this session were the boot and shoe manufacturers who saw the ministers to-day. They came from Montreal, Toronto, Quebec and Hamilton, representing many millions of capital and employing a total of 19,000 mep. James Cooper, W. B. Hamilton and J. D. King came from Montreal, Toronto, Quebec and Hamilton, representing many millions of capital find employing a total of 19,000 mep. James Cooper, W. B. Hamilton and J. D. King came from Toronto, and J. R. McPherson from Hamilton. The deputation was introduced by Mr. U. Wilson, M.P. for Lennox, and they energetically opposed any increase in the tariff on fine, ordinary and sole teathers is 20 per cent; and leathers in the tarners of the Dominion. The present duty on fine leathers is 20 per cent; and sheets is but 25 per cent. They remarked that they would be quite satisfied with the duties were not interessed. It is not likely the Government will change the rates on either leather or boots and shoes as present. A deputation représenting the majoring richer leather or boots and shoes as present. A deputation représenting the targe saw manufacturers of the Dominion waited on the Ministers and asked relief from the working of the tariff. What they wint is a specific instead of an ad valorem duty would remedy this.

A deputation consisting of James Murray. W. A. Siepard, D. Rose, sr., A. W. Croil, John Armistrong, President Gilmour of the Toronto Typoraphical Union and W. F. Maclean, representing the employing printers, erectyping interests, printers' unions, etc., were introduced to Ministers Foster and Bowell by Mr. Cockburn, M. P. for Centres incoured to Min

Fearing that the Inland Revenue Department may carry out the suggestion of Commissioner Miall to withdraw the privilege of manufacturing vinegar in bond because of the allered irregularities. Mr. Wilson of Toronto and Mr. Charlton of Hamilton, extensive manufacturers, saw the minister this morning. The subject was discussed at length, and it is hoped such arrangements can be arrived at as to obviate the necessity of putting into force any stringent measures. It is alleged that rim would come to many vinegar manufacturers were the bonding privileges withdrawn.

BEAUTIFUL MRS. O'SHEA. THE WOMAN IN THE TIMES-PARNELL

OTTAWA, Feb. 13.—The House to-night was treated to an episode in the Lecaron matter. When the Speaker resumed the chair at 8 o'clock, Mr. Flynn (Lib.), Richmond, N. S., read the Associated Press despatch which has appeared in all the light papers; mond, N. S., read the Associated Press despatch which has appeared in all the daily papers:

London, Feb. 13.—Sir Charles Russell before the Parnell Commission yesterday directed his questions to the entered Leaverday directed his questions of the British and received 250 permond for more from the British Governties, and that he was still under the pay of both and that he was still under the pay of both and that a considerable sum was due him.

Mr. Flynn wanted to know if the dispatch were true as far as the Canadian reference was concerned. He gazedacross the floor. Seeing that neither Sir John Macdonald nor Sir Hector Langevin were in their places he said hie would renew the question at a later period. At 9.30 Mr. Flynn repeated the question and again read the paragraph. The Premier had in the meantime come into the chamber and shortly afterwards disappeared.
Then Mr. Flynn pressed for an answer from some of the ministers. Sir Hector Langevin turned around to the Minister of Justice, who said something in a whisper. Then Sir Hector said: "Well, I have been a member of the Government for a long time and I never—" Here the Premier once more appeared and the question was explained to him. Then Sir John said: "I never saw Lecaron, I never corresponded with him, I never paid him any money."

Mr. Mills: "Are you paying any other money."

Mr. Mills: "Are you paying any other person other money for such a purpose?"
Sir John (somewhat angrily): "No, we are paying nobody." Witness Moltoy's Triat.

LONDON, Feb. 13.—The case of Patrick Molloy, charged with testifying falsely before the Parnell Commission, was resumed to-day. Mr. Walker, clerk for a Dublin solicitor, testified that The London Times employed him to collect evidence. He interviewed Molloy, who after much pressing, stated that he joined the Fenians when 16 years old. Soon afterwards he discovered the dangerous character of the organization. The members he found were pledged to engage in secret efforts against ered the dangerous character of the organization. The members he found were pledged to engage in secret efforts against the Government and to convey arms for the purposes of the brotherhood, He himself had handed arms to Michael Fagan, an Invincible, afterwards hanged. Molloy joined the Invincibles in 1892, being introduced by Carey. At a meeting of the Invincibles the murder of Judge Lawson was discussed. Patrick Egan was present and upon leaving wrapped himself in a big cloak to disguise himself. Egan also attended a later meeting at which the failure of the attempt upon Lawson's life was discussed. The witness said that Molloy before making this statement demarred against giving information on the ground that he would incur great danger. When the witness read to Molloy the latter's written statement regarding his admission to the Invincible organization, the oath of membership in which contained the words "to lose, if necessary, life," Molloy became greatly agitated.

The hearing was adjourned.

Mr. de Lancasan moves an amendment that, "In view of the fact that a revision can be usefully effected only by a constituent assembly especially elected, the Chamber decides to refer the revision to such are assembly." The party of the Right has decided to vote for De Lancssan's amendment, which will also have the support of the "Appeal to the People" party. The Radical Left after a protracted meeting agreed to support M. Floquet.

SMITH TOWNSHIP.

THE ELECTION, -To the Editor of the Re-ew. -DEAR SIR. -I notice in the last issue of the Examiner a letter over the signature of James Middleton in which he attacks me for be-ing very personal in my answer to Ratepayer. James Middleton in which he attacks me for being very personal in my answer to Ratepayer. Now sir, his attack on me is as false as it is ungentlemanly. He says he would not have noticed my communication only out of respect to his neighbors and the electors of Smith. Now sir, if he had due respect for himself and his character he would not try to falsify plain statements in my last letter. He says Mr. Fitzgerald did not signify his intention to resign before March or April, while he does, or ought to know better. The conversation he speaks of took place between Mr. Fitzgerald and myself at Mrs. Segwick's sale in Otonabee, between the 15th and 20th of September—which I can prove it necessary by three men who sat on the fence beside us. And he impeaches me with telling one of his voters that I did not know who was going to oppose me. This is also untrue, as I could not say it in truth, for Mr. Fitzgerald told me on the day in question in Otonabee that Mr. Middleton was coming out and that he was going to support him. And the requisition that Ratepayer and Mr. Middleton are so anxious to get knowledge about was published about the 27th of September. Enough of questions has been asked already, and I am not at present going to eatisfy shelir curiosity; but I cannot help thinking in this case that the old prover his true, "that one tool can ask more questions than ten wise men can answer." Mr. Middleton want to know what date I asked Mr. Dumble's vote. For his satisfaction I will say I do not know; perhaps Mr. Dumble could enlighten him on that point—I know he could on others. And in reference to cards that have troubled Mr. Middleton and his friend so motch—If they cannot produce any of them, if they go to Mr. Stratfor's books they will find they were printed on the 29th of October, not so early in the fall. Then Mr. Middleton and his friend so motch—If they cannot produce any of them, if they go to him troudied them. Lor did any one ask ms but in the two cases at the new of introducing politics, and says the sectors then, nor did any one ask me but in the two cases I instanced in my last letter. Then Mr. Middle on holds me up to derison for attempting to persuade his voters to stay at home. This I deny also, but in the cases I tepoke of in my last, also, if there is any truth in what he says, he must have met with one of the two gentlemen. He says I got a promise out of him by telling him I also, but in the cases Lepoke of in my last; also, if there is any truth in what he says, he must have met with one of the two gentlemen. He says I got s promise out of him by telling him I did not know who was going to oppose methat's another one. When I first spoke to him I did not know who was coming out, and as soon as I-knew Mr. Middleton was the person I saked, "how will you do now, as your neighbor is coming out." He saked me who, and I told him, Mr. Middleton, Then he thought a moment and said he had nothing against Mr. Middleton, but, "I promised to vote for you and I will do it." That was in the fall, ond I never spoke to the man on the subject again until the Friday or Saturday before the election, when I met him again and saked him if he was going to give me a vote, when he told me he could not vote against Mr. Middleton, "You ought not then to vote against Mr. Middleton, "you ought not then to vote against Mr. Middleton, "you ought not then to vote against Mr. Middleton, "you ought not then to vote against Mr. Middleton, "you ought not then to vote against Mr. Middleton tells us that it was his first production. Well, it puts me in mind of the lable, where the mountain laboured and brought forth a mouse; and then, Mr. Editor, he threatens if he has to write again what he is going to do. He is going to waste paper and ink, for a good many that will read his production knew me before he was born, for I have lived 33 years among them; and let Mr. Middleton say, and think as he pleases, but I have not been an office-seeker and would not have allowed myself to be nominated only I believed a change was necessary; and was glad to see our Reeve, Mr. Sanderson, come before the Farmers' Institute and say he believed there should be a reform in the county council. I see by the report of the new concil they have reformed a good many of them out this year. There is room for improvement yet, for our tares are getting outrageous. In the last 35 years I have paid $2.700 tares and worked about 400 days on the road,

A BRISK DEBATE AT LAST

MR. MERBOITH JOINS ISSUE LWITH

TORONTO, Feb. 14.—The session of yester-day was lively and interesting. Our local rulers have settled down to hard work. The first battle was well fought on an important notice of motion by the Leader of the Opposition, regarding the contamination of the waters of the River Thames and the prosecution of the city of London for the offence by the Attorney-General.

in these prosecutions to exercise the greatest care."

In refutation of the charges made by Mr. Meredith, the Attorney-General said there were many proceedings of a quasi-criminal character in which it was most mecessary proceedings should be instituted in order to secure the Essnedy the law may provide. It was necessary to use the name of the Attorney-General in order to get the consideration which the case deserved. All that the Attorney-General had to do was to enquire as carefully as possible whether the case was one which should be brought before the courts in the way considered best. Mr. Meredith had acknowledged that the sewage of London had been carried into the stream. That showed there should be some prompt remedy.

stream. That showed there should be some prompt remedy.

The motion was opposed by Hon. Messrs Hardy, A. M. Ross and Fraser on the same grounds as the Premier, and Messrs, McLaughlin, Gibson, Huron, followed suit. Messrs Ballantyne, Snider and Waters, Gov-Government supporters, declared themselves strongly in favor of the motion of Mr. Meredith. From the Opposition benches Mr. Meredith was supported by Messra. Tooley, Craig, Clancy and Ostrom. The division showed 85 in favor of the motion and 46 against it. Two members of the Opposition were absent—Messra. E. F. Clarke and Biggar. The absences on the Government side were Messra. Dryden, Robyllard, Pardee, Leys and Chisholm.

A Slip of the Tongue.

An agreeable young man whom I often meet was calling with due ceremony on a nice Auburn girl the other evening, when her brother Tom, just arrived home from college on the evening train, rushed into the room and embraced his sister.

"Why, how plums roulys grown Edith!"

"Isn't she?" exclaimed the agreeable you man, and then he felt a chill racing down his apinal column. "That is," he stammered, "Tre no doubt of it—I". The brother looked carving knives at him, and the maiden blushed furfously. "I mean—er," said he, "I should judge so!"—Lewiston Journal.

Tonorro, Feb. 14.—The session of yesterday was lively and interesting. Our local rulers have settled down to hard work. The first battle was well fought on an important notice of miotion by the Leader of the Optical ton, regarding the contamination of the city of London for the offence by the Attorney-General. It also brought to notice the great difficulties many important facts. Is showed that not only the city of London was liable to prosecution, but that many other towns in Ontario were at the mercy of the Attorney-General. It also brought be to notice the great difficulties our towns have in getting clear of their sewage without contaminating to a dangerous extent the waters which flow by them.

Mr. Meredith made a long speech. One of the principal grounds of his complaint was that by the Government's policy the city of London was debarred from appealing, if necessary, to the highest court of the realm, the Prity Council.

The principal grounds of his complaint was that by the Government's policy the city of London was every Mr. Meredith obsosidered were rather extreme on the question of sanitary law. licenses intended to be granted in the village if the by-law goes into effect, viz. four. A discussion then ensued as to whether it was advisable to grant a shop license or not. Councilior Moore thought that the Council should take what advantage the law allowed them for regulating the sale of liquor, and moved that one shop license be granted. The motion, was seconded by Councilior Nelson, who expressed the opinion that liquor would be sold whether the Council granted a license or not, and thought that they should take advantage of the Act and derive the revenue from such sale. Councilior Hull was adverse to granting a wholesale license. He felt conjudent that it was the wish of the community that no such license should be granted, and thought that the future consideration of the by-law should be deferred in order to ascertain the will of the people, who, he said, would speak out with no uncertain sound, if they had an opportunity of doing so. The wholesale liquor license system had never worked well here, and he thought that the people would oppose the granting of a license. If the people wanted liquor they would send to Toronto or Peterborough for it, and the money would go out of the village. If they granted a license it would make the Act more workable, and he had every confidence that the officers would see that the law was thoroughly enforced. After considerable discussion the matter was allowed to stand over for two weeks. The Alystery of a Hansom Cab and saw that the only way to save myself was to obtain possession of the marriage certificate and deny everything. With this idea in my mind I followed him up town and saw him meet Moreland, and drink with him. They went into the hotel in Russell street, and when Whyte came out, at half past 12, he was intoxicated. I saw him go out along to the Scotch church, near the Burke and Wills monument, and cling to the lamp post at the corner. I thought I would then be able to get the certificate from him, as he was drunk, when I saw a gentleman in a light coat—I did not know it was Fitzgerald—come up to him and hall a cab for him. I saw there was nothing more to be done at that time, so, in despair, wenthouse and waited for the next day, in fear lest he should carry out his determination. Nothing, however, turned up, and I was beginning to think that Whyte had abandoned his purpose, when I heard that he had been murdered in the hansom cab. I was in great fear leat the marriage certificate would be found on him, but as nothing was said about it I began to wonder. I knew he had it on him, so came to the conclusion that the murderer, whoever he was, had taken it from the body, and would sooner or later come to me to extort money, knowing that I dare not denounce him. Fitzgerald was arrested, and afterwards acquitted, so I began to think that the certificate had been lost, and my troubles were at an end. However, I was always haunted by a dread that the sword was hanging over my head, and would fall sooner or later. I was right, for two nights ago Roger Moreland, who was an intimate friend of Whyto's, called on me and produced the marriage certificate, which he offered to sell to me for five thousand pounds. In horror, I accused him of my own sake, I was nearly mad with the horror I was placed in, either to denounce my daughter as illegitimate or let a murderer escape the penalty of his crime. At last I agreed to keep silent, and handed him a check for £5,000 pounds, receiving in return the marriage cer Ly FERGUS W. HUME.

mad had almost determined to commit sui-cide, but, thank tool, I sayed myself from that crime. I wrote out this confession in order that after my death the true story of the murder of. Whyte may be known, and that any one who may hereafter be accused of the murder may not be wrongfully punof the nurder may not be wrongfully punished. I have no hopes of Moreland ever receiving the penalty of his crime; as when this is open all trace of him will, no doubt, be look. I will not destroy the marriage certificate, but place is with these papers, so that the truth of my story can be seen. In conclusion, I, would ask forgiveness of my daughter Margaret for my sins, which have been visited on her, but she can see for herself that circumstaness were too strong for me. May she forgive me, as I hope God in his infinite mercy will, and may she come sometimes and pray over my grave, nor think too hardly upon her dead father."

- CHAPTER XXXIV. Calton's voice faltered a little when he read those last red words, and laid the manuscript down on the table amid a dead slence, which was first broken by Briaz.

"Thank God," he said reverently, "thank God that he was innocent of the crime!"

"So," said. Calton, a little cynically, "the riddle which has perplexed use long is read, and the Sphinx is silent forevermore."

"I knew he was incapable of such a thing," cried Chinston, whom emotion had hitherto kept silent. THE HANDS OF JUSTICE cried Chinston, whom effection had hitherto kept eilent.

Meanwhile Kilsip listened to these culogistic remarks on the dead man, and purred to himself, in a satisfied selve of way, like a cat who has caught a mouse.

"You see str," he said, addressing the barrister, "I was right after all."

"Yes," answered Calton, frankly, "I acknowledge my defeat, but now".

"I'm going to arrest Moreland right off," said Kilsip.

There was a silence for a few moments, and then Calton spoke again.

"I suppose it must be so—poor girl—poor girl."

"It know her better than you do," said the result of the every for the young lady myself," said the detective in his soft, low voice, "but you see I cannot let a dangerous criminal escape for a mere matter of sentiment."

"Of course not," said Fitzgerald, sharply.
"Moreland must be arrested right off."

"But he will confess everything," said Calton, angrily, "and then every one will know about this first marriage."

"Let them," retorted Brhm, bitterly. "As soon as she is well enough we will marry at once, and leave Australia forever."

"He know her better than you do," said the

"But"—
"I know her better than you do," said the young man, doggedly; "and I know she would like an end made of this whole miserable business at once. Arrest the murderer and let him suffer for his crime."
"Well, I suppose it must be so," said Chinston, with a sigh, "but it seems very hard that this slur should be cast upon Miss Frettlby." Brian turned a little pale.
"The sins of the father are generally visited upon the children by the world," he said, bitterly. "But after the first pain is over, in new lands among new faces, she will forget the bitter pask."
"Now that it is settled Moreland is to be arrested," said Callon, "how is it to done! Is be still in Melbourne?"
"Rather," said Klisip, in a testisded tone.
"Yee had my eye on him for the last two months, and some one is watching him for me now. Trust me, he can't move two steps without my knowing it."

"Ah, indeed!" said Calton quickly. "Then do you know if he has been to the bank and cashed that check for five thousand which Frettlby gave him?

HAD A LITTLE ONE HIMSELF.

A Queer Bit of Character from the Record of a Police Court.

If you were a sergeant at the desk of the Central station you, too, would seem grim and hard hearted to air outsider. They see so much crime—they see so many phases of it—they hear the same-excuses over and over until they seem to lose all faith in and all hope for those who sin. Their hearts grow hardened, the wellsprings of mercy dry up, and you see no pity in their glances. And yet it needs but a sentiment to break through hardened, the wellsprings of mercy dry up, and you see no pity in their glances. And yet it needs but a sentiment to break through the crust.

The other night a woman was brought in staggering drunk. She had a face that was pinched and drawn, and it was plain that worry and hunger made her look years older than she was. You and I would have looked into her face and said that she had some excuse for temporarily seeking to forget her identity. The grim old sergeant only saw an infraction of the law, and he frowned upon her as she stood clutching the desk.

Here was a living book which recorded twenty years of worry, suffering, heartaches, poverty, woe and want, but he refused to turn the pages. He had no curiosity; he had no pity.

o pity.
"Name!" he sharply demanded.

"Name!" he sharply demanded.
She gave it.
"What have you got in that parcel?"
"Till never give it up!" she exclaimed.
It was something wrapped in an old handkerchief, and she clung to it the tighter. You and I would have wondered if it wasn't a bit of money she had there, but the sergeant thought of poison or some other danger and ordered it handed up. It took two men to release her grasp, and when the parcel was undone, what do you suppose they found in It A wee little stocking, such as a child a couple of years old might wear. The big toe of the wearer had made a hole, and the hed had beeh worn thin, and the bright red color had faded away, as the glow fades from the summer sky when the twilight comes down.

the summer sky when the twilight comes down.

The sergeant held it up—not in-mockery and ridicule—but as if it were a tender thing. The grimness went out of his face, a softness replaced the frown, and, as the woman bent her bead and sobbed, he said:

"It is a relie of her dead child! Poor, unfortunate mother!"

"You won't take it from me?" she gasped.

"Not for the world! Can you go bome?"

"I—I guess so. I feel stronger."

"Then go, and may all men and women be merciful to you."

The spring of mercy had been touched. As the grim old sergeant held up that faded stocking he remembered that he had relies at home—relies of children who had danced on his knee in the sunshine of the past, but who now moldered in the dust. Not for all the money in the world would be have brought one more burden to that soul.—Detroit Free Press.

Murphy's Ducking Experience.

Dan Murphy, one of the oldest of St. Louis' duck hunters, tells the following frog story: "One day early last October I went to Bluff lake for my fall hunt. Late one moonlight night I saw what I thought one thousand or more wood ducks sitting on a sycamore tree. It occurred to me that if I shot a duck before Oct. 15 I would violate the law. While studying whether or not to violate, the whole crowd suddenly flew up and over me. I shot two barrels and two more, and a dozen fell right around me. Fearing some constable might have heard the shot, I squatted right in the marsh for fifteen minutes, when, hearing nothing, I gathered up my ducks, and lot they were crows. I sat down and howled. Then I swore I would get a dozen wood ducks if I had to stay there all night. A few minutes after the moon went down at housend frogs suddenly sprang forth and began their confounded monotonous chant. I had no meat in camp, and hulf a dozen times started to shoot a mess, but refrained to save my shells for ducks. Along about morning one came sailing down to my right. I didn't hit it. Then two came to my left. I hit both and then five drove at my head and I got them. Then they began coming so fast that they took my latt off, and I slaughtered them until my shells were exhausted. But the rascals all crawled under the marsh grass, and got a way while I was shooting more. I went to the camp as mad as a hatter. I made a long frog gig, took a new supply of shells, and started back early the following morn. went to the camp as mad as a hatter. I made long frog gig, took a new supply of shells, and started back early the following mornand started back early the following morning. I just got among the frogs again when the ducks came. I shot all my shells away, and again got nothing. Besides, the frogs had all disappeared. Along came the ducks right at me. Finally, they were coming so thick that I had to blaze at one with the gig. Sure, to my surprise, I gigged one. I put it in my pocket, when two came along, and I gigged them and put them in my pocket. I kept on till I had a fine bag."—St. Louis Telegram.

The Seamy Side of the Purple.

"The Empress Frederick," writes to me one of her set-a member of the consular service and 'an artist—"is perhaps the saddest woman alive. She loved her husband; she loved power, because she has in a high degree the political faculty and is endowed with a mind which sees things wholesale rather than in detail, and she is a prond woman, in the best sense of the word. Her husband and the throne, for which she had carefully educated herself, have been taken from her. The misery of worldly greatness was impressed upon her in the mest cruel object lessons with which Providence was ever pleased to teach a human being. Her pride received sore rubs during the greater part of, her married life. But it was buffeted with during her short and unhappy occupancy of the impierial throne, and was trampled upon in the early days of her widow-hood. She only was esteemed as her husband's wife. As a woman she was held of no account because her sex is despised in Prussia. This was a great affliction to the edest daughter of Queen Victoria, who when the Empress Frederick was a child filled perhaps the greatest position that there was in the world. None of her daughters have her mind. They are kindly and well disposed and during thrity years was a cruel blow to her. She has become deeply pious. Religion alone which she lived at Potsdam with her husband hospitals, and to addict herself to what is known as Christian socialism. Neither sho nor her husband liked political socialism. They felt that the state could never save a people and that salvation should come of individual effort, working from within outward."—Paris Letter.

Buty on Corn Fed to Cattle for Export Defeated.

OTAWA, Feb. 14.—This was a day eminently devoted to trade and the tariff at the Capital. Trade and commerce and the tariff were the talked the hotel corridors, of the lobbies, of the departments, and it was rattled over the floors of the House far into the might. There was only an incident or two to-day to relieve the monotony of the talk—these were the introduction of Mr. Charles Wesley Colter, the member-sleet for Haldipiand, and the distribution of very suggestive valentines to several members. Mr. Colter was brought into the chamber between Sir Richard and Mr. Charlton. It is a long time since such a din was heard on the Opposition benches as went up when Mr. Colter shock hands with the Speaker and claimed his seat. The demonstration lasted five minutes, and many compliments were exchanged across the floor by the wags, and party comedians.

Sir Donald A. Smith, M.P., took his seat for the first time this session this afternoon.

Sir Adolohe Caron introduced a bill amending the Milita Act. It has reference to the calling out of the, militia force in aid of the civic power. Hereafter, when a requisition signed by three magistrates is made for the assistance of local corps, the municipality must deposit with the Lieutenant-Governor of the province such a sum as will likely pay the expenses of the militia, failing which and the corps actually going on service, the Government will be empowered to stop from a provincent subsidy the amount of their sustenance. It is also proposed to include in the bill a provision that permanent corps cannot be called out without the direct sanction of the Minister of Militia. The department acts up the claim "that it has suffered heavy losses by municipalities failing to pay the expenses of calling out the volunteers to aid the civic power."

The debate on Dr. Landerkin's motion lasted seven hours, and was not finished until 12 etc.

It was just midnight when the division was taken. While the whips were out "calling in the members" the House was entertained to songs by Mr. Joneas, who gave the old favorite "Brigadier." and Col. Prior of British Columbia.

The amendment to the amendment was lost by a vote of 112 to 70. Mr. Colter was loudly applauded as he recorded his first vote with the Opposition. Mr. Brien (Lib., Esset), Mr. Campbell (Lib., Kent), and Mr. Amyot (Nat.), voted with the Government.

A vote was then taken on Mr. Fisher's amendment and it was lost—71 yeas, 111 mays.

Gen. Laurie (Qon., Shel.) voted with the yeas and Mesars. Campbell, Brien and Amyot again voted with the nays (Government).

The Opposition would not consent tô declare the man motion itself lost on the same division and a vote was taken. This motion was also defeated by a vote of 71 yeas and 111 nays.

Mr. Campbell voted yea this time and Gen. Laurie and Mr. Brien nay.

The House adjourned at 12.35.

OTTAWA, Feb. 14.—Mr. Clarke Wallace's anti-Combines Bill is meeting with a strong opposition throughout the Dominion, and a portion of a big deputation is already here to use its influence with the Government against the bill. Telegrams are pouring it to menuuse its influence with the Government against the bill. Telegrams are nouring in to members of the Government to call the member for West York and his bill down. Humor was in circulation this evening that the Government had requested Mr. Wallace to make certain modifications in his bill, but the gettleman in question assures the that such is not the case.

Treasurer Ross Makes its Annual Statement to the Legislature,

Toronto, Feb. 15.—The Budret speech was delivered yesterday and the galleries of the House were well filled to hear it.

Mr. Ross stated that the receipts of the province for the year just closed were $3,587.

421. There were made up of; Subsidy and specific grant, $1,196,872; interest on capital held and on investments, $33,443; Crown lands, $1,436,464; Alroma taxes, $2222; law stamps, $31,044; licenses, $223,886; education department, $3,317,374; public institutions, $102,897; casual revenue, $34,714; other sources, $33,273; "other sources," including Asylum land sales and new Parliament building fund, $63,219.

From Crown lands the amount estimated was $1,599,600, and the receipts $1,436,464, an excess of $36,854, the largest since Clondedration. In the item of law stamps the estimate, $60,000, was exceeded by $15,044, and for licenses the amount estimated was $195,000, and the amount received was $233,886, an increase of $38,885. These are the principalitiess in which increases were noted, but many of the tressurer's estimates fell short. The total oxidinary receipts estimated were $3,403,233, and the amount received was $3,490,44, an excess of $55,811.

The expenditure cetimated for the civil government last year was $198,745, and this was streeded by $1940. The estimate folegislation, $122,050, was exceeded by $4980; owing chiefly to an increase in stationery, printing and binding. The estimate of justice, which was examinated at $376,476, over-ran $7075. The vast amount expended Floquet's Objection and the Ministry at Once Resign.

PARIS, Feb. 14.—When the question of the revision of the constitution came up in the Chamber of Deputies to-day, Count de Douville-Mailleften moved that the debate on the subject be adjourned. Notwithstanding the opposition of the Government the motion was adopted by a vote of 307 to 218. Premier Floquet thereupon announced that the ministry would immediately resign.

At the conclusion of M. Floquet's romarks a divison was taken with the result stated. The resignation of the Ministry was a complete surprise to the Chamber. M. Floquet had said nothing implying an intention to make a motion to adjourn a Cabinet question. Both the Left and the Right were unaware how the Ministry would regard the vote. The majority included the members of the Right and a number of Opportunists.

Opportunists.

After the adjournment the Radical Left and the Extreme Left held a meeting and sent delegates to M. Floquet to express regret at the fall of the Cabinet and congratuate the retiring premier upon the firmness of the position he had assumed.

Carnot Holds a Conference.

Paris, Feb. 14.—President Carnot, after the ministers had tendered their resignations, sent for M. Melene, the President of the Chamber of Deputies, and subsequently had a conference with M. Leroyer, President of the Senate. A rumor was current this afternoon that M. Melene had been asked to form a Cabinet, but to night the stated that President Carnot has as yet entrusted no one with the task.

cost the Government $112,694 to fight the case and he thought the Dominion Government should re-imburse the Government for this.

The total expenditure estimated was $3,125, 804, and the actual expenditure was $3,007, 637, thus the expenditure less than voted was $118,767.

The total ordinary receipts were $3,489, 944.81, and the expenditure was $3,007, 697.02, showing an excess of $482,007.72.

Then there were certain statutory expenditures, such as drainage debentures, railway certificates and expenditure on Parliament buildings, which swelled the total to $3,586, 248, and the total receipts were $3,587,421, showing an excess of receipts of $51,173. The Government have therefore, out of the receipts of the year, provided liberal grants. They have expended in the public buildings and other buildings $493,497, pand off railway and annuity and certificates $390, 182.

Regarding the last subject with which Mr. Ros death, he calculated that by the action of the Dominion Government the Province would sustain a loss of some $800,000. He said in this connection: I am sure I express the feeling of the people of Ontario when I say I would not accept our claim upon such conditions. Now, Mr. Speaker, my justification for reference to this question at such length is that it is a serious question for Ontario. It involves a difference of nearly a million dollars to the Province. The difference according to the new accounts submitted, as they make them up on their plan of 5 per cents, simple interest, shows a loss to the Province of $857, 000 as compared with the account as somered. He had been the province of $850,000 as compared with the account as a formerly He had previously informed the House that the treasurers contended that the effects of the Acts of 1873 and 1834 was to cancel the surplus debt of $10,500,608 with which Ontaric and Quebec had under the British North America Act Four anger Claims the Credit.

Paris, Feb. 14.—Boulanger was a passive spectator of the proceedings in the Chamber of Deputies. After adjournment he issued a manifesto to the electors of the Department of the Seine. In this he claims credit for his party for "the overthrow of a discredited Ministry that was attempting to ensuare the country by the comedy of a proposal to revise the constitution, which, if passed by the Chamber, the Ministry well knew would be rejected by the Senate."

From The Mail building the flames soon spread to the large Masonic block immediately adjoining—the finest structure in the city. The wind was blowing quite a gale. The Masonic block, which now lies a heap of smoking ashes, was occupied from top to bottom. On the first flat were the postoffice (contents entirely destroyed, except some little registered matter); A. C. Fraser, large stock dry goods and groceries; J. N. THE TIMES' SOLICITOR BEFORE THE

Oyer $22,000 Paid Through Him for the Bocuments-The Authors of the Articles on "Parnellism and Crime," LONDON, Feb. 14.—Mr. Soames, solicitor for The Times, testified before the Parnell Commission to-day that he visited Dublin in May, 1888, in quest of evidence. At the office of Alexander Morphy, Crown Solicitor for Kerry, he had an interview with a person who was introduced to him as a former employe in the office of the League—and who produced a slip bearing the signature of Miss Anna Parnell, specimens of Patrick Egan's handwriting and a bundle of documents, which the witness inspected at length. He copied some of these documents and made notes of others. Witness arranged that the documents should be brought to London, and they were brought here on Whitmonday, 1888, and embodied in an affidayit produced during the trial of the suit of O'Donnell against Walter for libel. Mr. Soames said he was first consulted regarding the alleged Parnell letters at the end of November or beginning of December, 1886. He produced five letters, including the letter a facsimile of which was printed in The Times.

Attorney-General Webster said the letters had been photographed. At Chief Justice Hannen's request he handed the photographs to the bench.

Mr. Soames said Mr. Macdonald, manager of The London Times, handed him the letters. The letters were submitted to an expert in April, 1887. Before that genuine specimens of Parnell's writing were collected and other specimens begetness of extensivences of the submitted genuine specimens of the submitte with other specimens of Egan's writing.

Sir Charles Russell said: "We are only able to give these documents a cursory glance. The court must not assume that all will be unquestioned."

The Attorney-General rejoined that he did not suppose Sir Charles—would admit the genuineness of the letters.

Soames testified that Richard Pigott gave the Parnel letters to Houston, secretary of the Irish Loyal and Patriotic Union, who handed them to Macdonald. Soames produced a letter from Byrnes referring to a check for £100 which Parnell promised him when he suddenly went to France in September, 1887.

Witness said he employed Detective Moser to go to America to trace the source of certain documents known to be forgeries. He never used these documents in any way. They were not received through Pigott.

On cross-examination the witness said he was not consulted regarding the publication of the articles on "Parnellism and Orime," though he knew they were being prepared early in 1887. Flanagan, the son of an Irish judge, co-operated with a gentleman on The Times in preparing the articles. Up to January, 1888, twelve letters had been obtained from Figott. Later more letters written by Egan, O'Kelly and Davitt were obtained, making a total of 12. He did not know precisely what was paid for the letters. Probably whatever was paid passed through him. The first payment of £1000 was made to Houston. It was partly for his expenses in going to America and partly for the payment of Dr. Maguir and other assistants. The successive subsequent payments to Houston. It was partly for his expenses in going to America and partly for the payment of Dr. Maguir and other assistants. The successive subsequent payments to form a conclusive opinion. He decided that it was genuine.

Before the court adjourned Attorney. General Webster and Flanagan had written for The Times without the knowledge of his father.

Sir Charles Russell remarked that he quite believed that.

Mr. MEREDITH made a motion in the On-tario Legislature on Wednesday on a sub-ject in which Peterborough is greatly inter-ested. Recently an action was entered against the city of London for having its against the city of London for having its sewage outlet at the river and it was fined $1,000. Mr. Meredith pointed out the difficulty in London and in other places of finding any other practicable way of disposing of sewage and moved for the appointment of a committee or commission to investigate the subject and gather information for the guidance of the municipalities. This motion was opposed by the Government and voted down, although several Liberals voted with the Opposition. In reference to this vote the Empire says:—

time of his trial, says in a letter to the Minister.

"It was a case strongly suggestive of the dangers of convicting on the testimony of an accomplice. In this case the danger was aggravated by the fact that the principal felon, who admitted his guilt and that he forged the notes, was the only one who swore that Kyle had any knowledge of figures."

Kyle, it will be remembered, was convicted of forgery almost solely on the evidence of his partner in business and alleged partner in crime, Celin Munro. A true bill was returned against Munro at the last criminal assizes at Teronto, but in view of an "arrangement" with the Crown to give Kyle away the bill was ignored by the Crown officers and no prosecution was undertaken. Sir John Thompson will put the petition before the Cabinet on Saturday afternoon.

Those Who Have Reigned Longest.
Among the living sovereigns mentioned in the new "Almanach de Gotha" those who have reigned longest are the emperor of Brazil, who ascended the throne in 1831, at the age of 6; Queen Victoria, in 1837, and Duke Ernst, of Saxe-Coburg-Gotha, crowned in 1841. The oldest sovereign is Pope Leo XIII, who is 78 years old; the youngest is the king of Spain, not yet 3.—Chicago Times. NERVOUS DEBILITY

Lumbermen's Dispute.

An important arbitration has been going on at Trenton this week, says the Ontario, between the two large lumber firms, the Rathbun Co, and the Gilmour Co. The arbitrators are Col. Lazier and Mr. G. H, Pope, of this city, and Mr. J. M. Irwin, Paterborough. The result of this arbitration will be looked forward to with great interest by the owners of timber limits, as furnishing a precedent has vexed question arising out of the driving of logs. The logs of the different owners necessarily get mixed in driving, and each party puts on a force to represent the number of logs they have in the drive. The Gilmour Company get out pine logs, whereas the Rathbuns get out a large quantity of cedar. The Rathbuns claim that cedar logs are more easily driven than pine, and the arbitration is to settle the proportion each party shall hear of the expense of driving a mixed hear of the proportion each party shall hear of the expense of driving a mixed hear of the expense of driving a mixed hear of the expense of driving a mixed hear of the free with the dead of the expense of driving a mixed hear of the free with each bottle of the cach bottle of the safe hould, the chief agents of the company in Great Britain in the water until spring or until the less because until the less bricks and the water until spring or until the less breaks up.

Mr. BioGrard Hall, the President, moved the adoption of the report with the following remarks:—I have more than ordinary pleasure in moving the adoption of the report and statement of accounts now in the hands of the shareholders, because I the nands of the shareholders, because I believe that the financial position of the company is upon a more solid and satisfactory basis to-day than it has been on any previous occasion in the history of the institution. It is not unknown to our shareholders that many of the loans in the early history of the company were made when history of the company were made wi the value of farming lands as compared with the present values were largely in-flated. It has, therefore, been the duty of the directors for the last two years to give a great deal of attention to the collection of the older and less desirable mortgages and replacing the money in new loans based upon values less initated. The success that has been accomplished in this direction as shown by the repayment of no less than $300,000 during the past year clearly indicate the improved position of the company. and the more encouraging outlook for the future. I beg to move the adoption of the

The hall had been most tastefully decorated with flags and bunting and presented a gay appearance, while the sixty or more couples of dancers tripped the light fantastic toe to their heart's content to the tuneful strains of the Brigade Band orchestra. Supper was served about twelve o'clock at the Snowden House, and mine host gave a very tochsome spread. The Mystery of a Hansom Cab

Ly FERGUS W. HUME. "Well, now," observed Kilsip, after a pause, "do you know you rather startled me when you told me he had received a check for that amount?"

"Why?"

"It's such a large one," replied the detec-tive, "and had I known what sum he had paid into his account I should have been suspicious."

"Then he has been to the bank?"
"The his own bank, yes. He went there yesterday afternoon at 2 o'clock—that is, the day after he got the so it would be sent around to Mr. Frettliby's bank, and would not be returned till next day, and as he died in the meanwhile I expect it hasn't been honored, so Mr. Moreland won't have his money

"I wonder what he'll do," said Chinston.
'Go to the manager and kick up a row,"
'A Klisip, coolly, "and the manager will doubt tell him he'd better see the execusut, my good friend, the manager doesn't w who the executors are," broke in Cal-impatiently. "You forget the will has to be read." Then he'll tell him to go to the late Mr.

con, impatiently.

"Then he'll tell him to go to the late Mr. Fretilpy's solicitors. I suppose he knows who they are," retorted Kislip.

"Thinton & Tarbet," said Calton, musingly, "but it's questionable if Moreland would go to them."

"Why shouldn't he, sir?" said Kilsip, quickly. "He does not know anything about this," laying his hand on the confession, "and as the check is genuine enough he won't let £5,000 go wither a struggle."

"I'll tell you what," observed Calton, after a few moments of reflection, "I'll go send word to Thinton & Tarbet, and when he calls on them they can send him up to me."

"A very good idea," said Kilsip, rubbing his hands, "and then I can arrest him."

"But the warrant?" interposed Brian, as Calton arose and put on his hat.
"Is here," said the detective, producing it.
"By Jove, yoù must have been pretty certain of his guilt," remarked Chiaston, dryly.

"Of course I was," retorted Kilsip, in a satisfied tone of voice. "When I told the magistrate where I found the coat, and reminded him of Moreland's acknowledgment at the trial, that he had it in his possession before the murder, I soon got him to see the accessity of having Moreland arrested."

"Half-past 4," said Calton, pausing for a moment at the door and looking at his watch.
"The rest sat waiting his return, and chatted about the curious end of the hansom cab mystery, when, in about the minutes, Calton rushed in hurriedly and closed the door after him quickly.

"Fate is playing into our hands," be said, rusned in mixed him quickly.

"Fate is playing into our hands," he said, as soon as he recovered his breath, "Moreland called on Thinton & Tarbet, as Kilsip surmised, and as neither of them were in, said he would call again before 5 o'clock. I told the clerk to bring him up to me at once, as he may be here at any moment."

observed Chinston.

"Oh, he'll come," said the detective confidently, rathling a pair of handcuffs together.

"He is so satisfied that he has made things safe that he'll walk right into the trap."

It was getting a little dusk, and the four men were greatly excited, though they concealed it under an assumed nonchalance.

"What a situation for a drama," said

Brian.
"Only," said Chinston, quietly, "it is as realistic as in the old days of the Coliseum, where the actor who played Orpheus was torn to pieces by bears at the end of the onesed.

Meanwhile Kilsip remained scated in his chair, humming an operatic air and chinking the handcuffs together by way of accompaniment. He felt intensely pleased with ing the handcults together by way or account paniment. He felt intensely pleased with himself, the more so as he saw that by this capture he would be ranked far above Gorby. "And what would Gorby say!—Gorby who had laughed at all his ideas as foolish, and who had been quite wrong from the first iff only"—

"Hush!" said Calton, holding up his finger, as steps were heard echoing on the flags outside. "Here he is, I believe."

Kilsip arose from his chair, and stealing softly to the window, looked cautiously out." Then he turned round to those inside and, nodding his head, slipped the handcuffs into his pocket. Just as he did so, there was a knock at the door, and, in response to Calton's invitation to enter, Thinton & Tarbet's clerk came in with Roger Moreland. The latter faitered a little on the threshold, when he saw Calton was not alone, and seemed, half inclined to retreat. But, evidently, thinking there was no danger of his secret being discovered, he pulled himself together, and advanced into the room in an easy and confident manner.

and advanced into the room in an easy and confident manner.

"This is the gentleman who wants to know about the check, sir," said Thinton & Tarbet's cierk to Calton.

"Oh, indeed," answered Calton, quietly.

"I am glad to see him; you can go."

The clerk bowed and went out, closing the door after him. Moreland took his seat directly in front of Calton, and with his back to the door. Klisip, seeing this, strolled across the room in a nonchalant manner, while Calton engaged Moreland in conversation, and quietly turned the key.

"You want to see me, siri" said Calton, resuming his seat.

ming his seat.
"Yes; that is, alone," replied Moreland,

"Yes; that is, alone," replied Moreland, unessily,
"Oh, these gentlemen are all my friends," said Calton, quietly; "anything you may say is quite safe."
"That they are your friends, and are quite safe, is nothing to me," said Moreland, insolently. "I wish to speak to you in private."
"Don't you think you would like to know my friends?" said Calton coolly, taking no notice of his remark.
"D—— your friends, sir!" cried Moreland, furiously, rising from his feet.
Calton laughed, and introduced Mr. Moreland to the others.

SMALL BOY'S REVENGE

Family Row Over His Father

Fretty Typewriter.

A good story is told on a certain well known lawyer, who now has one of his daughters to manipulate his typewriter instead of the winsome blonde who was formerly a handsome piece of furniture in the office. The change came about in this way. One day his 10-year-old son wandered into his office just as the legal light was examining a letter written by the hired amanuensis. In order to read the letter it was necessary for the lawyer to bend over the back of the young lady's chair. The youngster looked at his parent, took in the situation, and then said: "Pa, I want a quarter."

"I'm busy now, don't bother me, boy," said the father, and he continued to hang over is shapely shoulder of the fair typewriter and peruse the letter which she held in her hand.

"Pa," said the boy again, "I want a quarter."
You'd better give it to me and I'll clear out."

"Don't worry me, I tell you," said the father. "Can't you see that I am busy?"

The youngster didn't say any more, but just hung around the office. He looked out of the window and counted the white horses as they went by; he emptied some sand into an inkstand, and then flickened the compound with mucilage, and did a lot of other mischievous tricks such as will only suggest themselves to a 10-year-old boy. But he kept a close watch on the governor and typewriter, and every now and then would shrug his shoulders, as much as to say: "I'll get even Finally the lawyer was ready to go home, and every now and then would shrug his shoulders, as much as to say: "I'll get even with you."

Finally the lawyer was ready to go home, and, taking his little boy by the hand, they walked to their modest appearing, but handsomely furnished residence. Very little was said on the way, and the father was evidently nettled at what he considered the misbehavior of his son. When the family sat down to dinner he narrated the circumstances to his wife, and she sternly told the young man that if he could not behave himself she would not let him go down to his father's office again.

The boy didn't seem to mind that much, and finally said, as he balanced his fork on his forefinger: "Perhaps I was somewhat rude and impatient, but, mainma, if you'd seen pa lean over that pretty typewriter and play with her bangs, and whisper in her car, you'd have thought he'd been glad to give me a quarter to get me out of the way. I never knew how much pa was stack on her before."

The youngster was sent away from the table in disgrace, and he subsequently received striking evidence of a parent's wrath, but there was also an agreement between the parents that resulted in the dismissal of the fair typewriter the following day.—Washington Star.

QUEREC, Feb. 15.—In his Budget speech Treasurer Shehyn to-day claimed a surplus of $373,000 in receipts over expenditure. The floating debt consisted of $4,000,000 of undisputed claims already due or maturing early. The Treasurer's statement showed nearly $750,000 realized over the estimates. After deducting the increase in interest the ordinary expenditure of the last fiscal year had remained about the same in fall its items as in 1833, 1884 and 1887. For the intermediate years he claimed the then Government had cut down expenses in view of impending general elections. The excess of expenditure over receipts Dec. 31 was $1,893,000.

He estimated for next year's revenue $3,403,600, of which $58,000 was capital account and $3,400,000 of dinary revenue. He expected $1,256,000 of from the Federal subsidy and interest on trust funds from the Federal Government. figures, as well as quick with a

He expected $1,250,000 from the Federal subsidy and interest on trust funds from the Federal Government.

Regarding the $20,000 from Ontario a interest on collections from the school fund he said, pursuant to the recent, agreement, Ontario intended to pay into the hands of the Federal Government the capital of the amounts collected since Confederation from the sale of school lands. Quebec's share of this would be about $400,000 and five per cent, interest was to be paid on the deposit. The total payments of the year he estimated at $4,389,000, of which $3,353,000 was for ordinary expenditure and $1,000,000 on capital account. Of the former $1,186,000 would be required for public service, and $2,167,000 for administrative service. the prosecution.

Edwin R. Shaw, of Tilbury East, said that on the 2nd of July last in Wheatley, prisoner endeavored to get him to join him and one McDuff in robbing old man Holton. The prisoner said Hotton had $1000 on him, and "by God
I am going to have it." Witness said Holton might shoot them. Prisonersaid no danger, and if it was necessary he could shoot too. Witness told a magistrate's clerk in Tilbury Centre the next day, but he did not think there was any need to take proceedings. When he heard of the murder he related the conversation to the detective.

he related the conversation to the detective. His evidence was full and remained unshaken by a long cross-examination.

Geo. Mustard, of Colchester North, deposed to prisoner coming to nis-place on May 22, in company with one Alex. Matteson, also known as McDaff. They tries to get him to join in the plot, but he refused, and said that they would kill the old mar and get caught. Saw prisoner afterward-looking for McDuff, who he believed wai going back on him. In September prisoner came where witness was threshing, called him aside, and asked him if there were any suspicions on him and McDuff. Witness said they had lots of gall to stay around. Prisoner said if it was to be done again he would not do what he had done.

This was the first of the evidence, and the magistrate would have committed the prisoner at once, but his connect took the objection that the murder had not been proven at this trial, though the evidence was put in at Onick's trial.

The court adjourned till Monday, wher the medical and other evidence touching the murder itself will be given.

Hon. C.H. Tupper, Minister of Marine and as well and as cheaply as did Peter Mitchell navy and the fish ponds of the country.

Mr. Mitchell would not have it that way, and he gave the young gentleman who

Mr. Waldie of Halton took a hand in the more attention to trying to defeat him

The skirmish in the evening was quite lively. The traveling expenses of ministers and Government officials together with cab fares at the Capital was, discussed for nearly three hours. Mr. Lister and Mr.

of Parliament.

Mr. Lister said a good deal about the free pass business and he added that there was much money that was charged to ministerial expenses that he really believed was expended in other ways.

Dr. Wilson wanted to know how the Minister of Millita disposed of the $1500 charged to that gentleman for personal expenses during the past year.

Minister of Minis disposed of the close charged to that gentleman for personal expenses during the past year.

Sir Adolphe said it was every cent of it used for expenses in connection with his department. He refused further explanation but said the items had been furnished the Auditor-General.

The Minister of Customs was complimented as being the most economical member as to personal expenses of the Cabinet. Speaking of sums paid for cab hire by the Premier, Sir John said he was too poor to own horses and a carriage, he was too old to walk to Earnscliffe, and as long as he was in the office he supposed the items would be charged. The Premier maintained that these contigencies were voted by Parliament, and his government were in the habit of expending them. He did not think they were improperly expended.

Notwithstanding the vigorous criticism offered by the Opposition the House is making good progress with the estimates and the various items for civil Government have all been passed.

MONTREAL, Feb. 16.—For a year or two past William Greterle, living at Cote St. Antoine, has been carrying on what was known as a black goods store on Notre Dame-street. He, however, departed the other day and Mr. Feedor Boas, of Modill street, was named curator to the concern. Yesterday a good deal of surprise was manifested amongst the members of the trade on learning of Greterle's arrest on a capias at Mr. Boas' instance, chavging the former with the secretion of property to the value of $27,178.06. It may also be stated that while the interested parties were in the high sheriff's office subsequent to the arrest, Mr. J. N. Greenshields, advocate, acting for Boas, had a waterant issued from the Police Court bringing a second charge against the accused of receiving the amount above mentioned under false pretences.

The curator alleged that the accused told him that his father was owing him the sum of $5000, and on this report got cash and goods, Mr. Boas states that on the contrary, Greterle, sr. ONTARIO FINANCIS.

THE Provincial Treasurer was able to report to the House this year an excess of receipts over expenditure of $51,000. He was enabled to do this, however, on account was enabled to do this, nowever, on account of the usual annual disposal of timber land. By thus disposing of the capital of the province, and treating it as ordinary receipts, the books are made to show this surplus of $51,000. But that this is a wrong method, an improvident way of living, is obvious. An ordinary receipt is one that does not diminish the property of an indoes not diminish the property of the dividual or corporation, but the receipts from the saie of timber lands does decrease the property of the Province. Mr. H. E. Clarke secred a point when he said that if the Government included this property in the statement of assets, the diminution of central would be apparent year by year. capital would be apparent year by year, but by the methods adopted the facts are kept in the background as much as pos-

The Treasurer made his usual report of a surplus of $6,700,000 of assets-over liabili-ties. That the statement of assets is largely fictitious has been pointed out over and over. The Treasurer knows the Pro-vince has borrowed money and must pay it, but he leaves that out of the liability statement. As to the trust funds counted as assets Mr. H. E. Clarke, replying to Mr. of $6,700,000 of assets over liabili-Ross, said: "The trust funds, Mr. Speaker, are not assets. They belong to the liability side of the ledger. They represent an indebtedness to the school sections of municipalities, and should be on the debit side. So long as they are invest ! with the Government and bring us five per cent. it is all right. But if the hon. gentlemen it is all right. But if the hon, gentlemen were to make a settlement these amounts due to the school sections would have to be paid off, unless the gentlemen proyed false to their trust. I venture to say they would never put those into their individual assets, although they are quite ready to put them into the assets of a Government. They would never do as private individuals what they would do as members of this

But, supposing the assets were all genuiue, and that all liabilities were included in the statement, in what way is aredit due the present Government in the matter? Their predecessors left a large cash surplus, and it is gone. If there is a large surplus of assets now, in what way does the Government deserve credit? Did they invest the money? If they did, in what years was it saved? Let the admirers of Mr. Mowat show in what years he had sufficient surplus of receipts over expenditures to make up the $6,000,000 and when and how he invested it. They will not do that, for the very good

A QUESTION for Mr. Mowat:—If a man began the year with a hundred acres of land worth $50 an acre and at the end of the year owned only seventy-five acres and, intwenty-five acres, had $500 in cash over his year's expenses, would he be in a better position than when he began the year?

The Ontario public accounts given to some papers days ago and have not yet been received at this office, although the Treasurer's pudget apaceh has been made. Treasurer's budget speech has been made. Bad Man Receives a Flogging at the Cen-Toronto, Feb. 16.—Henry Wilton received the first dose of his flogging at the Central Prison yesterday morning. Wilton was convicted at the last term of the Criminal Assize Court of the crime of assault and attempted outrage upon 5-year-old Rhoda Todd, on the Kingston-road some three months ago. He was sentenced to twenty-two months imprisonment, with the additional penalty of fifty lashes—twenty-five. to be administered in the first month of his imprisonment and the final flogging before his release. He exhibited extreme nervousness when he was led up to the flogging rack and tied in the position for the punishment. He was in an almost helpless condition when his back was being bared by the prison officials and appeared scarcely able to stand alone. He is a small man, weighing about 125 pounds and stripped to the waist revealed a narrow, bony back and shoulders that seemed but poorly calculated to stand the punishment. At the sixth lash tuttered one agonizing groan, after which he bore his punishment in dogged silence. The prisoner is an American, 25 years, of age, and is lame from the effects of a hip disease. If these young men and women knew how many blanks there are in this lottery and how few prizes $47 awn they would quit.*

This managing editor was in a bad humor, but he was all right as to facts. There isn't a newspaper office in town that isn't flooded with applications for work. The prizes in New York journalism are few. You are reasonably sure of drawing a blank pretty nearly every time. There are more than 1,000 hard working newspaper men in New York city. Outside of their own offices and the New York Press club not two dozen of them are known to the general public. Those who are well known outside of New York could almost be counted upon the fifigers of a single hand:

The men who have drawn prizes cannot themselves tell you how they did it. All they know is that they started at the bottom and got there—somehow.

This is not intended to encourage printers' devils to throw type around, but as an illustration.

devis to throw type around, but as an illustration.

Charles A. Dana is, perhaps, the most famous of the men who have drawn prizes. As editor of The Sun he draws a salary of $25,000 per year, and from other sources his income is swelled to about $150,000 per year, upon which he manages to live very comfortably, aided by a French cook, whose income income is bigser than that of a conversamen. Dana started a French cook, whose income Income is big-ger than that of a congressman. Dana started on The New York Tribune at a salary of $13 per week. He started in a small way from a town in the interior of Ohio. Joseph Pulitzer, of The World, is said to clear $2,000 per day. He is not a working journalist now, but not many years ago he was an ordinary reporter in St. Louis, and they say he was a hustler, too. Whitelaw Reid, as a matter of form, draws a salary of some $15,000 per year from The Tribune, but his incoma from his stock arthe paper is several times this amount. John A. Cockerill is one of the working managing editors and newspaper men, and

The Mystery of a Hansom Cab Ly FERGUS W. HUME

"Dr. Chinston, Mr. Kilsip, and-Mr. Fitzgerald."

"Fitzgerald," gasped Moreland, growing pale. "I—I—what's that?" he shrieked, as he saw Whyte's coat, all weather stained, lying on a chair near him, and which he immediately recognized.

lying on a shair near him, and which he immediately-recognized.

"That is the rope that's going to hang you," said Kilsip, quietly, coming behind him, "for the nurrier of Oliver Whyte."

"Trapped, by G.——!" shouted the wretched man, wheeling round, so as to face Klisip, He sprang at the detective's throat, and they both rolled together on the floor, but the latter was too strong for him, and, after a sharp struggle, he succeeded in getting the hand-ours on Moreland's writs. The others stood around perfectly quiet, knowing that Klisip-required no assistance. Nowthat there was no possibility of escape, Moreland seemed to become resigned, and rose sullenly off the floor.

and they both rolled together on the hoor "By G— | I'll make you pay for this," he hissed between his teeth, with a white despairing face. "You can't prove anything." "Can't wef" said Calton, touching the confession. "You are wrong. This is the confession of Mark Frettlby made before he "It's a d—d lie."

"It's a d—d lie."

"A jury will decide that," said the barrister dryly. "Meanwhile you will pass the night in the Melbourne jail."

"Ah! Perhaps they'll give me the same cell as you occupied," said Moreland, with a hard laugh, turning to Fitzgerald. "I should like it for its old associations."

Brian did not answer him, but, picking up his hat and clayer, prepared to go.

Hrian did not answer min, out, picking up his hat and gloves, prepared to go.

"Stop!" cried Moreland, flercely. "I see that it is all up with me, so Pm not going to ite like a coward. I've played for a big stake and lost, but if I hadn't been such a foot I'd have cashed that check next morning, and een far away by this time."
"It would certainly have been wiser," said

"After all," said Moreland, nonchalantly, "After all," said Moreiand, nonchaiantly, taking no notice of this remark, "I don't know that I'm sorry about it. I've had a bell upon earth since I killed Whyte."
"Then you acknowledge your guilt!" said Brian, quietly.
Moreiand shrugged his shoulders.
"I told you I wan't a coward." he an-

Brian, quietly.

Moreland shrugged his shoulders.

"I told you I wasn't a coward," he answered, coolly. "Yes, I did it; it was Whyte's cown fault. When I met him that night he told how Frettlby wouldn't let him marry his daughter, but said that he'd make him, and showed me the marriage certificate. I thought if I could only get it Pd make a nice, little pile out of Frettlby over it; so when Whyte went on drinking I did not. After he had gone out of the hotel, I put on his coat, which he left behind. I saw him standing near the lamp post, and Fitzgerald come up and then leave him. When you came down the street," he went on, turning to Fitzgerald, "I shrumk back into the shadow, and when you passed I ran up to Whyte as the cabman was putting him into the hansom. He took me for you, so I didn't undeceive him, but I swear I had no idea of murdering Whyte when I got into the cab. I tried to get the papers, but he wouldn't let me, and commenced to sing out. Then I thought of the chloroform in the pocket of his coat, which I was wearing. I pulled it out, and found that the cork was loose. Then I took out Whyte's handkerenief, which was also in the coat, and emptied the bottle on it, and put it back in my pocket. I again tried to get the papers, without using the chloroform, but couldn't, so I clapped the handkerchief over his mouth, and he went off after a few minutes, and I got the papers. I though the was only insensible, and it was only when I saw the newspaper that I knew he was dead. I stopped the cab in St Kilda road, got out and caught another cab, which was going to town. Then I got out at Powlett street, took off the coat, and carried it over my arm. I went down George street, toward the Fitzroy gardens, and having hid the coat on a tree, where I suppose you found it," to Kilsip, "I walked home—so I've done you all nicely, but"—"

"You're caught at last," finished Kilsip, ouietly.

"You're caught at last," finished Kilsip, of utter weariness and lassituda.

"No man can be stronger than Destiny," he said, dreamily. "I have lost and you have won; so life is a chess board, after all, and we are the puppets of Fata."

and we are the puppets of Fate."

He refused to utter another word; so, leaving Calton and Klish with him, Brian and the doctor went out and hailed a cab. It drow up to the entrance of the court where Calton's office was, and then Moreland, walking as if in a dream, left the room, and got into the cab, followed by Klisip.

"Do you know," said Chinston, thoughtfully, as they stood and watched the cab drive off, "do you know what the end of that man will be?"

"L'reguires no prophet to foretell that."

STORIES ABOUT MEN.

rman Opened His Heart a Stranger. "Let me relate to you a little episode of my famous march to the sea. One day I haited with my staff at a house on a large plantation and asked the gray headed old planter sitting on the piazza for a drink of water. He called to some of his colored men, then slaves, and ordered a bucket of water, which was brought, with a gourd to drink from. While I and my officers were drinking from the gourd the old planter sat and eyed us inquisitively. He, of course, knew that I was an officer, from my dress and staff, but did not know my rank of office or name.

my dress and staff, but did not know my rank of office or name.
"Hearing one of my staff address me as 'general,' he turned quickly with a look of surprise and said:
"'Arg you a general?"
"'Yes, sir."
"What is your name?"
"Shorman."

'Sherman.'
'Sherman; you Gen. Sherman'
'I suppose I am.'
'How many men have you got?
'A million.'

"A million."
"Now, I'd just like to have you answer me to a single human being. You can trust to me implicitly.

"'You are quite sure I can trust you?

"'Most certainly I am; with the utmost safety.' (Said eagerly.)

"'Well, then, I will tell you. I am going where Id—d please. Good day.'

"The expression of that man's face can better be imagined than described on his being informed of my intentions."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

"Silly Billy" and the Madman.

Mr. Frith, in his autobiography, tells the following story of the Duke of Gloucester, who, though an amiable prince, was not brilliant intellectually, and was familiarly known as "Silly Billy." Visiting a lunatic asylum, the prince was told that there was a peculiarly violent patient, whom he could not safely approach.

poculiarly violent patient, whom he could not safely approach.

"Well, but," said the duke, "can't I get just a peep at him somehow, eh! without his getting at me?"

"Sir, there's a small square opening in the door of the cell, through which he receives his food; it is barred. If your royal highness is so very desirous you might"—

"All right. Come along. Where is he?"
The royal visitor was led towards the bottom of a long passage.

"Good gracious! What a fearful howling! Is that the man?"

"Good gracious! What a fearful howling! Is that the man?"
"Yes, sir, and this is the cell—through that grating you can see the man."

The duke peered through the bars; the nowling ceased, and the madman exclaimed; "Hello! why, that's Silly Billy!"

"Good gracious," said the duke, "he knows

"Oh, yes," said the governor, "he has his lucid intervals."

A Bit of Mr. Hoadly's Wit.

A lawyer sitting in the Ebbitt house last night said: "I have been reading in The New York Tribune accounts of the bright things said by members of the New York bar. They are mighty good, but I don't think any of them can compare with the flashes of wit gotten off by Governor Hoadly, who is himself now a New York lawyer.

"I was present during the great Hocking Valley suit in Columbus, a year or so ago. Judge Burke was making a brilliant argument before the jury in behalf of the defense, and used this expression: 'My friend, Judge Hoadly, says that this is a case of deliberate stealing. Now, I am probably not as good a judge of stealing as Judge Hoadly." "No,' interrupted Hoadly, like a flash, 'not as good a judge, but a better practitioner.'"—Washington Post. A Bit of Mr. Hoadly's Wit.

Tennyson's Little Joke.

Tennyson's Little Joke.

On one occasion it came to Mr. Tennyson's knowledge that two men were hiding behind trees on either side of the drive, presumably to have a look at him when he went out for his usual walk. Lord Tennyson, at once seeing a chance of some fun, called in his gardener, an old man. He told him of the two men, and made-him put on his velvet coat and wide awake hat. Then the old man sallied forth and made his way to the drive, down which he walked as though in deep meditation. He had not gone very far when he heard a man's voice coming from behind, with a strong Yankee twang, say, "Now I've seen Lord Tennyson, I guess I'll go home to Amurika."—London Star.

In Brief and io the Point.
Dyspepsia is dreadful. Disordered liver is misery. Indigestion is a foe to good natis misery. Indigestion is a fee to good nature.

The human digestive apparatus is one of the most complicated and wonderful things in existence. It is easily put out of order. Greasy food, tough food, sloppy food, bad cookery, mental worry, late hours, irregular habits, and many other things which ought not to be, have made the American people a nation of dyspepties.

But Green's August Flower has done a wonderful work in reforming this sad business and making the American people so healthy that they can enjoy their meals and be happy.

QUARRELED OVER CARDS. A FATAL STABBING AFFRAY AT LA

Two Men Knifed.

MONGREAL, Feb. 16.—A serious stabbing fray occurred at Lachine early this morn-ing. Last night some twenty Italians were rousing in the stone house near the bridge hen a dispute arose and a general right sussed.

when a dispute arose and a general fight ensused.

During the melee two combatants seeing they were getting the worse of the tussle drew knives and plunged them into the bodies of their opponents, one of them receiving a fearful gash in the abdomen and another in the neck near the jugular vein, his injuries being fatal. The other, though also badly hurt, is not considered in immediate danger of death.

One of the would be assassins was caught at the railway station this morning by Constable Joly and handeuffed; the other was shortly afterwards found hiding in a house. The man who is dying is married and leaves a pretty young widow and an infant only a few days old. The other of the victims is single.

The quarrel broke out first yesterday afternoon whilst some of the Italians were playing cards, two partners accusing their od intention of Prince Bismarck to retire, now declares the agitation has a purely artificial origin.

Count Herbert Bismarck daily receives long cipher dispatches from the German embassy at Paris, and goes personally to present them to the Emperor. If the foreign office officials faithfully reflect their chief's opinion, the gloomiest view is taken as to the results of the French crisis. Boulanger is considered to be master of the situation. It is probable that thearrangements for the autumn maneuvres in Westphalia will be changed so as to convert the maneuvres into a wacning demonstration along the frontier. The Wurtemberg and Bavarian contingents will share in the demonstration if it is decided upon. The press of all shades of opinion take a pessimistic view of the outlook.

The German Government is unceasing in its military preparations. Since the adoption of the small caliber rifle the gun factories have been working night and day, and a million weapons of similar pattern have been ordered from individual contractors at Hamburg. The Rottweil Powder Factory has an exclusive contract to supply an enormous quantity of powder, and a large number of subcontracts have been placed in order to fulfil that firm's obligation as to time.

martial law was declared by the Germans they attempted to seize Klein, but he was rescued by the Americans.

When the Mariposa left, Feb. 1, the is-lands were still under martial law, and German aggression had become very marked and is claimed to have been directed and is claimed to have been directed against Americans as well as natives. None of the American men-of-war ordered there had arrived. The Germans were in complete control and had commenced to search all vessels in Samoan waters. They seized an English tourist named Gillan in the steam packet Richmond from Auckland. Captain Hand of the English warship Royalist, however, ordered the man released and prepared for action. The Germans released Gillan. Goods which arrived on the Richmond from American merchants at Apia the ond for American merchants at Apia the ermans would not permit to be landed un-mond for American merchants at Apia the Germans would not permit to be landed unless they were taken to a German storehouse and passed upon by a German official. The Samoan Times was suppressed for stating that but for German support all the Samoans would join Mataafa, and that unless Bismarck was deceived he would not attempt to enforce his unpopular rule. Prior to this, Cusack, the editor, awas fined $100 for reprinting American newspaper comments on the situation.

Captain Fritz, the German naval commander, on January 23, instructed the residents of Apia to turn over all guns or ammunition held by them, and proclaimed the right of searching. Captain Mullan, of the American man-of-war Nipsic, protested, stating the American Government had never recognized Tamasese, and no power would allow them to seize arms unless used against a friendly nation.

German troops, acting as police, attempted to arrest Klein, but on advice of the United States Consul he went on board the Nipsic. On Jan. 28, Fritz made a demand for Mullan to release Klein that he might be tried before a German military tribunal. Mullan replied that he proposed to protect all Americans in Samos and Klein would not be surrendared for trial. On Feb. 1 Mullan placed Klein on the Mariposa.

Mullan placed Klein on the Mariposa.

Bayard Approves.

Washington, Feb. 17.—Secretary Bayard says the captain of the Nipsic acted sensibly in taking care of Klein. The German officials were in error regarding Klein's action. The Secretary said that late telegraphic advices showed martial law had been abolished so far as it applied to foreigners, and the German officials had been rebuked. The Secretary was hapeful that a speedy, peaceful and satisfactory settlement of Samoa affairs would be reached.

German Opinions.

Berlin, Feb. 17.—It is reported that the Samoan white book will be discussed on the reopening of the Reichstag.

The National Zeitung says that regarding the American consult at Samoa and Commander Leary no censure can be strong enough; but it is hoped that after the recall of Sewall, America will see that words should be followed by corresponding acts.

The Vossische Zeitung criticises the conduct of the German officials in Samoa and hopes the conference will result in permanent peace and order instead of plunging great civilized powers into war for a bagatelle.

SOME DAMAGING STORIES.

Parsell Letters.

London, Feb. 16.—This week's Parnell Commission proves even more exciting than last. Major Le Caron's cross-examination on Tuesday was indeed in one sense disappointing. Sir Charles Russell could make nothing of him. If there were flaws in his story, Mr. Parnell's counsel did not find them. "Major Le Caron held his own to the last. His coolness and self-possession, his deliberate method and his tantalizing-thoughtfulness before almost every important answer, never failed him. Sir Charles gave him up after two hours further trial on Tuesday, and Major Le Caron left court without a scar. Where Sir Charles failed, Mr. Reid and Mr. Lockwood, who tried their feebler hands, were not likely to succeed; nor did they. As the witness stepped down from the box a murmur of admiration saluted him. Even hose who wholly dissent from what Major Le Caron called the moral view of his position joined in the tribute to him as a witness.

Le Caron called the moral view of his position joined in the tribute to him as a witness.

Mr. Soames, The Times solicitor, who succeeds to Major Le Caron's placein public attention, is not comparable to him as an occupant of the witness-box. Solicitor though he be, Mr. Soames was at first hurried, not to say flurried, in manner. Major Le Caron's short, sharp sentences echoed through the room like so many pistolshots. Mr. Soames was indistinct, unready, nervous, confused in phraseology. His testimony, however, opened that branch of the case which one section of the public has long been waiting for. Mr. Parnell's friends have from the beginning insisted that the letters were the vital point of the whole business. If the letters are forgeries, the whole case against the Home Rule leader collapses. That was their contention. A good deal has happened since it was first put forward, and it can hardly be urged now with the same confidence; but it is still urged.

Mr. Soames's admission that the letters came from Mr. Pigott, once a Fenian, through Mr. Houston, secretary of the Irish Loyal and Patriotic League, disclosed in open court what had long been an open secret to Mr. Parnell's legal advisers. Indeed, many of Mr. Soames's statements were so many old stories to them, though not to the public. They hold it damaging to The Times that over $20,000 should have been pald on account of these letters. The amount strengthens, in their view, the presumption of forgery. The revelation that Mr. Flanagen, son of an Irish judge, is the actual author of the Parnellism and Crime articles is curious rather than important, except to Mr. Flanagen.

It was the second day of Mr. Soames' examination that brought out the most sen who sold them to Mr. Houston or to Mr. Maguire.

Mr. Labouchere appears again and again in the business. Mr. Soames says Pigott told him that Labouchere offered him (Pigott) $5000 to swear that he forged the letters. Mr. Soames had Mr. Pigott followed by detectives, and Mr. Pigott, a Times witness, was found to be in communication with the other side. Letters passed between him and Mr. Lewis and Mr. Labouchere Monsy was sent to Mr. Pigott by Mr. Labouchere more then once. He was followed to Mr. Labouchere's house, and seems finally to have told. The Times what passed between him and Mr. Labouchere's He told other things besides the above named $5000 proposal, and handed over to Mr. Soames the money Mr. Labouchere had sent him. At least two interviews occurred at Mr. Labouchere's house in Grosvenor Gardens, Mr. Pigott, Mr. Parnell, Mr. Lewis and Mr. Labouchere all present at one if not both.

The Hawarden Evictions.

LONDON, Feb. 17.—Evictions at Hawarden! It is all but incredible, but in these days it is mostly the incredible which turns out true. Mr. Punch may break his bauble;
he never produced a joke equal to this.
The enemy are in transports. The Times itself is making jokes. What is happening on Mr. Gladstone's estate is, with due allowance for the difference between England and Ireland, exactly what has long been happening on Irish estates. Tenants are in arrears; they cannot, or will not, pay their rents; and they are evicted, sold up. It is Mr. Gladstone, jr., who does it. His father, says
The Times, by converting his interest into an annual charge upon the estate, has made himself directly responsible for one of those arrangements so strongly condemned in the case of Irish landlords, whereby the capacity of the limited owner to act generously is fatally curtalled.

Young Mr. Gladstone adduces in defence all those arguments which when put forward by Irish landlords, his father and his father's following have received with scorn and derision. These are the views of the enemy. When one turns to the congenial columns of The Daily News, will you believe it? This most faithful of Gladstonian organs is dumb! So far as can be judged from published accounts, these Hawarden evictions are just. The evicted tenants have been kindly treated.

ADMINISTERING THE LAW. with a view solely to their own advantage must have been apparent even to the mest careless observer. That Government took over the administration of the laws professedly in the interests of temperance, but ever since they have used it to further the ends of the party, to secure votes for them-selves and to maintain themselves in

"ille this must be obvious, it was hardly to be expected that it would be acknowledged by an official of the Government. Yet the following letter, which was published in the Empire, is such an acknowledge-

PROVINCIAL SECRETARY'S DEPARTMENT, CANADA TEMPERANCE ACT DIV.,
(Unofficial). TORONTO, Feb. 14, 1889.

DEAR SIR,—I am in receipt of your favor of the 8th inst., and, in reply thereto, without intention to enter into a controversy upon the points of your letter, I beg to call your attention to the fact that the Ontario Government is the only Provincial Government that has made any effort to enforce the Scott Act; that I am not concerned to defend their bona fides in the matter, and, as the matter has been mooted by you, I would simply say that a gentleman of considerable influence and position called on me the other day to say that a more rigid enforcement of the Act would be highly injurious to the Mowat Government, and thus we have again the difficulty of pleasing all parties.

All parties.
Your obedient servant,
J. W. Manning,
Chief Officer.
S. E. McCully, Esq., M.D., Toronto.
The Government is not only very careful to do nothing to that would be "injurious to the Mowat Government," for they are watchful to do what will be useful to them
It is not only the Scott Act that is used in this way, although it may offer better op-portunities for influencing votes in the direction of the Liberal party. The license law is also used for the same purpose where it is in force.

Now, every fair minded man must admit that laws should not be administered in this way, and that a man should not be in a position to be coerced into voting in a way that he did not desire. In order to free the law from this evil, and to put those interested in the liquor trade beyond the reach of politicians of the character of the Mowat Government—in order that the liquor laws may be fairly and impartially carried out the administration of the law should be taken out of the hands of the politicians. So long as the Mowat Government has the power in its hands to grant or withhold a license, or to compel a man to close a hotel or saloon, that power will be used for partisan purposes, as has been seen in the past and as Mr. Manning's "unoficial" know the remedy to apply it may learn by referring to the Act passed several years ago by the Dominion Parliament. Mr. Mowat's antipathy to municipalities hav-ing any power he can deprive them of mg any power he can deprive them of would not, of course, permit him to return this authority to them; but the law could be amended in the direction of the Dominion Act referred to. In that act the County Judge, the Warden of the County and the Mayor of the town were appointed complishioners, and thus the appointment was taken out of the hands of the Government. taken out of the hands of the Government and to a large extent placed in the hands of Barglary at Guelph.

GUELPH, Feb. 17.—Armstrong's carpet factory was entered by a burglar about 1 o'clock yesterday moruing. James Fordyoe, foreman at the waterworks, passed the place at that hour and noticed the window troken. He immediately aroused Mr. Dodds, a member of the firm, who notified Sergeant Docely. The officer went to the factory with Mr. Dodds, when he found a board placed under the window and a light in the office. The would-be burglar discovered that he was being watched, and made an attempt to get out of the window. The sergeant covered him with his revolver, when the man jumped back. A few minutes later he made a second attempt to escape, when he was grabbed by the sergeant, and after a souffle the man broke away and ran up the street. He was pursued, but unfortunately was not captured. Mr. Dodds and the officer then entered the factory, when it was found that a silver watch and a number of postage stamps had been taken.

IERASTUS WIMAN TALKS BACK.I

New York, Feb. 17.—Mr. Erastus Wiman was yesterday shown a despatch from Ottawa with reference to Col. F. C. Denison's speech introducing his motion regarding Government control of telegraphs, accusing Mr. Wiman of using his interest in telegraph lines to send deadhead despatches to Canadian newspapers discussing the probability of the purchase of Canada by the United States. Mr. Wiman said: "I have nothing whatever to do with the despatches of the Associated Press, which go from the United States to Canadian papers over the telegraph lines of which I am president. I am laboring earnestly, to promote closer commercial relations between the United States and Canada, and if the progress of the movement is as great in the next United States and Canada, and if the progress of the movement is as great in the next two years as it has been in the past two years as it has been in the past two years the customs line between the two-countries will be obliterated before very long. I have used the wires over my own signature when occasion required, and for this I am quite willing to be held responsible. But the attack made upon me in Parliament by the ultra-loyalist party, as represented by Col. Denison, has about as much effect as water on a duck's back, as was shown by the haste with which the Government smothered the motion of one of the supporters to acquire the telegraphs of the company."

Government smothered the motion of one of the supporters to acquire the telegraphs of the motion of the proposals contained in the bill of Congressman Baker, recently introduced. "The effect of this bill," he said, "will be to increase the duty on Canadian products on their admission into the United States to an extent that will almost paralyze the Canadian export trade to this country. In the single article of eggs, which are now free, Canada has become a great exporter, and fourteen million dozens have been sent to the United States within the last year. The proposal is now to put a duty of five cents on each dozen. There is not a farmer's wife throughout the length and breadth of the Dominion but will feel the effect of such a tax, and the sting of retaliation which the bill carried with it is more widespread and effective than anything that has occurred. It is true that Canada has invited this retaliation, but nevertheless it is greatly to be deplored."

For having endeavered to promote an understanding between the two countries which would render such hostile action impossible, ultra-loyalists in Canada, Mr. Wiman said, called him a traitor.

The old man's name was Irvine Roraback, of Norwood, who has been wanted for three months on a charge of forgery. The general appearance of the grey-haired prisoner was far from that which the forger usually presents.

THE CHARGE AGAINST HIM.

The offence for which Roraback is to be tried was committed here on the 18th November last. He came here and at the office of Sawers & Stone is alleged to have forged the name of Robt, Gardiner, of Dummer, for $2,050. He was arrested immediately and was to have come up for trial at Norwood on the 27th November, but he managed to escape from the custody of the constable who had him in charge and—his trial was necessarily postponed indefinitely. The Signs of the Times. The subject of the Rev. M. L. Pearson's sermon in the George st. Church last even-ing was "the Signs of the Times and the Men they Call For." The preacher referred to the danger of scepticism, and said that a peculiar fact in connection with these times was that scepticism was to be found among the masses of the people, as was shown by the number in workingmen's organizations who denied the authority of God. On the other hand there was the danger of superstition. Each of these was an enemy of true Christianity. He refer-red to the position of the great European nations, ready for a fearful struggle, to the troubles in Ireland and to the state of the Province of Quebec, In Quebec, he said, men were restive under the burdens of superstition, and there was a danger that New France would follow old France and turn from superstition to infidelity. It was the duty of Christian men to furnish them with information regarding the tru faith. The older lands, he said, such as Italy and Japan, called over to this young country to beware of the Jesuits, and they should heed the warning. The men the times called for were men of enlightened individuality and masculine integrity—men who knew what was right

Yours, &c.. RATEPAYER. Peterborough, Feb. 16th, 1889. UNRESTRICTED RECIPROCITY. Mr. Cluxton Replies to Mr. Hallam on the Question of Wool,

To the Editor of the Review.

-May I ask you to publish my reply to Mr. Hallam's letter which appeared in the REVIEW yesterday on the subject of Wool and Unrestricted Reciprocity. I am not a "politician." My object in writing the letter was to lay the question before the farmers, for whose information

It was written.

"It was announced in Yesterday's Examiner that Mr. Stevenson, M. P., has shipped 50,000 pounds of wool to Boston, Massachusetts. Before this wool can pass the customs barrier or the imaginary line that separates the two countries, Mr. Stevenson must pay the American duty to the amount of $5,000,00, or ten cents per pound; or, I should have said, the farmers from whom Mr. Stevensoy bought the wool, paid the duty when they received only 20 in stead of 30 cents per pound.

Mr. Hallam says.—"I but to take exception to the statement in the paragraph that! Canada had unrestricted reciprocity with the United States, our farmers would be getting 30 cents instead of 20 cents per 1b. for their wool."

Let us see. Below I give an extract from

ib. for their wool."

Let us see. Below I give an extract from a letter of one of the most respectable and extensive wool houses in the United States, Mr. Hallam is well acquainted with this firm and will not dispute what i

BOSTON, August 31st, 1887.

W. CLUXTON, Peterborough: With your request for a postling in regard to Canadian wool in mind, we now take plensure in quoting 33½ cents as the price current here for Canada wools, duty paid, and would further say in this connection that these wools, when brought to our market, come onto direct competition with Kentucky and Maine wools; and but for the heavy duty imposed upon your class of stock, we should be able to use a large quantity of it in this country to good advantage, inasmuch as the class of wool with which it competes, is in somewhat limited supply in the States. Boston, August 31st, 1887.

FENO BROS. & CHILDS. When the above letter was written the price of wool in Canada was from 18c. to 20c. per lb.

To WM. CLUXTON, Esq., Peterboroug To WM. CLUXTON, Esq., Petetborough, One:

DEAR SIR,—Your telegram is at hand inquiting the value of Ontario washed diecees, and we have replied as follows:

"Good bright combing wools worth to-day, 33 to 35 cents," which we now confirm. This is a conservative value for the wools to-day, as the bright handsome long wools of good quality have sold as high as 37 to 38 cents recently. We think, however, these are extreme values given by parties who were very anxious for the wool. We think that average wools would bring easily 38 to as 35 to 37 cents, if they are somewhat above the average.

FERNNO BROS. & CHILDS.

Mr. Hallam says:—"I admit if we had thousands of little tibes and civilies leading from them.

That is to take Boschee's German Syrup, which any drugsits Boschee's German Syrup, which any drugsits Boschee's German Syrup, which any drugsits beginning the state of the state necessity for troubling you with this letter.

If MR. STEVENSON COULD HAVE SENT HIS 50,000 POUNDS OF WOOL TO THE UNITED BRATES FREE OF DUTY. HE WOULD HAVE MADE $5.000 MORE MONEY ON THE SHIPMENT.

Mr. Hallam says:—"Mr. Wood, of Salina, Mich, had sold his merino fleece unwashed, last year's clip, at 21 cents per pound. * *
Seeing that Mr. Wood's wool only realized 21 cents, what is Mr.
Cluxton's statement in the Peterborough papers worth, that if we had Unrealized 29 cents for his wool instead of 20 cents?" Mr. Hallam knows that, in sciling wools, buyers deduct one-third off the weight for unwashed wool, so that if Mr. Wood's had been washed the price would have been 31 cents and not 21 cents per pound, as quoted.

The opponents of unrestricted reciprootty seem to desfer to conceal the real fairly and told the whole truth instead of suppressing a part of it, they would find the subject a less attractive one for discussion, and would saye the columns of the newspapers from being taken up with letters necessary to expose their partial presentation of their case.

"THE LOVE THAT LIVES."

There are certain periods in the life of men when fate seems to have done her worst, and any further misfortunes which may befall are accepted with a philosophical resignation, begotten by the very severity of previous trials. Fitzgerald was in this state of mind—he was calm, but it was the calmness of despair—the misfortunes of the past year seemed to have come to a climax, and he looked forward to the publication of the whole bitter story with an indifference that surprised himself. His own name and that of Madge and her dead father would be on every tongue, yet he felt perfectly callous to whatever might be said on the subject. As long as Madge recovered, and they could go away to another part of the world, leaving Australia, with its bitter memories, behind, he did not care. Moreland would suffer the bitter penalty of his crime, and then nothing more would ever be heard of the matter. It would be better for the whole story to be told, and momentary pain endured, than to go on striving to hide the infamy and shame which might be discovered at any moment. Already the new's was all over Melbourne that the murderer of Oliver Whyth had been captured, and that his confession would bring to light certain startling facts concerning the late Mark Frettlby. Brian well knew that the world winked at secret vices as long as there was an attempt at concealment, though it was cruelly severe on those which were brongth to light, and that many whose lives "THE LOVE THAT LIVES." the world winked at secret vices as long as there was an attempt at concealment, though it was cruelly severe on those which were brought to light, and that many whose lives might be secretly far more culpable than poor Mark Frettliby's would be the first to slander the dead man. The public curiosity, however, was destined never to be gratified, for the next day it became known that Roger Moreland had hanged himself in his cell dur-ing the night, and had left no confession be-bind him.

When Brian heard this he breathed a heartfelt prayer of thanks for his deliverance, and went to see Calton, whom he found at his chambers, in deep conversation with Chinston and Klüsjn. They all came to the conclusion that as Moreland was now dead nothing could be gained by publishing the confession of Mark Frettlby; so agreed to burn it, and when Fitzgerald saw in the heap of blackened paper in the fireplace all that remained of the bitter story he felt a weight lifted off his heart. The barrister, Chinston and Klüsjn, all promised to keep silent on the subject, and they kept the promise nobly, for nothing was ever known of the circumstances which led to the death of Oliver Whyte, and it was gearantly supposed that it must have been caused by some quarred between the dead was and his friend. Boreen Moreland.

Fitzgerald, however, did not forget the good service that Kilsip had done him, and gave him a sum of money which made him independent for life, though he still followed his old profession of a detective from sheer love of excitement, and was always looked Rawlins the fact that she was Mark Frettlby's could bring her no pecuniary benefit, while her bringing up unfitted her for her position; so a yearly income, more than sufficient for her wants, was settled upon her, and she was her wants, was settled upon her, and she was allowed to remain in ignorance of her parentage. The influence of Sal Rawlins' old life, however, was very strong on her, and she devoted herself to the task of saving her fallen sisters. Knowing, as she did, all the intricacies of the slums, she was enabled to do an immense amount of good, and many an unhappy woman was saved from the squalor and pardship of a gutter life by the kind hand of Sai Rawlins.

Felix Rolleston became a member of par-liament, where his speeches, if not very deep, were at least amusing, and while in the house always behaved like a gentleman, which could not be said about all his parliamentary always behaved like a gentleman, which could not be said about all his parliamentary colleagues.

Madge slowly recovered from her illness, and as she had been implicitly named in the will as heiress to Mark Frettlby's great wealth she placed the management of her estates in the hands of Mr. Calton, who, with Thinton & Tarbet, acted as her agents in Australia. On her recovery she learned the story of her father's early marriage, but both Calton and Fitzgerald were silent about the fact of Sal Rawlins being her half sister, as such a revelation could do no good, and would only create a scandal, as no explanation could be given except the true one. Shortly afterward Madge married Fitzgerald, and both of them only too gladly left Australia, with all its sorrows and bitter memories. Standing with her husband on the deck of one of the P. and O. steamers, as it plowed the blue waters of Hobson's bey into foam, they both watched Melbourne as it gradually faded from their view, under the glow of the annset. They could see the two domes of the exhibition, and the law-courts, and also government house, with its tall tower rising from the midst of the green trees. In the background was a bright crimson sky, barred with masses of black clouds, and over all the great city hung a cloud of smoke like a pall.

The glaring red lightpot the sinking sun glared angrily on the heavy waters, and the steamer seemed to be making its way through a sea of blood. Madge, clinging to her husband's arm, felt her eyes fill with tears, as she saw the land of her birth receding slowly.

"Good-by," she murmured softly. "Good-slowly.

"Good-by," she murmured softly. "Goodby forever."
"You do not regret!" be said, bending his head.

"Regret, no," she answered, looking at him with loving eyes. "With you by my side, I fear nothing. Surely our hearts have been tried in the furnace of affliction, and our love has been chastened and purified."

"We are sure of nothing in this world," replied Brian, with a sigh. "But after all the sorrow and grief of the past let us hope that the future will be peace."

"Peace!"

nt down and kissed her.

anything else. It was certainly not because Jim was a beauty and that his brother officers were anxious to impress the fact upon mankind in general. Oh, no; for Jim Beresford was a young man whose best friend could not have said that he was anything but downright ugly.

And yet it was such a pleasant phiz, clean shaven and ill assorted as to features, though the blue eyes had a merry twinkle in them which made you forget that they might have been larger with considerable advantage, and the white teeth disclosed every minute or two by the merrier smile, quite made you forget also that the mouth was a good deal too wide for its owner to fairly sustain the name of Beautiful Jim.

Everybody liked him—everybody. Indeed, in all my life I never heard of but one human being who did not give in sooner or later to the influence of Beautiful Jim's attractions, and that—but, there, I have a story to tell about him, and that person will come in in due time and

TREATY RESOLUTION.

Lady Macdonald and a party of friends were present.

The reporters had a distraguished addition to their gallery in the afternoon, being no less a person than Goldwin Smith. The doctor was assigned a place in the Opposition side of the galiery and before the debate began he spoke freely to those around him about the members of the Canadian House and the Imperial House. He thinks that Sir Richard Cartwright is a more forcible and better debater than Mr. Blake.

Sir Richard said that seven years ago Mr. Blake had brought this same matter before Parliament, but during that interval many important events had occurred; many things which were then considered hypothecal had now become facts. It was now absolutely necessary that Canada should possess this treaty-making power. She should appoint her own agents to keep our Government well advised as to the feelings of other States towards us. selves.

Thave no, doubt whatever that if the matter were properly and intelligently placed, before the Imperial Government betw would view it in a favorable light. If the Imperial Government acid it was a power that they could not grant then it would be time to take another view of our position.

The true end of Confederation, the speaker maintained, was to pave the way for fuller rights and powers than we now possess. That was the way in which every man who had a drop of Canadian blood in his veins viewed the matter. We were now responsible for the good government of the whole of the North American continent from the Atlantic to the Pacific, and to carry out this object in all that it implied was an argument in favor of first contention, Canada must be defended by Canadian arins and Canadian hearts. We could not look elsewhere for these protecting influences. We could not look for precedents in the matter, for they would avail us very intile. Our position, was entirely different from anything else in the world, and if our House of Commons had any function at all it was to build up a nation. That is what they were there for and that it what the people of Canada expected of them. If that were not so they were better without Confederation. This was a sentiment that was not alone confined to the Liberals.

Sir Richard they referred at length to the closs relations between Canada and the United States, and he quoted figures showing that our trade with the people to the south of us was not alone confined to the Liberals.

There are at present inheteen immales, eight andes and eleven females. Since his last annual report two new cases were admitted, one of which came from Caraquet and the other from an adjoining parish. There were no deaths in the Lazaretto during the year. The general health of the immates has been good.

A few weeks ago she made a thorough investigation of all cases of suspected leprocy in the adjoining parish of Caraquet, but found only one infected person, and he will soon be admitted to the hospital. The case is an interesting one: The boy, now 14 years of age, was, when 3 years old, attended by a let ous woman during the healing stage of a severe burn. Leprocy afterwards made his appearance and he know in an advanced stage of the disease. His parents, brothers and sisters are free from it.

With this exception only two known cases, both residents of Tracadie, remain outside the Lazaretto. The whereabouts of the patient who esc. pod last year to the United States is now known and Dr. Smith is informed that the leper is about to return, being no longer able to earn a living.

HARTORD, Conn., Feb. 18.—Shortly before 5 o'clock this morning the entire city was slaken by a tremendous explosion, tollowed by an alarm of fire. The Park Central Hotel, a five-story brick building at the corner of High and Allyn-streets, had practically disappeared and in its place was a huge pile of masonry, timbers and debris, from which issued steam and smoke. A portion of the tier of rooms, at the rear of the main building remained standing but the partitions had been torn away and the rooms were opened to the air, the floors of many giving way and tumbling occupants and furniture upon the heap below. A few shrieks and moans were heard and then all was silent. The fire department responded promptly and the flames were quickly subdued, although it required several hours' work to thoroughly cool the rains.

required several hours' work to thoroughly cool the rains.

The servants occupied rooms in an annex at the rear. The explosion demolished the start case, but the frightened employes were safely taken out by the aerial ladder, two or three excited ones, however, jumping and receiving slight injuries. Willing hands soon set about removing the immense mass of masonery.

The first person rescined, was Geo. Gaines, the colored porter. He was badly injured and died soon afterwards. At 7 o clock Superintendent Lawrence of the street department appeared with a large gang of laborers to aid in the search. Helen Leport of New Britain and Jennie Decker of Unionville were soon rescued, comparatively uninjured. Jacob B. Türpin, colored barber, was also taken out early. Rachel Cramer jumped from a window, breaking her leg. At 9 o'clock Harris Stiffle of Philadelphia, traveler for the Barnes Safe and Lock Company, was liberated by raising the timbers holding him down. He was slightly injured. At 10.30 the dead body of Dwight H. Buell, jeweler of this city, was recovered. The body was not mangled, death having been caused by suffocation.

Moore and Davidson had objected to the sale under the conditions stipulated by the creditors, on the ground that a cash sale ereditors, on the ground that a cash sale might cause a failure to find a purchaser and in this way discredit the property in the market. They had received an offer from the School Board of $10,000 for the homestead and the Clotworthy lot north of it. As ordered by the creditors Mr. R. E. Wood had examined Mr. Menzies and would report.

Mr. Wood gave a short verbal report of Mr. Wood gave a short verbal report of the examination which he said had dis-closed a most deplorable state of affairs. Nothing was brought out by the examina-tion that would lead to the disclosure of anything that would increase the dividend. From the examination it appeared that since January, 1885, Mr. Menzies had been floundering along head over heels in debt. He had examined Mr. Menzies in reference to the claim of his wife for $4.000 and the former had said the note was signed prior former had said the note was signed prior to the mortgages of Messrs. Moore and Davidson, but he (Mr. Wood) felt prepared to dispute the claim.

The assignee stated that the sale of the stock had realized $5.814.81, from which he had paid out $532.00, leaving $5,282.81, from which the costs of Mr. Menzies examination and assignee's and inspector's fees would have to be taken. A discussion then followed as to the claims of Mrs. Menzies for the $4,000 and it was finally decided to leave the matter to a committee consisting of Mesers John Burn-ham, R. E. Wood, Hayes, Leonard and W. A. Stratton, to take into consideration the claim of Mrs. Menzies and to adjust and claim of Mrs. Menzies and to adjust and settle the same.

The claim of Mr. Menzies' daughter for $234 for wages was brought up, but as it would only amount to a dividend of $45 it was allowed to drop.

Mr. Moore made a statement in reference to the objection of himself and Mr. Davidson to the sale of the real estate. They thought a cash sale might prejudice their position as it might bring the property into discredit in the market. They were ty into discredit in the market. They were willing to sell en bloc.

After more discussion it was moved that the creditors acquiesce in a sale by Messrs. Moore and Davidson of the homestead and sixty feet to the north for $10,000.

A dividend was declared of eighteen cents payable in ten days. This was allowing the claim of Mrs. Menzies, but should the committee decide to dispute this claim the dividend will be increased pro rata.

The meeting then adjourned until two weeks from to-day.

Bits About Villiers.
Ever one should hear Villiers, the famous war correspondent and artist for the London Graphic. ONTARIO LEGISLATURE. A Quiet Day-To Amend the Game Laws-

A Quiet Bay—To Amend the Game Laws— Toronto, Feb. 19.—At the Legislature yes-terday there was a marked decrease of petitions, and the half dozon orso first were presented were of an unimportant character. Two of these were from Kingston and Simoon and related to the game laws. Mr. Leys pre-sented the petition asking for an Assessment Act amendment exempting dwellings to the extent of $600.

sented the petition asking for an Assessment Act amendment exempting dwellings to the extent of $500.

Among the bills introduced was one from the Attorney-General dealing with the act respecting appeals on presecutions to enforce penalties under the Provincial Act. As present there is no appeal to the Appeal Court in these cases, and the new bill allows such an appeal to quash convictions, provided that the Attorney-General of the Province certifies that the decision involves some question on the construction of the British North America Act and that the same is of sufficient importance to justify the appeal.

The Attorney-General also introduced a bill to make further provisions respecting the Parry Sound and Muskoka districts. This measure makes some amendments to the acts respecting Muskoka and Parry Sound, regarding the District Court.

Mr. Balfour introduced a bill to amend the act especting mortgages on real estate. This bill deals with-loan companies and the contracts they make with borrowers. Under the present law the mortgagor is liable bander all the rules and bylaws that a company may make subsequent to the execution of his particular mortgage. Unless the rules bylaws and regulations are set forth in the body of the mortgage they should not be liable to any rules made subsequent to the execution. And it is against this that the bill provides.

The bill to amend the Registry Act, on motion of Mr. Wood, was read a second time. This bill is intended to provide an opportunity to register receipts at the registry office upon payment of a fee.

Mr. Hardy introduced a bill to provide representation for the district of Nipissing in the Lecislative Assembly. A deputation with this object in view waited on the Cabinet some time ago.

Mr. Clarke (Wellington) moved the second reading of a bill for the better protection of insectivorous and other birds.

Mr. Stewart's bill to amend the Municipal reading of a bill for the better protection of insectivorous and other birds.

Mr. Stewart's bill to amend the Municipal Act also received its second reading.

Mr. Balfour's bill to amend the Ontario Election Act was read a second time. It provides for telephone communication from Felez Island to the mainland for election purposes.

Mr. Balfour became very eloquent over the hardships endured by those who acted as messengers in former elections. In the winter time communication with the island is difficult and dangerous.

messengers in former elections. In the winter time communication with the island is difficult and dangerous.

Mr. Mowat suggested that the provisions contained in the bill might be extended to other localities.

Mr. Creighton created some anusement in the preternaturally dull proceedings by objecting that ballot papers could not be sent by telephone, the means of communication suggested in Mr. Balfour's bill. An explanation was furnished the Opposition member.

The Insurance Companies' return was presented to the House yesterday by the Honther Provincial Secretary. It deals with those companies engaged in business under Ontario charters, the amount of fire insurance at risk at Dec. 31; policies in force in each year from 1881 to 1887, etc. The amount of fire insurance at risk in purely mutual companies during 1887 was $80.897,185; policies, 65,865; total losses paid, 3104,289. Mixed mutual companies, amount of risks during 1887 was $31,664,290; policies, 30,710; losses paid, $158,087. Regarding joint stock companies, the amount of risks for 1887 was $11,190,612; policies issued, 10,465; losses paid, $17,93.

Mayor Biggin, Major Hamitton and Messra. Alexander Smith, David Graham and James Connec composed a deputation that wasted on the Government yesterday. Rumors Afloat.
The report that was circulated yesterday that a man had jumped into the Otonabee from the Ashburnham bridge could be traced to no reliable source, but last night a hazy probability was given to the report by another rumor that was current to the effect that Wm. Vass, a laborer and former member of the Salvation Army, had been missing from his home since Saturday night last, and that no trace of him could be found. The two rumors were at once nected by willing minds and in this way Wm. Vass-on Chamberlain-st., revealed the fact that Vass was an serene in the bosom of his family. The rumor probably arose from the fact that he was delayed a great deal later than usual on Saturday night in ing home, and his wife, getting uneasy

SUDDEN DEATH

W. Smith, the Well Sporting The sudden death at about haif pas twelve to-day at noon of Robert W. Smith Speils the T. better known as "Soapy Bob," created quite a sensation when the news begame noised abroad. The gathering of sporting men which is in town just at present to attend the three days races on the ice which open here to-morrow were almost paralyzed when the report of the death was carried to them, and every citizen no matter how short may be his residence in town was acquainted with Smith and his history and notoriety as a circus traveller.

This morning the deceased man left his home on Perry-st. and came up town and as was usual with him was in a jovial and light-hearted mood. He was around with several of his friends cracking his jokes and talking of the prospects of the races to-morrow. About eleven o'clock he comto-morrow. plained of having a peculiar sensation in the region of the heart and went into the Grand Central and sat down. Feeling slightly better he walked as far as the City Hotel, where he was again compelled to go in and sit down. He was not long here before the symptoms increased and he was driven home, where he had only nicely arrived when he dropped dead in the arms of his old companion, Alex. (Sandy) Watson. Dr. Boucher had been summoned, but nothing could be done for the unfortunate man. The cause of death was undoubtedly heart trouble, and it is supposed that a bullet which was lodged in the deceased man's right side some years ago while he was travelling in the States and which was never extracted had something to do with his sudden demisse.

The deceased was, perhaps, one of the best known men among the sporting and had someting white mise.

He was admitted to be one of the most clever and accomplished "fakirs" that ever duped a victim. That this was beyond a doubt true is shown by the great financial success which attended Smith's annual trips, and it is said that he was worth in good Canadian currency between twenty-five and thirty thousand tween twenty-five and thirty thousand building of armories in town by appointing

The Daily Review.

TUESDAY, FEBRUARY 19, 1889. The Girl I Left Behind Me.

When I hired lodgings at Mme. Hampton's, I had no idea that she owned so precious a thing as a daughter. Not that it would have made any difference if I had known it. I had become indifferent to women; they interested me only as a trivial study. You will say that woman as a study is too dangerous, but it had never proved so with me. In the meantime I neither sought nor avoided them; those whom fate threw in my way I placed under my mental microscope, not caring much for what it revealed. My indifference, however, did not arise from any lost illusions. I had never been in love, and it never occurred to me that the thing was possible. I had been on friendly terms with blonde and brunette, with the prude and the coquette, the elever and the designing; but I had forgoten, their existence half an hour later. Mme. Hampton herself never left the room; she was doubtless dying, but she had been so long about it, and made so little circumstance about it, that nobody gave it a thought, it would seem. She saw her lodgers, and arranged terms, and sent in the bills; and yet the house and all its appointments seemed to share the order of the planetary system. The motive power was madame's daughter. I involuntarily pictured her, since we always picture those who appeal individually to us in any way, as a coarse featured woman, with "silver threads among the gold," a face more or less wrinkled, a sharp voice, big rough hands, and a genius for snubbing the servants and haggling with butcher and baker.

On entering madame's room one day in order to settle my account, according to the custom of the house, behold a slender being before the open fire, with one tiny hand on the mantel, a lavender morning gown turned the knot of yellow hair at the back of her head, from which some curis escaped, into pure gold. There was an air of luxury and leisure about her which was simply delicious to view of the facts.

"My daughter," said madame presently.

pure gold. There was an air of luxury and leisure about her which was simply delicious to view of the facts.

"My daughter," said madame presently. "Estelle, this is Mr. Van Huysam; you have heard me speak of him."

Estelle turned a beautiful, haughty face in my direction, bowed slightly, smiled vaguely. "Indeed, I might say I have heard you speak of no one else." Plainly the old lady had been singing my praises, and the young one did not fancy the tune.

I do not know what chord thrilled in my heart at those words, in that soft minor voice, capable of all melody, of terse expression, nor how I got myself out of the room. A man who has received a fatal bullet in the breast does not recognize the sensation, for the reason that he has never experienced it before; hedgees not know its import. We met often after this, always by accident, it would seem, on the staircase, in the hall, and finally one might I made so bold as to knock at the door of her music room. She welcomed me with her haughty cordiality, if haughtiness can be cordial. There were three or four young men already in possession, but she placed her seet near my own, and while she auon threw out javelins of wit for the general benefit, I received the lion's share of attention. This was flattering to my amour propre. But still, whenever I repeate my call, I had always to wrestle with a handful of younger men for the supremacy. I must confess that before I reached this point was flattering to my amour propra. But bitll, whenever I repeated my call, I had always to wrestle with a handful of younger men for the supremacy. I must bonfess that before I reached this point I had been obliged to wrestle with myself to overcome a prejudice. A Van Huysam in love with his landlady's daughter was an anomaly. What would my family and friends say to such an affair! With what eyes would they regard it? Wint would Miss Douglass think, for whom I had been destined, but who had been a hobbled-hoy girl of 13 when I had last seen her? Of course she could care nothing for me; it would be a wound to her vanity at the most. I had never intended to marry her; I had never consented, in fact; that bony, shy school girl, with the big eyes and Jank figure, had never appealed to me; I had never been able to forgive her for stammering and biushing. Besides, there had been some rumor that the coffers of the family had suffered during their sofourn abroad, and I had lost sight of them through their own negligence. But a landlady's daughter: The idea would wither all my acquaintances. However, love not only laughs at locksmiths, but at one's relations. When I sunned myself in Estelle's presence Learnel no more for the world's opinion, or for that of any Van Huysam but myself, than for the inhabitants of Fistland; but once away from that subtle but at one's relations. When I sunned myself in Estelle's presence Learnel no more for the world's opinion, or for these of any Van Huysam but myself, than for the inhabitants of Flatland; but once away from that subtle magnetism, then my poles changed. I saw a thousand reasons for giving her up—if one can be said to give up what one does not possess. Such a thing as a Van Huysam marrying out of his sphere had never been known in the family annals. But how did I know that Estelle would marry me? Tp-be sure, if I had been quite certain of that perhaps I should have hesitated to proceed further. The far off, unattainable and dim is dear to the soul of man—at least till it is his to take or leave. One day, when we were reading a new poem together, a card was brought in. "Tell Mr. Chester that I am engaged and cannot see him to-night," I overheard her say to the servant. "Mr. Chester does not appreciate our author," she apologized to me, "and I am not self sacrificing enough to accept him in exchange for Browning." It occurred to me at that time that there were other young men belonging to aristocratic families who had no fear of a mesalliance with a landlady's daughter, although to be sure they might be simply amusing themselves, as gilded youth were wont to do. Estelle would never go out with me; she had no chaperon, she said, I wondered what my sister-in-law would answer should I write her to chaperon my landlady's daughter to Lobengrin, she who chaperoned only the very elect, so to speak.

One evening the conversation drifted into the subject of marriage. Mr. Chester and some others were present, and—ded the theme. "I would marry the woman I loved," said Mr. Chester, "It she were a beggar, and my rather dishnerited me on the spot."

"Beggary signifies nothing," returned another. "One would not ask has she adot, but has she blue blood."

"An ancestral tree, in short, with more roots than branches," spoke a third. "As for myself, I confess I should prefer my wife to belong to the impecunious old famillies rather when he fell in love with a shop girl, with neither blood nor bullion, his mother especially! Bot Bishop stood to his guns; it must, have taken a lot of pluck to weather all he did from friend and foe."

"You call that pluck!" said Chester. "I call it obstinacy, in his case. It was such in easy thing for Bishop to fall in love that he might have pleased his mother and given up the girl." up the girl."
"And what do you think, Mr. Van Huy-sam F' asked Estelle.

To be Continued. Scott's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil and Hypophosphites.

Is very palatable and much better than the plain oil. Dr. W. H. Cameron, of Halifax, N. S., says: "I have prescribed Scott's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil with Hypophosphites for the part two years and found it more agreeable to the stomach, and have better results from its use than any other preparation of the kind I have ever tried." This was an action to recover the amount of a note for $4525 given under the following circumstances: Dalgleish had left an order with Bond for 3000 barrels of peck on the Chicago market, depositing with him $500 as margin. The deal was successful and Dalgleish having realized a round profit left $500 with Bond for another transaction of the same kind. After some time, receiving no satisfactory report, Dalgleish communicated direct with Chicago and was informed that no second order had been received in his name. Upon this he remonstrated with Bond, alleging loss of considerable profit, and Bond gave him his note for $425, which covered $500 margin as well.

Defendant's plea was that the note was Defendant's plea was that the note was not given for any lawful consideration, and the amount therefore could not be legally claimed.

The judge held that the only question at issue was whether or not the transaction was one of stock gambling. The reply, he went on, was in the altimative, and the contract entered into was merely one of bucket shopping. The note was given on a prohibited contract and for an illegal consideration. For this reason the amount could not be recovered at law.

AN APPEAL FOR SYMPATHY. On Saturday the Toronto Mail, which at one time was the foremost Conservative paper in Ontario, made an appeal for sym-pathy in an article three columns long, and special copies of that issue have been circulated from .its office. The burden of the article is that the Mail is still an upholder of true Conservative principles and that it broke with Sir John Macdonald on the Riel matter. Neither of these state-

As to the Riel matter the Government, headed by Sir John Macdonald, took the ground that Louis Riel had a fair trial, that he was justly condemned and that the exceptive should not interfere with the course of justice. When the Yankee organ latimates that Sir John asked it to follow any course different from that, the people any course different from that, the people have only to refer back to the speeches of the Ministers to refute the insinuation. They remember that in Ontorio and in Quebec, as in every other Province, the Ministers, both French and English, argued that question all through the campaign with Mr. Blake, Mr. Laurier and other Librari, leaders. They know that Mr. Liberal leaders. They know that Mr. Laurier and Mr. Blake in Peterborough and elsewhere opposed the Government in this matter, and that here and elsewhere Mr. Chapleau addressed French and English audiences in support of the course has Government pursued. These events are such recent occurrences that the Mail's impudence in putting forward such an ex-

But what was the true reason for the Mail's action in turning against those whom it had supported and who had supported it? It has not told us, and people can only judge by events. When the Mail announced that it was no longer a Conservative paper, or a supporter of Sir John Macdonald, it said that it differed from Sir John in regard to the position of the Roman Catholic Church in Quebec, in regard to prohibition and some other matters. The some other matters, though dropped in so carlessly, have since been shown to be the most important changes in the Mail's attitude.

It will be remembered how, with an almost serio-comic air, the Mail announced that it had espoused thereause of prohibition, and that it had enlisted as a private in the ranks and would "keep the armor bright." Its circulation was aided by that announcement. Societies promoted its circulation was not a strength of that statement. culation on the strength of that statement. Yet when it got new readers it soon allowed the flag to droop and the armor to grow rusty. The "some other matters" came to the front and took the attention of this commercial union with the United States and its opposition to the National Policy. Day in and day out it assailed the fiscal policy it had so long upheld. Day after, day it advocated a scheme that was dia-metrically opposed to the principles it had so long professed. It lost no opportunity to discredit Canada and to advance its new to discredit Canada and to advance its new hobby. It had and has now agents on the road who preach annexation to those who would listen to them. Whenever an agitation arose in opposition to the Conservative Government, or that menaced the Dominion, the Mail hastened to give it encouragement. After professedly doing all it could to defeat Mr. Mowat, it turned around at the opening of the first session of the Legislature after the election and bespattered the Mowat Government with praise. It turned to the Liberal party of the Dominion and asked dt to put Sir Richard Cartwright at its head to lead the fight for commercial annexation. Its real fight for commercial admexation. Its real leader ever since those "some other matters" came between it and Sir John Macdonaid has been Mr. Erastus Wiman of New York, and i's aim the breaking up of

Mr. Eugene O'Keefe of O'Keefe & Co., the well-known brewers, had to summon the ald of the police on Monday night to protect him and his property from an expected attack by several of his ex-employees. It appears that Mr. O'Keefe had been out of town for some three weeks, returning on Saturday last. For some reason which had transpired in his absence he immediately on his return hastened to dismiss ten of his employes, including some of his brewers, drivers and yardmen. The discharged men showed plainly that they did not like the treatment accorded, and acted so ugly that Mr. O'Keefe had a squad of police guarding his property. Nothing occurred, however, to bear out his fears of violence, and he last night notified the police that their services were no longer required.

During the past eight or ten weeks the subject that has been engaging aimost the entire attention and certainly a greater portion of the discussion of the local organized workingmen has been the nine-hour movement. Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup should always be used when children are cutting teeth. Two Hamiltonians Enifed in a Saloon Row at Midnight.

Hamifors, Feb. 19.—Joe Brown, who keeps a laundry at 82 James-street north, and Billy McCallum, a fakir who operates a sweat board at the country fairs, were badly stabbed last night. The row occurred in the Arcade saloon, 27 James-street north, shortly before 12 o'clock. Another man named Reid had his hand cut. It is not positively known who did the stabbing, but James Guthrie, the owner of the saloon, and Dennis Kelly, ir', both respectable men, were arrested about 4 o'clock. The prisoners were both in the dock at the police court this morning, but as McCallum and Brown were not able to attend the case was laid over. The magistrate fixed ball at $500 and two sureties of $230 each, which was promptly furnished, and the defendants were released.

The preliminary hearing of the charges against Matthew Burns, Herbert Galvin and John Stoneman for breaking into Alex. Turnbull's house, 24 Eric-avenue, on Feb. 3 and stealing a number of articles took place at the police court this morning. Galvin was committed for trial. There was no evidence connecting Burns and Stoneman with the robbery and they were acquitted. Galvin is held on another charge of larceny. Charles Kells, a good-looking young man, whose parents are very respectable, stood in the dock at the police court this morning and confessed ton less than four charges of larceny. The police have also evidence in their possession commenting him with numerous other thefts, but as he gave them very valuable information concerning the workings of a gang, of which he was a member, they were not pressed. The magistrate will pass sentence on Thursday.

The Girl I Left Behind Me.

"If I funix Bishop was a fool; that is—I' mean—there may be exceptional shop girls, who have all the refinement and cultivation, all the traditions of good breeding, 15 the world; but Bishop's choice was not one of these. She was simply beautiful, and he was a fool to $600 kinself, at his age, to be hoodwinked, so to speak, by mere flesh and blood."

"I quite agree with you," she said. I could have bitten my tonghe out

"I quite agree with you," she said.
I could have bitten my toughe out when I called Bishop a fool—in fact the whole conversation had seemed malapropos to me, and I went away with a sense of defeat. But how could I tell her that aithough I might draw the line at the shop girl, marrying a landlady's daughter was quite another affair? Every day, to be sure, I made up my mind that I would seek Estelle no more; that the difficulties in the case were too great to be surmounted; but every day, all the same, found me beside her, without self denial enough to resign the infinite charm of her presence, and yet too weak of will to accept all the consequences of such an alliance.
You will say that if I could thus judge and weigh circumstances. I was not in love. But what, is it, when all your soul is saturated with thoughts of one being, when you seem to be not so much yourself as another? The heroine in "Wutthering Heights," and so, I am sure, I felt with regard to Estelle. I am certain that in time I should have overcome all obstacles, that the nobility within me would have got the better of any meaner qualities; but every man's nature or temperament is in a manner his own fate. Had I not been quite certain at this time that I pleased Estelle, in spite-of her gentle hauteur, perhaps I should have been able to overcome my social scruples sconer. A few weeks later I was called away on business, and it was a month or more before I found it convenient to return. During that time I had written to Estelle more than once, without, however, receiving any reply. Yet I was sure she was mine; that I had only to speak; and I meant to speak at last—to speak so eloquently that she woulkin not remember the silence had been long.

I went first to pay my respects to Mme, Hampton.

"I have been making my will," she said,

after a little.
"Your will, madame!"
"Yes. I have other heirs besides Estelle, who may dispute it. They will contend that I am—what you, may call a 'crank.' But I had a method in my madness. I beg you to be my executor."

"I am at your service, madame."
"Thank you. I leave the bulk of my property to Estelle."
"The bulk!" I repeated. "You have found your business remunerative!"

"The bulk!" I repeated. "You have found your business remunerative?" She chuckled audibly. "I have found it entertaining, enlightening," she answered. "It has paid me? Yes, I have discovered who are my friends. I must tell you that Estelle is not my daughter." "Not your daughter?" "Are you disappointed? When her father died abroad, insolvent, I was at hand. We were both drinking the waters at some German spa. Long ago I Lad been going to marry Mr. Douglass, her father."
"Mr. Douglass, P. "Wes. Doss the name offend you! When marry Mr. Douglass, ber father."

"Mr. Douglass?"

"Yes. Does the name offend you? When he died I promised to take Estelle if I might give her my name and money. There was literally nothing left from the estate for her to live upon. However, when I returned from Europe I returned a pauper, so to speak. Do you follow me? I allowed myself a little masquerade; I deceived even Estelle, but I have never deprived her of a luxury; even the lace on her handkerchief is real She often marvels that the business is so good. I have held the purse, and she has been glad to work with me. But my friends were too indignant at my misfortunes to lend me aid. What business had I to lose the money which they might have inherited! And adopt a daughter! They wanted me to place Estelle in a shop-Estelle! How I haughed in my slevel fam now about to retire from business; the doctor has advised me to make my will. You will find Estelle in the music room."

I entered the music room without knocking, according to my habit. Estelle sat with her mandolin on her lap, but every chord had snapped in the last stormy jouch.

"You have returned," she said, smilling as a ghost may smile.

"Yes. I have come to tell you—what you already know—I love you, Estelle. I have loved you since I first met you; yes, and, before. I loved you before I knew that you existed. It must be so, because I have never loved till now. You do not doubt it?

"No, I do not doubt it; I know that you love me, Mr. Van Huysam, and I know that you love me, Mr. Van Huysam, and I know that you love me, it is that which has given me couran."

"My darling Estelle, I was sure you loved me; it is that which has given me courage."
I would have taken her in my arms and kissed that perfect cheek where the rose was just beginning to blossom, but she escaped

"You knew that I loved you," she repeated.
"Mr. Van Huysam, I don't mind confessing that there was indeed a time when I loved you better than life. At least I believed so. At that moment I thought you loved me."
"I did, I do love you, Estelle," I protested.
"Yes. Then I would have field for you, lived for you. One day I awoke, I saw that you could not love me, or nothing on earth could likeop you silent. You did not see how I suffered. Then my heart broke. Do you know what it is to have a broken heart! It is to have isots the power to love any one again. I have read somewhere that a man never loves the same woman twice."

"But you.—I love you. Listen, Estelle, ilms will."
"But you.—I love you. Listen, Estelle, ilms will."
"But she smiled sadly. "I thank you; I forgive you," she said; "I would love you if I forgive you," she said; "I would love you if I consumption or any of the family of throat and nose and head and lung obstructions, all see her.—Mary N. Prescott in Harper's Bazar.

anything else. It was certainly not because Jim was a beauty and that his brother officers were anxious to impress the fact upon mankind in general. Oh, no; for Jim Beresford was a young man whose best friend could not have said that he was anything but downright ugly.

And yet it was such a pleasant phiz, clean shaven and ill assorted, as to features, though the blue eyes had a merry twinkle in them which made you forget that they might have been larger with considerable advantage, and the white teeth disclosed every minute or two by the merrier smile, quite made you forget also that the mouth was a good deal too wide for its owner to fairly sustain the name of Beautiful Jim.

Everybody liked him—everybody. Indeed, in all my life I never heard, of but one human being who did not give in sooner or later to the influence of Beautiful Jim's attractions, and that—but, there, I have a story to tell about him, and that person will come in in due time and season.

MILITARY MEN AT OTTAWA.

MILITARY MEN AT OTTAWA.

The 21st Annual Meeting of the Dominion Riffe Association.

Ottawa, Feb. 20.—The Capital was full of military men to-day and more are coming in to-fight and in the morning. There are few, lowever, among the martial gentlemen now here who ramb below major, and about the only major visible was Mr. Joe Delamere of the Queen's Own.

The 21st annual meeting of the Dominion Rife Association was held in the big Railway Committee room of the House of Commons to-day and the business was disposed of in rapid order. Col. George A. Kirkpatrick, MeP., the president, was in the chair. Lord Stanley of Preston was present and made a speech; so did Gen. Sir Fred Middleton. The latters evidently not struck on the usefulness of the man who can he down on his belly and make a "bull'seye" at 1000 yards or more. He takes more stock in the idea of teaching the trustic militamas, hibb to shoot. He said that very the prize winners were the officers and sergeants. It was necessary that more thoney should be spent in instructing the rural battalions amongst the country corps. He had found that seven or eight out of every twenty-five men had never pulled a trigger. The chairman congratulated the members upon the satisfactory character of last year's matches. He compared the condition of the Dominion Association with the National Rifle Association and stated that it showed a condition of things flattering to Canada. Since the Nursery matches had been commenced 1396 compatitors had entered for them and this went to show that a large number of new men competed in the annual matches every year. He referred in jerms of thankfulness to the aid Lord Stanley had given to the association, and said that his presence to day indicated the interest he felt in its welfare. Lord. Stanley had Leen a soldier himself and therefore could thoroughly sympathize with their aspirations and understand the difficulties they had to contend with.

In response Lord Stanley said he thanked them for the kind manner in which they received the motion for a vote of thanks to him. He felt it was only due on his part to continue, so far as lay in his power, the assistance which his predecessors had so readily given to such a deserring association, With all due deference to Gen. Laurie he perhaps hed the oldest first-class certificate in the room. [Applause.] It was exactly 30 years ago since he obtained his certificate in the room. At the afternoon sitting of the House there was a prolonged discussion on a resolution by Mr. Bardest for a return showing the post-offices built in Canada since Confederation.

Mr. Bardest for a return showing the post-offices built in Canada since Confederation.

Mr. Burdest said there was an unfair distribution of public buildings in the various towns and villages in Ontario. He wanted to know why such a burg as Cayuga, with a population of 700, should have a new post-office, and a flourishing and enterprising town like Dezeronto should be without one. Mr. Burdett was followed by a dozen other members who advocated the claims of their favorite towns for new poatoffices.

Mr. Cook wanted to know why the beautiful, intelligent town of Orilla was overlooked. The Ontario Government had built an idiot asplum there but the Dominion Government had given them nothing.

Mr. Lister complained that there was no uniformity in the manner of treatment. There should be some system based on population or anything leise, but politics should not guide. He charged that the erection of buildings at Stratford, Goderich and Stratford und onthing to do with his election, as his majority was noutside of, that town. Mr. Porter charged that Mr. Lister was untruthful when he saidthe promise of the erection of a postoffice at Goderich had any bearing on his election. There had been no promises before the election. There the beautiful, budding town of St. Marys for a postoffice. "The revenue is $5000 per year at that-office," said Mr. Trow, "and there is a free site awaiting the Government, for a post-office building." [Cheers.] Mr. Casey said a free site awaiting the Government for a post-office building." [Cheers.] Mr. Casey said to new postoffice would look well in the thriving town of Ridgetown.

The question papers were well filled to day with matters of local interest. In answer to Mr. Boyle the Minister of Customs said that the value of our entire importations from the United States of green fruit, seeds, trees and other articles placed on the free last-on order-in-council dated April 4, 1888, from such date to Jan. 1, 1889, was $831,389; the amount of revenue that would have been collected on these importations and they not been made free would be $219,626; the value of smullar importations from the United States for the corresponding period of the previous year was $498,183; the value of our exports to the United States of these articles from April 4 to Jan. 1, 1889, was $1.486,022, apples $1,351,432, berries $80,000, seeds $50,000, mr. Moncrieff that the Government intended to erect several range lights at the village of Corunna opposite Stag Island in the River St. Clair.

The other business of the House was of a routine nature. Mr. Marshall introduced a bill to ansend the act incorporating the Mountain Fire Insurance Company of Canada. Mr. Daly introduced a bill to incorporate the title Souris and Qu'Appelle Railway.

The Minister of Marine introduced the hill of last assisting relations of the border with the River St. Clair.

Mr. Poursell introduced a bill for the protection of the workingmen arainst the frauds practised on them by sub-contractors on large tublic works. Mr. Purcell and it was the

They Will Bury the Provincial Exhibition in London.

TORONTO, Feb. 21.—Yesterday afternoon at the House was principally devoted to the discussion of Mr. Awrey: motion to abolish the Provincial Fair,

Mr. Commee's bill proposes to take away from the judge at trial the power to refer any matters excepting those relating to accounts to arbitration without the consent of the parties to the issue.

A bill was introduced by Mr. Waters to enable Brockvills to issue debentures for drainage purposes.

When Mr. Awrey, seconded by Mr. Bishop, both Reform members, rose to move the following resolution, he was received with a round of generous applause?

That this House, recognising that the Provincial Exhibition has in the past proved of no little service to the interests of Agriculture; that the work is has hitherto done is now being more effectually done by the exhibitions held in our large cities; that in view of the fact that the Provincial Exhibition has proved a financial failure year after year, agregating a loss during the last sowan years of no less a sum than ten thousand dollars, and that it meets each ear with bus indifferent support; that was a sum of the control of the control and said, "I thought there was a nigger in the fence somewhere." He wanted his name withdrawn from the motion.

A voice: "You can's withdraw it now."
Some reference had been made, not altogether of a complimentary character, to exhibition side-shows, and Mr. H. E. Clarke, gaid if any grave legislator merely wished to inspect some live stock he might put some wax in his ears and thus escape the voice of the syren. He thought that the much abused side-show was a very good innovation.

Mr. Whitney was another opponent of the original motion. He thought Mr. Awrey's argument that the axhibition should be abolished on the ground that it was a financial failure was unsound. He made the somewhat remarkable application of the movers argument that the insane asylums were not a financial success yet no one would advocate the abolishing of these institutions.

Mr. Meredith thought the city of London was rather giving than receiving any benefit in having the Provincial Exhibition held in that city. He agreed that there could be no better place to bury it than in the city of London and no more inclodious voice to sing its requirem than that of his hon, friend opposite.

Mr. A. M. Ross and that when the exhibition had been held in London it had always been a marked success. He agreed that it would only be fair to accede to the request of Mr. Drury to permit the grant this vear. But there could be no doubt, that Provincial London, Feb. 20.—Mr. Houston, secretary if the Irish Loyal and Patriotic Union, was urther cross-examined before the Parnell commission this morning. Witness said he ccepted the letters solely on Pigott's statement. Two days before the commission pened Pigott wrote him an abusive letter lemanding that after testifying he should be tiven $35,000.

Houston said he did not think Pigott's statements were very accurate, bocause Pigott only repeated what other persons said. Between October, 1886, and January, 1888, he had Pigott $1000, but The Times paid the bills from May, 1887. Pigott, when he wrote tow titness demanding $25,000, and he had been correct in Soames 'clice into making a statement under false pretences. Witness did not answer the letter.

Attorney-General Webster read notes made by Pigott of conversations with Eugene Davis. According to the notes Davis stated Egan took him into his confidence. Davis knew the League, one working openly and the other secretly, the "B.'s "inding men and the League noney.

Egan was in Paris with Parnell, O'Kelly.

secretly, the "B.'s" finding men and the League money,
Egan was in Paris with Parnell, O'Kelly,
Dillians Brenna and Harris in 1881. He told Davis he had long conferences with those gentemen, and all had agreed that the situation reindered reprisals against England imperative and England's power could be neutralized only by removing as many of her leading men as possible. Walsh, Sheridan and others were to be sent to Ireland to plan the murders. Immediately after Parnell's arrest Egān appealed to the Fenian leaders to "zecute the work more energetically. Walsh went to Dublin and appointed Carey, Mollett and Curley as his chief men. Tydan, Byrin, Colbert and Sheridan were also associated with him. Egan was invariably consulted regarding projected outrages and murders. Egan strongly reproved Tynan for failing to appear at Kingsbridge in time to give the signal for Forster's murder.

Davis was in a caste to Paris, when Twee said that of course Parnell was aware of this proposal.

The Times on Canada and the U.S. Honon, Feb. 20.—The Times, referring to the debate in the Canadian Parliament, says that there is no occasion for Canadians to calculate the profit and loss of their cannection with England. The real cause of their troubles is certainly not indifference to Canadian interests on the part of England. The cause will be found in the well known extencises of the Presidential election in the United States. The Times says is will not anticipate what the Harrison Cabinet will do, but it may be fairly hoped that the question of immediate interest to Canada will be considered without prejudice and with mutual good will.

There came from the orchestra chairs a man with a fine frock coat and silk hat, good looking and athletic, and wearing a well-built moustache. He had left his wife inside for a few moments and had with him a friend. He came out to see a man—but he saw the wrong man. BEAUTIFUL JIM was called "Beautiful Jim," and yet nobody ever dreamed of calling him anything else. It was certainly not because Jim was a beauty and that his brother officers were anxious to impress the fact upon manyord was a young man whose best friend could not have said that he was anything but described in the said that he was anything but described in the said that he was anything but described in the said that he was anything but described in the said that he was anything but described in the said that he was anything but described in the said that he was anything but described in the said that he was anything but described in the said that he was anything but described in the said that he was anything but also s ford was a young man whose best friend could not have said that he was anything but downright ugly.

By JOHN STRANGE WINTER. CHAPTER I.

And yet it was such a pleasant phiz, clean shaven and ill assorted as to features, though the blue eyes had a merry twinkle in them which made you forget that they might have been larger with considerable advantage, and the white teeth, disclosed every minute or two by the merrier smile, quite made you forget also that the mouth was a good deal too wide for its owner to fairly sustain the name of Beautiful Jim he was; Beautiful Jim he had been from the beginning of the army chapter, and Beautiful Jim he was likely to remain until he came to the end of it, and, ugly as he was, the name suited him down to the very ground.

Everybody liked him—everybody. Indeed, in all my life I never heard of but one human being who did not give in sooner or later to the influence of Beautiful Jim's attractions, and that—but, there, I have a story to tell about him, and that person will come in in due time and season.

Of course he was irish—Jim, that is—person will come in in due time and season.

Of course he was Irish—Jim, that is—with all the happy-go-lucky, careless humor which is so often to be found among the Irish people; all their love of fun and fund of mother wit, and as a story teller, why not another man in the regiment was in the same street with Beautiful Jim; no, not one.

"Sure," said he che day, after a five days' leave spent in town, "I have some cousins in London, real smart girls they are, too—went to see 'em our Sunday and found some, other fellows there. One was Brooke of the One Hundred and First D. G.'s, the chap that 'had the good luck to be left at home on depot when the One Hundred and First D. G.'s went to the Zulu business; the other—well, such a howling, haw-haw, stiff collared beggar, that I thought he must be at least half a dezen cavalry swells rolled into one. But this chap (whom I afterward found belonged to the Pill brigade, and was at that I thought he must be at least half a dozen cavalry swells rolled into one. But this chap (whom I afterward found belonged to the Pill brigade, and was attached to the One Hindred and First during the Zulu business), evidently thinking Brooke a humdrum, quiet sort of chap, not up to much, don't you know, and half a duffer at that, and evidently not having the least idea that he had anything to do with the One Hundred and First, began a too delightful account, of how the One Hundred and First not only ran away on the smallest provocation, but even fired on their officers more times than once.

"Course this chap had an eye to my two cousins, who are pretty and smart, and never cast so much as a look at either Brooke or myself. He yawned on, enlarging as he went, till some people mightn't have been very far out of it if they'd thought it was all a pack of lies together; and Brooke got more nervous and flidgety every minute, his face getting glummer and glummer, and this looks darker and darker.

"At last he couldn't stand any more of it, but got up and seized the poker and began smashing the fire with it, while my cousins were trying to signal the doctor chap to shut up. But no; on he went with a detailed account of how one night they had been alarmed by their own sentries, and—and then Brooke couldn't stand it any longer, but just burst out:

""Pon my word, you're quite right. I don't know what we could have been about to do it!"

"And what then, Jim?" one of his heares asked;

"Why," returned Beautifut' Jim, "my little cousin Nell—who's a daylilah smart.

"And what then, Jim?" one of his hearers asked.

"Why," returned Beautiful Jim, "my little cousin Nell—who's a devillah smart little girl, no mistake about it—found out very conveniently that the sum in the park had been rather too much for her that morning, and that she felt awfully ill; would I mind opening the window and getting her a fan? so I opened the window a bit wider and got her a fan; and then she began to abuse me and sale! was such a dunce I always made her ill every time I came near her, and I'd got seent on my handkerchlef, said I knew the smell of scent always made her feel faint, and yet I would persist in using it; said I should just have to go and fetch the doctor, and that their doctor lived in Harley street.

"Oh, no," said I—for I never dreamed

"I saw Nell making the devil's own faces at me. 'What's the matter? said I, not knowing what she was after.

"Peantiful Jim!' said she.

"Nell Marchmont!' said I—and then she typed me n wink at the Zulu fellow, and I realized that I'd put my foot in it, as usual. 'Pon my word, I thought he was an awful swell of a cavalryman, nothing less. Well, and what's the news while I have been away?"

"Have been away?"

"Have been away?"

"Have been a Chance.

That is to say, your lungs. Also all your breating mechinery. Very wonderful machinery, it is. Not only the largest air-passages, but the shoughs of little tubes and cavities leading from them.

"Another—that's seventeen, ain't it?

By Jove! I don't know how that long suffering woman stands it. By the bye-have you seen anything of the Lealies?"

"Yes, they were at Mrs. Paget's tennis yesterday, some of them. Why?"

"Because I heard in town that the second one is going to be married, that's all."

all."
Ah; very likely. By the bye, Mrs.
Seton has a tea on this afternoon—music and all that. I promised to look in. Will any of you chaps come?"
"I will," said Beautiful Jim, promptly.
He was always ready for feminine society.

rush and hurry of the best part of the London season.

"Jim," said Owan, as they walked down toward the town together, "that cousin of yours is very pretty, isn't she?"

"Oh, xery!" returned Jim, without a moment's hesitation.
"Did you o about with her a lot?"

"A goodish bit," said Jim, vaguely, yet in a tone which conveyed to his comrade that he had spent the most of his leave in the company of Miss Nell Marchmont.
"And are you likely to"—

"Oh, my dear chap, not a bit of it! Even if I were ass enough to go in for that kind of thing, Nell would just laugh in my face. Faith, no, Nell and I have done the brother and sister dodge too long for either of us to have any ideas of that kind. But why do you want to know, old chap!"

"I just did want to know, that's all," wen replied, lamely. Beautiful Jim walked on for full five minutes in silance.
"Have you ever seen her," he asked, at

"Have you ever seen her, he asked, as last.

"Yes," returned the other, shortly.
"H'm," muttered Jim, as if he began to see light at last; then after another pause and with a total change of tone: "Yes, she's a pretty little girl and a good little girl, and I'd break any fellow's neck who said a word against her, but that's all. I never thought any further of her, and I'll stake my life that she never did of me."

And then they walked on in 'slience again, yet feeling different, both of them. Owen intensely relieved, for, although a handsome man and popular, he would not have cared to enter the lists against old Jim, who had been his special pal ever since they had been together in the regiment.

have cared to enter the lists against old Jim, who had been his special pal ever since they had been together in the regiment.

As for Beautiful Jim, he was greatly pleased, at his discovery — pleased as Punch, as he told himself—and yet he was so tickled by the idea of such a man as Owen being seriously anxious lest little Nell Marchmont should have been snapped up by somebody else—little Nell, whom only the other day he had caught sliding down the bamnisters like the regular little tomboy she was still at heart; little Nell, whose lately acquired airs and graces invariably gave him the most intense amusement—well, it was funny. But then, as Beautiful Jim reminded himself, to a man with an ordinary insight into our poor weak human nature and blessed with a fair sense of humor, the doings and undoings of most people, and particularly those whom we know best, are funny, very funny.

And for old Owen to be "gone" on little Nell: "By Jove," laughed Jim to himself, "how I could make old Owen's hair stand on end if I liked." Ay, how many abt of mischlef, he and Nell had been up to together—before she began to give herself airs and graces, of course. There was that time, for instance, when they had all been at Scarborough together, years and years before, when he and some other fellows—yes, he called them "fallowa," though they were all little better than children at the time, and little Nell the youngest of the lot—had got themselves up in seedy garments one dark October night, and had gone round the streets upon the South cliff singing, not only they, but also little Nell, huddled up in a huge shawl, with a bandage ided over one yee. How well he renembered it! Her father and mother were dining out at a very smart house indeed, and this party of young ruffians had gone and sung outside the windows, and had reaped a goodly harvest, when Nell was supposed to be safe under the wing of the old nurse who had nursed her from a baby. Yes, but the old nurse was castly bambooaled, and Nell was an adept at that process. "Jove

A Submarine Boat.

Experiments with a submarine boat "Le Gymnote," made at Toulon, have been very successful. The boat moves horizonfally as well as vertically, and is easily kept at any depth that is desired. It can be run at a speed of from nine to ten knots. The light is good, and respiration easy. Its crew is ordinarily three, but during the experiments five persons were on board. Th. DOMINION ARTILLERYMEN

ANNUAL MEETING OF THE ASSOCIATION AT OTTAWA.

some Lively Biscussions—A Vote of Censure on the Executive Befeated on a Tie—Telephones at Matches
Ottawa, Feb. 21:—The annual meeting of the Dominion Artillery Association was held in the Private Bills Committee room to-day, and besides lasting for three hours was very lively and animated. Lord Stanley of Preston and Gen. Middleton were present. His Excellency, who, by-the-way, told the meeting not-to forget that he was an old artillery instructor, took the greatest interest in the meeting and made three or four speeches. Col. A. Macdonald, of the Guelph Field Battery, the president, was in the chair. Major Van Wagner and Captain John Hendrie of the Hamilton Field Battery, Major F. King of the Welland Field Battery, and J. H. Mend-of-the Toronto Field Battery were the principal officers in attendance from Western Ontario. Gen. Laurie and Col. Curren of Halfax represented the far East. Toronto members present were Lieut. Homfray Irving. E. S. Cox, B. Mylos, T. W. Jones, W. C. Bonnell, A. W. Dodd and J. H. Beaty. Capt. J. B. Donaldson of Ottawa was in his place as secretary.

Mr. Patterson of Essex has a bill adopting several of the principles of Mr. Kirkpatrick's bill but going much further. Sir John Macdonald said the two bills should go to a special committee for assimilation if possible. However, Mr. Kirkpatrick's bill was read a second time and goes to a committee of his own election and Mr. Patterson's bill will probably follow in a day or two. In the meantime debate on it was adjourned.

Mr. Edgar sent up the bill of which he had given notice, dealing with trusts and combines, which was read a first time, after a full explanation by the mover. The Premier said he had no objection to the introduction of the bill, but he told Mr. Edgar as it dealt with commerce it should be commenced by a resolution instead—of a bill.

Sir John Thouseon asked that Mr.

The meeting would undoubtedly have been much more lively but for the tempering influence of His Excellency's presence. The two principal bones of contention were the protest of the Hamilton Field-Battery that the scores of the batteries which fired at Toronto last fall be not allowed on the aggregate marks in the competition for the General Efficiency Pilze, and that—the Executive Committee had not consulted the Ontario representative thereon, Major McLean of Port Hope, in deciding the matter. This protest is made on the ground that the regulations laid down by the Inspector of Artillary were not complied with, and especially on the ground that the batteriez which fired at Toronto made use of range telephones, which were not allowed at the which fired at Toronto made use of range telephones, which were not allowed at the firing on other ranges.

A vote of censure on the Executive Committee for not calling on the services of Captain McLean was offered by Mr. Irving of Toronto and was defeated on a tie, the chairman giving the casting vote against it.

The matter of using telephones at matches was warmly discussed and several resolutions offered. Lord Stanley said that he thought all purposes would be served by the discussion and the Executive Committee could take the matter up during the present year, Col. Irwin, inspector of artillery, said it was absolutely necessary to use telephones at the Woodbine matches in Toronto because the range passed over two highways. He did not, however, think that they were any benefit in marking scores. Lord Stanley's suggestion was adopted and the protest was not pressed any further.

Lord Stanley, in replying to a vote of thanks, made a splendid address in favor of artillery associations, and among other things he said he would do all in his power to further their interests.

Major King raised the question of the

Col. Macdonald was re-elecced president and Col. Curren of Halifax replaces Col. J. Peters of London as one of the vice-presidents. Captain W. B. McMurrich of Toronto, who was absent owing to a pravious business appointment, still remains one of the vice-presidents. Captain John Hendric of Hamilton, A. W. Dodd, T. W. Jones and E. S. Cox of Toronto were elected to the Council. Col. Turnbull of Montreal was elected president of the Council at a subsequent meeting.

The report of Secretary Donaldson showed that the affiliations for the year were about equal to 1887. The total number of competitors was 546, representing a force of over 2500 exclusive of officers. The total receipts for the year from all sources amounted to $3431 and the expenditure $2840, of which $1047 was paid out in cash prizes, $400 in purchase of cups, badges and other prizes, exclusive of those presented by the Governor-General for efficiency, and $312 as subsistence allowances to detachments, showing a credit balance of $916.

riced by a Majority of 49.

Ottawa, Feb. 22.—The adjourned debate in Mr. Jamieson's prohibition resolution and the amendments thereto was resimed, in the House last evening, but less time was aken in discussing the question than was accupied by the three divisions which resulted. It will be remembered that Mr. Iamieson's motion declared squarely for total prohibition, and that Mr. Wood of Brockville proposed an amendment, adding the words, "when the public sentiment of the country is ripe-for the reception and inforcement of such a measure of prohibition. Mr. Taylor added still another amendment in favor of the principle of compensation to the men engaged in the liquor raffic if a majority of the voters of the country said they must quit.

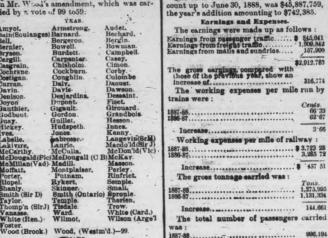

Mr. Taylor's amendment to the amendment was lost by a vote of 85 to 58. Sir John Macdonald, Mr. Foster, Mr. Bewell and Sir John Thompson voted for the amendment.

Mr. Mills then offered an amendment, in

Mr. Mills then offered an amendment, in fieu of Mr. Taylor's omitting the principle of compensation and this was also lost by a vote of 12.7 to 35.

Mr. Monerieff also offered an amendment, which was declared out of order by Deputy Speaker Colby. The House then divided on Mr. Wood's amendment, which was carded by a vote of 99 to vote 1.99 to the declaration of the control of the vote 1.99 to v

THE FRUIT GROWER'S MEETING.

Horticulture to be Taken up as a Study in the Public Schools.

Hamilton, Feb. 21.—At to-day's meeting of the Fruit Growers Association the first business was the taking of questions from the drawer. The first question was, "Will some one give his experience in fruiting Russian apricots?" No one had any personal experience, but the opinion was expressed that the Russian apricot was a expressed that the Russian apricot was failure and not worth taking any stock in The Secretary read the following let from Hon. G. W. Ross, Minister of Educ years ago. we have planted arranged and ornamental trees in all the school evanues and ornamental trees in all the school evanues. We have planted aircady 73,000 trees.

—A paper was then read by Mr. A. M. Smith of St. Catharines on "The Lack of Taste for Horticulture Among Farmers." The speaker pointed out that as a rule farmers paid little or no attention to beautifying their homes by the planting of ornamental or fruit trees, or by keeping well cut lawns. Then, few farmers, he said, exercised any judgment in the matter of forestry. They did not seem to appreciate the value of windbreaks—bits of forest, for the protection of crops and live stock. If the farmers wanted their boys to stay on the farm they must make their homes, more home-like in both winter and summer.

Prof. Panton then gave a lecture on the "Fertilization of Flowers." In the discussion which followed Mr. Dempsey gave his experience of crossing pears and apples. He produced fruit, he said, which no one could say was either apple or pear. The seeds of the fruit, however, were no good. He also said that he tried grafting tomatoes upon potato stalks and got a splendid yield of potatoes underground and a very fice crop of tomatoes on the stalks.

Mr. Thes, Mollwrath of this city gave an excellent paper on "Birds Useful and Injurious in Horticulture." He pointed out what good the different birds of this country did in the cause of horticulture, also showing what mischief the feathered tribe did. He concluded that all birds did more good than evil, except the English sparrow. He thought this imported bird should be got rid of if possible.

FRIDAY, FEBRUARY 22, 1889.

A LIBERAL FIZZLE. Ir is not a matter for surprise that Sir Richard Cartwright was chagrined at the inglorious fizzie in which ended the great blow he had aimed at the Government. Having fallen back this session on their old tactics of attacking the National Policy on some minor points, without a general attack, the party chiefs decided on ringing forward the motion through Sin Richard demanding that Canada be given power to negotiate commercial treaties with foreign countries without Great Britain having a voice in negotiating or assenting to the treaties. The Knight of Rueful Countenance brought forward his motion and made his speech. It was a ech in Sir Richard's usual vein-able speech in Sir Richard's usual vell—aute, but taking a melancholy view of things.

Mr. Geo. E. Foster's reply was a masterly effort. Bis railying of the Liberal party on their rapid changes of base was rich and deserved, and when he entered upon the subject of the resolution he showed the subject of the resolution he showed that the Dominion was benefitted instead of being at a disadvantage by having Great Britain's assistance. Mr. Davies followed on the Liberal side, but his argument was so weak that the Premier feit that, after Mr. Foster's speech, further reply was un-necessary. No other Liberal member, how-aver was ready or willing to take up the ever, was ready or willing to take up th debate, and a discussion which the chiels of that party expected would last several days collapsed and ended in a fizzle. The Government was as secure as ever, the debate had done them good and not harm, the Liberals were chagrined and thus end-ed the battle which had been heralded by the Opposition with boastfulness. It is by the Opposition with loss tunes. It is not surprising that they were creatfallen, but they should be prepared for set-backs so long as they pursue the policy of keep-ing their eyes on Washington and direct-ing their movements in that direction

BUTTERWORTH AGAIN.

A NEW proposal regarding Canada has been brought before the United States Con-gress. Mr. B. Butterworth, the advocate of commercial union who accompanied Mr. Wiman to Canada, proposes that the mem-bers of the Canadian Parliament be invited to visit the United States and that $150,000 be appropriated to pay the expenses in-curred while they are the guests of that country. Mr. Butterworth's object is to promote a friendly feeling between the two countries. That object, however, could be better accomplished in other ways. If the Canadian legislators should take such a Canadian legislators that they will even if the offer is made, it would not settle the fisheries question any more than did the fisheries question any more than did the visit of Sir Charles Tupper, Mr. Chamberlain, Sir John Thompson and Mr. Foster a year ago. If Mr. Butterworth wished to promote friendly international rolations he should have prevailed on his party friends in the Senate to endorse the treaty negotiated by Mr. Cleveland's administration. But the Republican party, to which the Ohio Congressman belongs, displayed its friendliness by throwing out that treaty. He might also, if he is sincere and desires fairness, try to promote a reciprocal arfairness, try to promote a reciprocal arrangement regarding trade to which the Dominion could consent consistently with Dominion could consent consistently with its position, of which it is proud, as a part of the British Empire, and without injury

The estimates for the Department of Education for 1889-amounting to $888, 872 were passed, as were also those for the maintenance of public institutions aggregating $736,084. - Waste in Sugar Barrels.

"The great majority of the sugar and molasses bogsheads which are exported in this city," said a well known importer to a reporter, "find their way back to the West Indies again. The hogsheads are bought from the dealers by some enterprising firm, who take them apart, clean the staves and bind them up into shooks or bundles, and export them, together with their heads, to Cuba. One firm habe a year their heads, to the Grant them together with their heads, to cuba. One firm habe a year trade in new shooks to the West Indies is also an important one, these last selling at from $1.75, while the second hand shooks bring fifty to seventy-five cents. The stave trade of New York is in the hands of a few firms, and as more than $1,500,000 worth of cooperage stock of this kind is exported, in addition to what is used in the immediate vicinity, the business is a large one. The staves which are so largely exported from New York to the Mediterranean and to England are white oak. They come from the West, largely from Michigan. Staves are usually exported in the rough or unfinished state and range all the way from $60 to $100 per thousand for hogshead staves and $80 to $200 for the finer grades, such as are used for the higher priced goods, and are known to the trade as pipe staves.—New York Mail and Express.

St. UATHARINES, Feb. 21—A large number of prominent Church of England laymen assembled in Victoria Hall, St. Paul-street, on Tuesday afternoon to receive a delegation from the Central Defence Association in Hamilton. The chair was occupied by Mr. Thes. Keyes, County Tressurer, who called upon the delegation from Hamilton, consisting of Judge Muir, Canon Curran, Mr. F. E. Kilvert and Alderman Griffith, to explain the objects of the Defence Association.

explain the objects of the Defence Association.

Judge Muir, on behalf of the association, laid the whole facts of the case before the meeting in a stirring speech. He said the reasons for the formation of the Church of England Defence Association for the Diocese of Niagara are: First. The rapid increase of ritualistic elergy in the diocese. In 1881 there were not half a dozen olergymen of ritualistic tendencies in the diocese, and anyone looking over the list of clergy in the Journal of Zroceedings for 1888 can see the names of at least twenty. Second. The increase of illegal and Romanizing practices and ceremonies. Third. The teaching by some of the clergy of doctrines forbidden by the Prayer Book and Articles. Mr. F. E. Kilvert said that since the present Bishop had been in the diocese a strong tendency towards ritualism was observable in some of the churche, aspecially in St. Matthew's Church, and the details of a funeral service, which was conducted there last week, were such as to show that very little difference existed between the Catholic funeral rites and the one in question; for the body was removed to the church at 10 o'clock in the morning and kept there until 3 o'clock in the morning and kept there until 3 o'clock in the afternoon, while six lighted candles and candlesticks—borrowed from the Roman Catholic Church—were placed, three at each end of the coffin, which, was equivalent to a requiem mass in the Roman Catholic Church.

Rev. Canon Kilvert and Mr. T. R. Mer-

Church.

Rev. Canon Kilvert and Mr. T. R. Merritt spoke briefly, after which resolutions in sympathy with the objects of the defence association were passed and a branch formed with T. R. Merritt as president, S. R. Woodruff, vice-president and J. A. Keyes, secretary.

The young man looked at her in an erndite theosophic way and smiled a pensive thoughful Back Bay smile.

"I do not, Ticklowell," responded the fair young girl, warmly, as she leaned tenderly upon him and wiped her spectacles with a soft, caressing touch; "and yet you will pardon me if I suggest that in attempting to dephlogisticate the exphractic immissibility of the pneumatological anhydrousness involved in the myrioramic protoplasm you evince an exoteric pseudoplgraphousness, if not a fumacious incognativity, so to formulate it, that is not Karmistic."

"But do you not suspect me of a disanalogical or extravasating tendency, do you, Emersonia" he inquired, anxiously.

"By no means. Your eugehy and environment presuppose a freedom from superdenominationalisticismical etiolation."

"Then you acquit me of inconious erebrituder"

The tears stood in Miss Howiames' executions.

"Esemplastically excuperated as we are, Ticklowell," she said, "and cardiagraphically congenial in rationative deducibility as we cognovate, such a presumption would hierarchically polarize into pectiniheans."

"And yet we disavow the opiomancy of diathermaneity," he murmured.

"Multijugously, of course."
"Then, Emersonia," he exclaimed triumphantly, "do not evitate! Rubification is incompatible with gelidity, is it not?"
"I cannot oppugn the excorticative forcipation of the inevitable," said the young lady, softly. softly.

And the young man gathered her in his arms and winked solemnly at a portrait of Emerson that hung on the wall.—Chicago

By JOHN STRANGE WINTER, CHAPTER II.

CHAPTER II.

Mrs. Soton was the wife of the senior major of the Blankshire regiment. A pretty little woman who had been brought up in a gay London set, half society and half bohemian. She was very much in love with her slow and stolld lord and master, and stood by him through many a dull and dreary time when her natural inclination would have prompted her to pack up her things and hie herself back to her mother's pleasant house in South Kensington.

her mother's pleasant house in South Kensington.

"It is awful," she said to Beautiful Jim, one day when they were first in Blankhampton. "I never was in such a hole in my life. I went out with Tom this morning, just for the sake of walking along the streets with some one, and every one looked at me from under their eyelashes as if they weren't sure whether it was quite proper to be seen with a main in uniform or not. And then this afternoon some people came and called, all women of course. I asked one if the theatre here was pretty good, and she said she didn't know—in her position it didn't do to be seen in such places. I asked her when har day was, but she said she didn't have a day—if she was in the house she was always pleased to see her friends if they would take her as they found her; so I suppose if she happened to be in bed with an influenza cold she would receive in her bedroom. I only hope," the little woman went on, "that I may be lucky enough to call on that good lady when she is not in the house."

he house."

'Oh, go when you know she is out," ungrested Jim, coolly.

'Trust me for that if I can," returned firs. Setofs, nodding her head knowingly.

'Still, I must confess it puzzles me to hink why she wanted to know me at all

th interest.
"I don't know at all; a very uncomfort-le one, I should think," Mrs. Seton re-ied.

However, the months had gone by, and a Blankshire regiment had settled down ry comfortably, and had come, as other giments had done before them, to look on Blankhampton as an unusually desable static.

pon Blenkhampton as an unusual pon Blenkhampton as an unusual station.

But first and foremost in all schemes and plans for enjoyment was little Mrs. Seton, who loved the world dearly and paid herself in liberal coin of pleasure every day for sticking so faithfully to her gallant if stolid Tom, the major. Nothing of a pleasuring kind could be organized without her, and mothers and daughters alike regarded her as an unmitigated blessing—a sort of social fairs godmother.

an immingated blessing—a sort of social fairy godmother.

She had one of the very pleasantest houses in Blankhampton, and seemed never so happy as when it was full of people, unless indeed you took exception to such times as she made one of a crush elsewhere. She was a fiirt, of course, for she filtred with all the men, young elsewhere. She was a flirt, of course, for she flirted with all the men, young and old alike, and with her Tom the hardest of all; but she monapolized none, and the gfils knew that if any of them should get engaged to one of Mrs. Seton's men there would be no awkwardness on her part, but that the very heartiest congratulations would come from her.

"She's such a good little soul," said one Oxford—after she had wished him joy of his engagement with Madgo Trafford and had told him if he made Madge half as good a husband as her Tom made her she would be a happy, woman—"some women are so nasty to a fellow when he wants to get married. But she's not that sort. By Jove! she told me the whole duty of husbands today, as if she had been my sweetheat's mother and I hadn't at all the best of characters at the back of me. I like the little woman, she's so genuine." And a good many other men and women besides Marcus Oxford had the same opinion of Maj. Seton's gay little wife, so that she was on the whole one of the most popular women in the garrison.

When the two men reached the house they found the party in full swing—Mrs. Seton herself standing in the hall with a merry crowd around her, music going on in the drawing room, and in the rooms at the back of the house the clinking of ice plates and of tea cups.

the back of the house the clinking of ice plates and of tea cups.

As they presented themselves before her, Mrs. Seton began to scold them for their tardy arrival. "I was so afraid you were not coming. What? You've only just got in from town?"

"Didn't know till twenty minutes ago that you had a party," Beautiful Jim broke in; "if I had known, Mrs. Seton, I should have come back by an earlier train; yes, I assure you I should. How do you do, Mrs. Trafford?" böwing to little Mrs. Trafford as she passed on her way to the tea room.

rearrord as she passed on her way to the tea room.

"I wanted you to talk to a girl who has been brought by Lady Margaret," said Mrs. Seton in an undertone. "Miss Adair is not well—headache or something—and this girl has never stirred from Lady Margaret's side, and must be simply bored to death. Not"—with a gay laugh—"that I wish to cast reflections on Lady Margaret; only you know what a lot of Kow-tow a dean's wife has to get through, and really I could not introduce any men—there are so few here today, somehow." Beautiful Jim laughed. "I'll trot her around, Mrs. Seton. Will you take me to her, or must I ask Lady Margaret?"
"Oh, I'll take you. What a good boy you are, Mr. Beresford; one can always depend on you."

you are, Mr. Beresford; one can always depend on you."
"Oh, I hope so. We all depend on you for a good deal of our pleasure, Mrs. Seton," he said.
So Mrs. Seton struggled into the crowded drawing room, and Beautiful Jim fa' hfully followed, not a little to the disgust of more than one young damsel, who would fain have detained him beside her. But Jim was true to his trust and followed closely at his hostess' heels, and in time was formally presented to Miss Earle.

"Pretty oyes," he said to himself as she returned his bow.

"May I take you to have an ice or some tea?" he asked. Then he looked deprecat-ingly at Lady Margaret as if to say, "How on I take you both! I've been told off to

"Yes, I've had a few days' leave. Now, what will you have—tea, coffee, cup or lee? Mrs. Seton's cup is excellent."

Miss Earle, however, chose an ice, and Jim put her on a comfortable sofa with a generously large coffee ice and a plate of wafers within reach, while for himself he provided a tumbler of cup and several sandwiches.

"Ah, yes—very jolly. Have you been here long?"

"Only two days."

"And this is your first introduction to Blankhampton society? Well, it's not a bad place on the whole—can't say I should like to live in it myself altogather."

Miss Earle laughed. "No, it's so quiet after town, isn't it?"

"It is. And you live in town?"

"Yes, most of the year. My father likes it, he is very odd, and it suits him better than our country place, which is too far north for him."

"I see. And what part of town do you live in?" he asked.

"How jolly. I have some cousins not very far from that. And you find Blankhampton a little slow—no wonder. But the Twenty-fifth are going to have a put a small afternoon dance, which won't be bad."

"I am sure not. And the Twenty-fifth, they are the cavalry?"

a small afternoon dance, which won't be bad."

"I am sure not. And the Twenty-fifth, they are the cavalry?"

"Yes—much greater swells than us, you know. We are very small potatoes."

"Oh, but I take great interest in your regiment," Miss Earle exclaimed, "because my young brother has just been gazetted to it, and will join in September."

"Oh, really—you don't say so! How charming. I shall make much of your young brother, Miss Earle."

"Yes?" with a smile and bright upward look which made him say to himself that her eyes were out of the common pretty. "He is a nice boy, a little spoiled, but then he is the last of the Earles. We have gone on from father to son since Henry the Seventh's time, and now we have come almost to the last, for my father and he are the only Earles left."

"You forget yourself," interposed Beau-

"You forget yourself," interposed Beautiful Jim, to whom Miss Earle was a farmore important person than all the fathers and sons of that house who had lived and died from Henry the Seventh's time even until then.

"Ah, but I am only a woman, and the women don't count," she said, simply, and with evident belief in the assertion.

Beautiful Jim burst out laughing.

The Horse and the Hill.

A Horse which had to draw a Load to Market almost daily complained bitterly of a steep Hill on his route, saying: "You are neither Useful nor Ornamental. You are neither Useful nor Ornamental. You are simply an Obstruction to those who pass over this Highway. But for you my Labors would be much lighter."

The Driver overheard the complaint and at once replied:

"Céase your Laments. But for this Hill a our route I should add 500 extra Pounds to your load."

THE HOUSE HAS A LONG SESSION IN SUPPLY.

Experts and Imports Fer January.

Orrawa, Feb. 23.—When the Minister of Finance yesterday afternoon proposed to go into supply Sir Richard Cartwright arose and said that he had intended to move an amendment to the supply motion and he had sent an intimation to the proposal early in the day to Mr. Foster. Sir Richard said he had done this because it was a trade matter that he intended to introduce. Sir John Macdonald said he hoped the gentleman would defer his motion till Tuesday, as it had been arranged on Thursday to go into supply yesterday. Sir Richard did not press his motion any further and the House went into supply.

There has been a great deal of speculation as to the contents of Sir Richard's motion and the general opinion is that it relates to trâde between Canada and the United States. Mr. Mills said incidentally in the House that a more important resolution would be introduced after the first was disped of.

A number of private bills relating to railways were introduced yesterday afternoon, Mr. Kirkpatrick introduced a bill to authorise the Canadian Pacific Railway to issue mortgage bonds on their new steamships to be put into commission in the Pacific trade. Mr. Guillet introduced a bill to authorise the Berlin and South Ontario Railway. Mr. Bowman introduced a bill to authorise the serin and South Ontario Railway. Mr. Bowell said if this was so it was done contrary to the instructions of the Queen's printer. Copies had been sent to some of the counties where Scott Act elections had been held. That was all.

Sir John Macdonald said he did not see why a number of copies of the new lists should not be printed and sold to any one who wanted to buy them. He had no objections to members of both parties getting them.

Mr. Mills read a despatch which was sent from Ottawa Thursday to the papers, and he saked if the Government would give any further information about the matter. The despatch is as follows:

These vessels were seized, it will be re-membred, while they were on the high seas, many miles from land, peacefully pur-suing the sealing business. They were tow-ed to Sitka, Alaska by the United States the Hilton.

The Minister of Marine said there had been considerable correspondence on this subject and much of it had already been published. Whether the Government were prepared to print any more of the correspondence was a question. Sir John Macdonald was not in the House when the request was made by Mr. Mills.

Tariff deputations continue to arrive at the Capital. The millers, 50 strong, were here yesterday from various parts of Ontario. These gentlemen represented $15,000,009 of capital invested in the milling business. Besides the deputation the House yesterday was flooded with petitions in furtherance of the millers prayers. These gentlemen, it will be remembered, were in session at Toronto the other day and they drew up a memorial, resolutions and arguments which were ably presented to the Government last evening.

The millers want the duty on flour ingreased from 50 cents to $1 per-barrel, or a reduction in the duty on wheat of 15 cents per bushel. They met $ir John Macdonald, Mr. Foster, Mr. Carling and Mr. Bowell in the Tower Room at 6.30 p.m. They were accompanied by fifteen members from constituencies principally in Western Ontario. Mr. M. McLaughlin of Toronto and Mr. Goo. Hilliard, ex.M.P., Peterboro, were the principal speakers in favor of the increase of the flour duty asked. There is a general impression that the Government will fiot concede the point though they may reduce the duty on wheat to 18 cents per bushel.

Number of Bills Advanced a Stage-Vita

TORONTO, Feb. 23.—The greater part of yesterday afternoon in the Legislature was occupied with discussing Mr. Whitney's bill respecting the action of seduction. The Attorney-General thought a new bill should be framed and Mr. Whitney intimated that he would consent to withdraw his measure.

Among these were Mr. McMahon's bill to facilitate the purchase of Toll Roads by Municipalities. It provides that the county council of any county or city council may appoint a board of commissioners to select such toll roads within their county or city as they may deem desirable to be purchased by the council they represent, for their management or control or for removing the tollw therefrom.

A lively discussion followed Mr. Garson's motion that his bill respecting the Examination of Engines and Inspection of Boilers's should be read a second time. The bill was finally passed through its second reading and referred to a special committee.

When Mr. Ferguson's bill to amend the Municipal Act was reached's good deal of opposition was raised to its second reading. Should this bill become law in all cases where arbitration is directed or permitted, the senior acting judge of a county shall,

He spoke of Mr. McGreggor, who was in his employ, as a first-class workmen, and, referring to the nine-hour system, he said he was in favor of this movement as he did not see why carpenters should work ten hours when the bricklayers were working only nine. He was convinced that men who knew that they only had nine hours to work and were getting ten hours' pay me out all right. He then called upon through many of the towns and cities of the States but had not met more earnest and intelligent men engaged in the labor movement then he had here. He intended to hew to the line and let the chips fall where they might. The very fact that trades unionism existed to-day was in his mind a conclusive argument that they were necessary. He spoke of the early days of unionism, and said head come to address them on a broader line than trade unionism, viz, fair play and equal rights to all men living. He referred to the argument to all men living. He referred to the arguments raised by those who did not go into the unions and said a trades union never forced to it. He said that trades unionism taught the principle that a man had his day's labor and had a right to go where he could get the best price for that labor, and heald that they objected not to immisgration. If good men wished to come to this country they would give them their hand and help them to get a fair wage, but they did not want to be taxed to bring paupers and criminals to compete with them. They asked no division of profits, but simply asked a fair share of those profits. He was a firm believer in Henry the speaker, three cheers were given for the Queen and the meeting adjourned. George and thought this principle of equity and justice between Jack and his master was a true one. He spoke of the ap-prenticeship system and said that this was as important as that of wages, for there had crept into their trade botch plug, hammer and saw men. Mr. Balla agreed with the Chairman in what he said in reference to the rapid growth of the movement. He believed in union, but he believed also in raising the tailon, but he believed also in raising that this movement was a selfish one. He had learned that the selfishness was to be with the people. In the days of the Saviour, He drove out the meney brokers from the temple, but in these days they were driving the workingman out of the Saviour, He drove out the meney brokers from the temple, but in these days they were driving the workingman out of the churches and nourishing the money brokers. They were twenty years behind the Old Country in this labor question. He found that a great amount of opposition came that a great amount of opposition came from the professional men. This class of men who worked about four hours a day, were the ones who were crying out." If the workingman get nine hours a daytemen would be to go quietly and steadily forward by getting well posted or well educated in the labor question and then they would be equal for any opponent. The nine-hour movement was not a conflict between capital and labor but a Christian movement.

Advice to Mothers.

Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup should always be used when children are cutting teeth. It relieves the little unforce at once; it produces natural, quiet sleep by relieving awakes as "bright as a button". It is very pleasant to taste. It soothes the child, softens the gums, allays all pain, relieves wind, rugulates the bowls, and is the best known remedy for diarrhea, whether arising from teetimg or other causes. Twenty-five cents a bottle, Be sure and ask for "Mrs. Winslow's Soothing yrup," and take no other kind:

BEAUTIFUL JIM.

By JOHN STRANGE WINTER. "That goes without saying," said Jim, oking at her.
Miss Earle suddenly became interested

Miss Earle suddinly became anterested in her ice plate.

"He is so glad to be going to the Blankshire regiment. He has always had a fancy for it, ever since he was a child. Father wanted him to go into the cavalry, because se many of the Earles have been cavalry soldiers"—it was really wonderful how fast Miss Earle was talking—"but Stuart worldn't; he had set his heart on belonging to the Blankshire regiment."

heart on belonging to the blanks-iment."

"I hope he'll like it when he gets there," Jim remarked; and surely never was a not-joined subsitern given so much importance before.

"Oh! I think he will—of course I asked the Adairs all about the regiment, and they say all sorts of pleasant things about you all. By the bye, Mr. Paunceforth is the one whom you call 'Beautiful Jim' here?"

here?"
Beautiful Jim's blue eyes opened rather widely at this, for he gathered that she had not grasped his name at Mrs. Seton's introduction—but before he could recover himself sufficiently to disclose his identity, Miss Earle went on speaking:
"Afleen tells me he is 'too charming, and that the name suits him well in spite of his being so ugly"
"Well, he is an ugly looking chap, not a doubt about that," said Jim, feeling the

"Well—er—I haven't seen him about," said Beautiful Jim, evasively.

information for the beneat or young Strart as possible.

"Yes, the fellows all like him pretty well, I fancy."

"And don't you?" she asked.

"Well, yes, Miss Earle. I.—I.—think old Jim's a—an uncommonly—he and I are the best of friends. All the same, I don't know that his nickname is any compliment either to his personal appearance or to his character. Most fancy names in ment ettier to his personal appearance or to his character. Most fancy names in the army are given in derision. It's only in fashionable novels that men are dubbed Venus or Adonis because they're so good looking. Probably your young brother, if he's anything like you, will find himself called Jacko, or Snubby, or some hideous name or other, just to protest against his being better looking than the majority of the others."

"Oh, I see—oh! there is Lady Margaret looking for me. I must go," in a regretful tone.

As she rose, he rose too. "You are are staying some little time. I shall look in at the Deanery on Saturday, unless"—in a joking tone—"you send me a post card and tell me not to come.

"Why should I do that?" in surprise.

"Oh, well—you might, you know," laughing as they moved toward the door.

"But if you don't do that, I shall come and look on at the tennia."

"And don't you play?"

"Oh, yes, on occasion; but sometimes one is better employed looking on."

He handed them into the carriage, which was waiting, and shut the door very carefully.

"I shall be charmed," returned Jim, with a look at Miss Earle, a look which reminded her of the post card suggestion, and made her wonder what he meant.

"Then good by. Good by;" and then the carriage rolled away, leaving him standing bareheaded in the sunshine looking after it.

"He is such a nice fellow," said Lady Margaret, after a minute or so. "Always just the same, just as pleasant and charming one time as another. He is charming in spite of his ugliness."

"Oh! Do you call kim ugly?" exclaimed Miss Earle, in surprise.

Lady Margaret laughed. "Well, I don't call him a beauty, certainly; but he is so nice in himself that you never notice his absence of good looks; all the same, it really is a shame of the others to give him such a name."

"What do they call him?" asked Miss Earle, wondering that while they were on

THE WAR OF TONGUES.

This Session of the Imperial Parliament to be the Fiercest on Record.

LONDON, Feb. 22.—It is universally admitted that the session of the House of Commons will be the fiercest on record. The Irish actions of the Government will be vigilantly watched. The proofam is approved by Mr. Gladstone Mr. Gladstone was enthusiatically cheered by the Opposition on entering the House. The Ministerialists cheered Mr. Ballour, while the Opposition hissed himand shouted "Pigott." Mr. Smith was similarly greeted.

In the House of Commons yesterday John Morley stated he would introduce an amendment to the address in reply to the Queen's speech, condemning the administration of the law in Ireland as harsh, unjust and oppressive, and asking that measures be adopted to content the Irish and re-establish a re-union of Great Britain.

Prince Bismarck's desire to avoid coloni-it toubles is due in a large measure to the encertainty of European politics, especially close of France. The Tirard Cabinetia re-garded as simply a short respite before the nevitable struggle.

The cross-examination of Pigott, however, is very far from being over. What Sir Charles Russell has done thus far is to exhibit Pigott as a witness whom no man can believe, as a creature entitled to nothing but contempt. Sir Charles has forced him to own that he lied to Archbishop Walsh, lied to Mr. Forster, lied to Mr. Egan, lied to Mr. Parnell, lied to the court, lied to everybody with whom he came in contact. He has forced him to own that both toward Mr. Egan and Mr. Forster he stood first in the relation of a beggar, then of a blackmailer. Mr. Forster's long suffering kindness to this 'mpudent impostor-might touch even Mr. Forster's would-be assassins.

The exposure of Pigott's affairs, had it been watchon, would have seemed cruel, so pitilessly was it pursued. But it bore strictly on the case. Its aim was to present Pigott, by the time he entered upon the Parnell factor business, as prepared by distress and by long practice in disgraceful arts for any safe crime. The suggestion that he forged the letters rests, so far, upon resemblances between Pigott's handwriting and the body of the forged letters, upon identical misspellings in Pigott's letters and in the forged letters, upon the cerurrence in the forged letters, of phrases, dates and sentences in genuine letters from Messrs. Parnell and Egan to Pigott. All this, and much else, has been brought out with lugennity, with dramatic effect, often with startling suddenmos, somotimes sternly, sometimes when the court was solemn as death, and moments when the judges themselves were convulsed with laughter.

Pigott announced himself as 54 years old when he averaged the witness, by Re the Parnell and Republicant.

Pigott announced himself as 54 years old when he entered the witness-box. By the time he left it on Friday he was certainly 64. He has two days more of this torture before him. It is an open question whether Sir Charles Russell will not in the end extract from him a public confession that he forged the letters. Confession is indeed Pigott's only visible chance of escape from procedution. If he explesses he may get a certificate of indemsity from the court. Escape he cannot. His every step is watched by detertives. Confession or suicide is the iternative that awaits him; and, as Webiter said, suicide is confession.

Far more important is the question what

Brain—Bis Farewell Letter.

Brantyper Jeb. 23.—J. R. Russell comy mitted suicide at an early hour this morning by shooting himself in the right temple. A dector was immediately summoned but nothing could be done to save him and he passed away about noon.

Decessed was a teacher by profession and in comfortable circumstances. His mother died a year ago, leaving him about $25,000. A short time ago he purchased A. Fair & Co.'s bankrupt stock of groceries and started in business. No cause can be assigned for the rash act unless that the business was not mesting his expectations. After breakfast he extered his bedroom and wrote this note on a piece of tea paper:

"Dean Wiff and Childrant Good-bye, meet me in the world where wouble is naver known and where Jesus Christ our Saviour, God our Father, and the Holy Spirit our Comforter, together with the pure through the blood of Christ will be our companions. Good-bye again, caser Annie, You have heer a good, noble wife and it is better that I should be a burden no longer.

J. R. Russell." ster said, suicide is confession.

Far more important is the question what course The Times will now take. As yet that paper is not called on to move. Proofs are still wanting; the case is incomplete. What is clear on present evidence is that the case of The Times against Mr. Parnell, so far as supported by the letters, rests upon Pigots and Pigot only. The conductors of that journal either share the general conviction that Pigott is the forger, or do not. If they do not, their incredulity is as remarkable as their credulity. If they do, or when they do, immediate acknowledgement is the first though least act of explation due from them to Mr. Parnell and to the public. G.W.S.

Pigets Not an Apossic Paul.

London, Feb. 24.—The Pall Mail Gazetie says: "Pigott has not proved to be an Apostic Paul. The dismay in Downingstreet must be only a degree less than that which prevails in The Times office. There is not a Tory to-day who is not feeling heartsick at the evidence of the witness on whose veracity and unimpeachable reputation The Times' case absolutely depends." The Gazetta points out that even the Unionist pap rs. The Telegraph and The Chronicle, admit that The Times' case has collapsed, The Chronicle even stating that everyone expected that Sir Charles Russell would apply to the court for Pigott's committal or detention. Continuing The Gazette says:

He leaves a wife and three children. FIRES OF ALDAY.

everyone expected that Sir Charles Russell would apply to the court for Pigott's committal or detention. Continuing The Gazette says:

"If the conviction has now slowly filtered into the minds of Mr. Webster and his staff that they have been cruelly heazed by an ingenious and resourceful blackmailer, the only course open to shim is to publicly own that they have been deceived and withdraw their allegatisms, offer the handsomest apology and pay the costs they have forced upon those whom they traduced on Pigott's authority."

The Star (Mr. T. P. O'Connor's paper), commenting on Pigott's evidence before the Parnell Commission, says: "The connection between The Times and the Government is two-fold. The Government created first the commission and second The Times case. If Attorney-General Webster had not been enabled to play the parts of prosecutor judge and framer of the indictment, there could have been no tribunal at all. If he had not assured Lord Salisbury that the letters would be proved to be genuine, the commission would not have been created and the Unionists would never have suffered such a blow as by their own piteous admissions awaits them. The Government chose the game, and it must-pay up sow. The price is the dissolution of Parlisment. We want to know what the country think of Pigott."

HOW OTHERS VIEW IT.

THERE is no mistake "on the other side" as to the drift of the resolution offered by Sir Richard Cartwright on the sabject of treaty making, says the Loudon Free Press, and of his speech thereon. When the greateman proke of the sack and ruinous condition of Canada by reason of her present relations with Great Britain, when he sneeringly alluded to her "tadpole state of existence," as one which it was desirable to alter, the intelligent journals of the United States understood at once the goal that his motion was designed to lead to. The New York Sun, commenting on this "interesting news from Canada," says:—

with flying colors so far as the main charges are concerned. While wolking along Linden-street, Mrs. O'Brien, 88 Huntley-street, was robbed of an atchel containing $4, and some stamps on Saturday night. William Austin, Brampton, is a prisoner at Headquarters, charged with obtaining two horses from William Mortson and W. B. Turner by fraud.

Robert Rankin is a man of about 40 years of age who boards at 8 Queen-street east and is deeply attached to a young lady of the Model Lodging House. Yesterday he had a roll of bills, about $365, and made a bold display of it. He was found at the corner of Windsor and Front-streets with his oranium badly damaged and his $365 gone. His story is that he was streaked by two footpads who knocked him down and robbed him. An oak cudgel was left behind by the pads and Detective Cuddy is working up the case.

"It is a striking sign of the drift of feeling in the Dominion that the Canadian Liberals should now propose to caunder the the last tie connecting their country to Great Britain. That is the purport of the motion sanctioned by a caucus of the Liberal members of the Ottawa Parliament, and committed to the advocacy of Sir Richard Cartwright."

Our contemporary goes on to remark:—
"How would the Dominion use the treaty-marking power. should it ever be conceded to her by the Mother Country. She would, provided the Liberals were in power at Ottaga, probably invite the United States to conclude a treaty based upon the principle of complete, reciprocity with regard, as wall to manufactured as to natural products. Suppose, however, that we should deeline to enter into such an agreement on the ground that a free intershange of products is one of the privileges reserved for States which are members of our Union, would not, then, the feeling excited in Canada in favor of acquiring the treaty-marking function and of employing it to effect commercial union with the United States Lead to transform itself into a vetement impulse towards annexation?"

The New York Press, in an article on the "Future of Canada," draws the same inference from the speech of Sir Richard, as a follows:—

Statises—tend to transform itself into a vehement impulse towards amarcation?"

The New York Press, in an article on the "Future of Canada," draws the aame interence from the speech of Sir Richard, as as follows:—

"Sir Richard Cartwright's speech in the Canadian Parliament was in form a plea for the commercial independence of Canada, but the real meaning of his argument was that the time for poining the United States has come."

And the New York paper in question, further reasoning from the speech of Sir Richard, argues that "Canada must face the annexation question."

The London Times, also discussing the resolution, says that. "it is either insufficient or superfluous," and argues that Sir Richard has sought by a side wind to raise the question of separation, which is but another name for annexation. The Times adds that England has every desire to consult the wishes of Canada, and though Canada has her destities in her own hands England cannot believe that Canadians berter to severe the connection. The Times therefore urges its Canadian brethren not lightly to raise questions which would tend to carry them a givent that Canadians desire to severe the connection. Brain Weight of Boys and Girls.

In the final result of the comparison of the two sexes in the human race, anatomical researches will form an important factor. Many anatomists have recognized this fact, and have firstituted comparisons between the sexes from various points of view. M. Gustave le Bon reviews the work of M. Manouvier and that of M. Budin, both of whom aver that "sex has no influence on brain weight. With them the influence of beight; and if the females, as a whole, exceed the males in brain weight, it is simply because the weight of the body in the females is much below that of the males." M. 'e Bon puts the theory of his adversaries to the test in a very ingenious manner by comparing the brains of males and females having about the same weight. By this investigation it is shown that in the great majority of cases the male children surpass the females of the same weight in their cranial circumference. At the same age, height, and weight of body, the female brain is notably smiller than that of the male.—Herald of Health. Brain Weight of Boys and Girls.

THEY HELD WATER

How the Tables Were Turned On a Minister Fond of Fishing.

"Modern conveniences," in case of accident, often cause more trouble than the want of them. Here is a ludicrous example that illustrates it—or at least it shows that people who wade in rubber pantaloous must keep right side up. The Harrisburg (Pa). Telegraph tells the story at the expense of a well known minister who is very fond of trout fishing:

A friend made him a present of rubber trousers, attached to which were heavy boots, the whole arrangement forming one piece. He waded in the streams and fished, and guyed the other fishermen who didn't own gun trousers, and had lots of sport.

At night, when they came in tired and hungry, the dominie would be nice and dry, while the other fellows would be more or less wet, according to their mishaps, and, of course, would be chaffed by the minister.

One morning they were all standing on the bank, watching him wading in deep water, and envying him, when all of a sudden he stepped on a slippery stone, his feet went up, and he went in ever head.

They fished him out, and found he welghed about a ton, the water having filled up his boots and trousers to the waist. The funny pairt of it was that they couldn't pull off the combined boots and trousers, and so they had to stand him on his head against a tree until the water all ran out.

Farmers' Institute Meeting.
Owing to a letter received from the Agri ouitural College a change had to be made in the arrangements for the next meeting of the West Peterborough Farmers' Insti-tute. The next meeting will be held at tute. The next meeting will be held at Lakefield on March 13th, at which papers will be read by Messrs. J. Coyle Brown, Geo. Hilliard, A. R. Stephenson, V. On March 25th a meeting will be held in Peterborough, which will be attended by Prof. Saunders, of the Dominion Experimental Farm, and Prof. Robertson, of the Guelp h Agricultural Gollege.

An Ottawa Deputation.

It is probable that the matter of sending deputation of Councillors to Ottawa to interview the Government and urge upon the claims of Peterborough to a grant for a new drill shed will come up for dis-cussion at the Council's meeting to-night. The Finance Committee, which had the matter to consider and report on, will it is uncerstood report favorably on the peti-tion of the military men asking for the deputation. A meeting of the Collegiate Institute Literary Society was held on Friday afternoon in the Institute building. Mr. W. Wall-brook, Vice-President, was in the chair. The first on the programme was a reading by Miss A. Wills, and the next a reading by Mr. M. McDonnell. A debate then took place on "Resolved, that good character tends more to success in life than wealth." The affirmative was taken by the Misses S. and L. Best and the negative by Messrs. J. Bradley and E. Lang. The supporters of the negative were declared the winners. Miss E. Brown then gave a reading. He believes to the cityersity of doctrines in the churches, and said there was only one church where there was no diversity of views, but he thought there could never be a live church without this diversity of views and he regarded them, not as an ominious sign, but as an evidence of vitality, attended with good results. In closing he said he feit he would be unworthy of his position if he did not seek to impress upoh their minds that the great principle of God was not that men should be members of any organization alone, but that they should realize that they were members of the great brotherhood of man.

A Sunday Night Rew.

Last night about ten o'clock Constable
Stewart was called into the C.P.R. hotel, on Simcos st. by a row that was in progress in the bar. He arrested a man, who is a stranger in town and not a resident, as a stranger in town and not a resident, as the leader of the disturbance and locked him up. The fellow, who was pretty well infoxicated, was bleeding from an ugly wound in his head which had the appearance of having been made with a broken bottle. Doctor Clarke was called in and, after probing the gash for broken glass, put a couple of stitches in the cut. The man was brought up before Magistrate this morning, but the case was enlarged until to-morrow morning, when some further developments may be brought out in connection with the case. In the meantime the man with the broken head was allowed out on his own promise to appear to-morrow morning.

Pigeon Shooting.

The sporting community is slightly agitated by the introduction into the House of Cammons, Ottawa, of a bill to make further provisions as to the prevention of cruelty to animals, which will put a stop to bird shooting from traps. Petitions are being signed against the bill, protesting: "That such shooting is a manily sport and unaccompanied with cruelty. That it is to the interest of those shooting not to wound their birds, but is kill them, so that they may fall within certain prescribed bounds. They deny indignantly the rumor that pigeons are blinded before being put into the trap, and they contend that pigeonshooting has been in the past, and is to-day, a healthy manily sport which should not be classed in the category of cruelty to animals."

The Champtone' Trophy.

The Champtons' Trophy.
On Saturday Mr. J. Phelan, the Secretary on set week here, Rev. S. J. Shorey yesterday morning made a very timely remark to his congregation which will apply to all shureh goers. He told his congregation that he heped they would not run away from their church on Sundays during the evangelistic services. He was not speaking from a selfish standpoint, but he wished to point out to them that the churches where the services would be held would be found too small and the church goers should attend their own church and in this way further the glorious end and object of the evangelistic work, by allowing them to reach the class who most need the preaching. They would have plenty of opportunity to hear Crossley and Hunter during the week as they were to hold services every night.

The ice of ceremony being thus broken, the sociable barbarians became quite friendly, and displayed for our admiration their weapons and ornaments of which they are evidently very proud. I notice that every man wears at his neck a large round pebble, very neatly hollowed out with no better implement than the point of a spear; and this, I am told, is used to hold smuff, which is quite a passion with the Zulus, who often halt to take a pinch, even in the heat of a battle. But the bone spoon with which the smuff is taken is stuck through their woolly hair, these simple children of nature having no pocket in which to carry is.—David Ker in The Cosmopolitan.

There is some talk—not of a very definite kind as yet—of some of the great newspaper establishments turning a part of their surplus energy and capacities in the direction of monthly issues of a literary and popular character, and as the boundary between the "blanket sheet" newspaper and the magazine is continually narrowing, the existence of this trade goes is not a surprise.—Curreco Literature.

The Mississippi Dector's Error.

Two agents for a new kind of churn came to the house of Dr. L—, of Panola county, Miss., in the evening, and were invited to spend the night. While one was caring for the horses the doctor, conversing with the other, found the men were from a place where he had practiced medicine in his youth. Inquiring about different persons, he at length saked: "And the Misses Brown, where are they! They were without doubt the most ugly women I ever saw."

"Yes," said the agent.

"What became of them?"

"One is my wife."

There was silence.

"Yes."

BEAUTIFUL JIM.

CHAPTER III.

A DEAR LITTLE WOMAN.

For a moment Nancy Earle felt as if she was going to hoke. Then a mist came in front of her eyes, and carriage coachman, footman Lady Margaret, and sverything began to turn slowly round. These few minutes seemed like hours, yet have could only have been minutes, and very few of them, for when she came to her right senses again, Lady Margaret was talking placidly on, and Beautiful Jun, was the subject of conversation.

As in duty bound, she crept into Aileer's darkened room to inquire how the bear's darkened room to inquire how the state along the door behind her and holding up a warning finger to Lady Marserst, who had come on the same errand. "She is fast asleep, "she whispered. "Then it is all right." Lady Margaret whispered back. "When once Aileen talls asleep the headache is cured."

Then they parted—the lady of the house going to her ownroom, the guest to hers. She turned the key in the lock and sat down by the open window to think. The evening, sainshine streamed down upon the great elms in the Deanery close; the lackdews flying about the tall towers of "The Parish" (as they called the cathedral in Blankhampton) called incessantly "Jak, jak;" the voices of some children playing on the sward below rose up to her; and a little further on there were two dogs snarling over a bone. Generally Nancy Earle watched children and dogs and jackdaws with delight, but on that evening she took no head of them at all. Her mind was fully taken up by trying to remember what she should do.

It was but little use trying to lessen the enormity of her idiotic blunder, in trying to think what she should do. It was but little use trying to lessen the enormity of her idiotic blunder, in trying to enaming, and that the name, suits him well in spice of his being so ugly."

the enormity of her idiotic blunder, in trying to minimize the meaning of her words. They seemed to stand out before her in letters of fire—"Alleen tells me he is too charming, and that the name, suits him well in spite of his being so ugly." Yes, that was what she had said—"they steed the had been to say it. What a foolehe had been to say it. What a foolehe had been to say it. What a foolehe had been to say such a thing of one officer of a regiment to another! Why, supposing that his name really had been Paunceforth, and Beautiful Jim guite another person, still he might have been his best friend, in which case he would have resented it far worse than he had done for himself. Oh, fool, fool, has she had been!

And what should she, nay, could she do? For it was not only herself whom she had involved by her stupid and thoughtless hunder, but also her friend, Alleen Adair. Ohl what must she do for the best?

She did not find the question by any means an easy one to solve, and while she was trying to do so, she perhaps not unnaturally found herself thinking about "Partiful Jim" himself. How well he is aken it, how pleasantly he had passed it off, and how delicately he had conveyed to her that if she did not like to meet him a terward she could just send him a post can't to say he was not to come to the tennis party on the following Saturday. What a fine fellow he was in every way, and how fervently did she wish that an unucky fate had never led her into making those unfortunate remarks. However, dinner time came, and still she liad not solved the problem of getting over the simulate os something—yet what?"

At last, however, she decided that it would be best to write to him—and—and say—well, to be accurate, she did not know what to say hex if yet of her writing case and began to write—which was quite-easy et first for she got as far as "Blankhampton Deanery, July 5.—My dear Mr. Bereserd," without any difficulty whatever, flut after that she came to a standstilland did not know what to say next. What could she say?

which she thought would do. It ran thus:

"My Dear Mr. Berespord—I feel I must write you a line to say how sorry I am for the stupid mistake I made today. If it was not that, by my thoughtlessness, I have involved Miss Adair in my folly, I should just go home by the earliest train to morrow. But I can't go away and leave her to bear the brunt of my utter foolishness; so I can only ask you to forgive me, and to try to forget that I over said what I did. I am so sorry I can't say more. Your very apologetic NANCY EARLE."

Be Earls read this effusion over, and thou it it would do as well as anything she would be able to concect; then, woman like, she added a postscript; and, woman like, ashe added a postscript; and, woman like, ashe added a postscript; and, woman like, ashe added a postscript; and, woman like, the postscript contained the shele sait and savor of the letter.

"P.S.—After all, it is pretty good proof that I didn't see much amiss with your local and the shele and the surface of the letter.

"You mean La Hunta,' replied his friend.

That is a Spanish name, and in that language 'J' takes the sound of 'H.'' "Is that so! Well, I must try to catch on to that.' After strolling along a short distance further he asked:

"Where are the caves of Le Jolla, which I see so much about in the papers!

"You should say La Hoya caves. They are about three miles this side of San Diego."

"Darn the language; it breaks me all up. That's a pretty nice house over there—that's Armijo's house, isn't it? And again he gave the 'J' it's proper pronunciation.

"You mean the Armeho house, Yes; it's a good one, too."

"Damsicha way of abusing the English alphabet. I reckon, then, that must be Hevane's store which I stopped at in Los Angeles?"

"No, that is not a Spanish name. I think

"'No, that is not a Spanish name. I think it is French. However, it is pronounced as spelled, Jevene.'
"'Well, how in Santa Fe is a fellow going to tell what is Spanish and what isn't? Why souldn't they build their language on the original plan?
"'Oh, you'll soon catch it. You will find it safest to give the Spanish pronunciation to nearly everything here.
"An hour later he sat down at the table of the elegantly furnished Carlton hotel, and, after scanning the bill of fare, the stranger aid to the waiter:
"You may bring me a nice huicy piece of roast beef, some pig's howl with caper sauce, some fricasseed hack rabbit, some pork with apple helly, some boiled potatoes with currant ja—I mean currant ham, and, ah, some'— rant ja—I mean currant han, and, and, some'—

"At this point the waiter swooned and the guests in the room let out a roar of laughter that gave the chandeliers the chills and fever. This made the stranger mad, and he leaped to his feet like a crazy man, took off his coat and threw it down on the floor, stamped on trand howled:

""You fellows are trying to play me for a sucker, but, by the eternal, you have struck the wrong sing. I am a disguised cyclone from Illinoy and can lick the whole growd. Spanish! I can elling more Spanish in a holy minute than Montesuma could in a whole year. Let some idiot pull off his hacket and hump into me, and the first time I hit him.

year. Let some idiot pull off his hacket and hump into me, and the first time I hit him he will think he has the himhams. Spanish Myname is Jeremi—I mean Heremiah Hoses, from Hacksonville, Illinoy, and whefi my dander's up I'm a ravin' hyens. You played me for a sucker, but you musn't hudge a man by his looks. Whoop! go round the hubiles. Somebody, come out and face me. Let some himcrow galoot come to the front and criticise my Spanish hargon.'

"His friends got hold of him and took him from the room, and as he went through the door h remarked:

"I can take a hoke, but it makes me mad for a lot of hackasses to play me for a greeny.'"—Cleveland Leader.

TUESDAY, FEBRUARY 26, 1889. TOPICS FROM THE CAPITAL

WHAT THE DOMINION LAWMAKERS DID YESTERDAY.

Creelty to Animais Act.

OTTAWA, Feb. 26.—The House divided yesterday on the third reading of Mr. Shanly's bill to incorporate the Alberta Railway and Coal Company. This is Sir Alexander Galt's company and is destined to develop the coal fields of the Lethbridge district. Mr. Watson of Marqueste wanted a clause inserted providing that the maximum rate of coal freights should not exceed one cent per ton per mile. The House defeated the amendment by a vote of 97 to 49 and the bill was read a third time. So was Mr. Mara's bill respecting the Kootenay and Athabasca Railway Company, a British Columbia enterprise.

Col. Amyot, in a speech occupying four hours, charged that the Quebec Voltigeurs were badly used after they were called out to suppress the rebellion. The Minister of Militia in reply said the regiment was as well treated as any other.

On the second reading of a private hill respecting Queen's College, Kingston, Mr. Mills of Bothwell raised the question of jurisdation. The bill-was in the line of amending an act passed by the Dominion Parliament conference certain additional powers in the election of trusters for Queen's beyond those given by its Royal Charter, Mr. Mills said that it being a question of education was within the purview of the Ontario Assembly.

Mr. Kirkpatrick said Queen's was a seat-influences and was—therefore not confined in its operations to the province. Sir John Macdonald remarked that if this Parliament had the power to pass a former act pertaining to Queen's it had the power to amend it. He recommended that the bill be read a second time pro forma and that after the Private Bills Committee had dealt with it, the question of jurisdiction could be dealt with by the Hones. This was agreed to after considerable discussion.

Mr. Mulock, when the bill authorizing the Ontario Loan and Debenture Company to consolidate its borrowing powers and to issue debenture stock was called up, said that it would be a good thing if the Government would introduce some general legislation dealing with loan companies. He called the stention of the House to the necessities which led up to the banking act, which was put upon the statute book to avoid the necessity of banks having to come down to Parliament for these special acts.

treal, Hamilton and Torento, against Adam Brown's anti-cruelty to animals bill. Pett-tions in f. vor were also presented. It is pretty certain that the bill will be slaughter-ed in committee of the whole.

The House adjourned at 11.50. To Codify the Timber Laws.

OTTAWA, Feb. 25.—The Minister of Inland Revenue will move the House into committee on Wednesday on his resolution in favor of assimilating and codifying the laws of the different provinces relating to the inspection, culling and measurement of timber and lumber. The resolution provides for the payment of inspectors as the rate of $10 per day and none exceeding $300 in any one year to each inspector, and of an annual salary not exceeding $200 to each chief inspector; that the manufacturer of timber or lumber shall pay to the Crown an annual registration fee of $2 if his annual output is less than 1,000,000 fees board measure and of $10 when such output is greater, and in addition one-fifth of a cent for each chousand feet board measure, one-tenth of a cent for each are of 40 cubic feet of square timber; that as respects the Provinces of Ontario and Quebec out of the sum so paid and any moneys granted by Parliament the Governor-in-Council may grant annuties not exceeding $200 to such cullers as are now in receipt of a like annuity or who are discharred.

dishonored life to a deathwhich the inexorable decree honor seemed to demand? What if she loved the Crown Prince and not Rudolt the man? Doubting and yet hating and despising himself for the doubt, the Crown Prince hastened to the rendezvous, where his doubts were set at rest by the baroness, who told him that, having given all that makes life-dear and desirable for love, it would be better now o die for it. Happy in the belief of the baroness disinteredness, the prince had for each and everyone kind words. Then the myssorious letters to Herr Szoegyuenyn were written; letters in which he conjured his faithful friend to put his papers in order, to watch and guard over them that posterity might judge aright Rudolf of Hapaburg. Perplexed and half distracted, the trusted Geheime Rath came up from Buda-Peath on the Saturday preceding the fatal Tuesday night, and found the young prince at a table in his wing of althe Burg, surrounded by a merry company. With a load of anxiety and dark forebodings lifted off his mind, the old Hungarian congratulated his young friend upon his splendid appearance and high spirits, but Rudolf laughingly replied: "Don't flatter me Szoegyemi. Go and pay court to the duko of Este, for you must know that Franz Ferdinard will be kaleer, not L."

On Sunday night the lovers left the ball at the German embassy together. The whoide had been determined upon. That night in the cold, clear moonlight together they traversed the ghostly shadows of the beautiful Weiner Wald in an open air carriage. Early in the morning they reached the priory of Meyerling, which there years before the prince had bought from the monks of Heiligen Kreux, and, save by the servants, they were never seen again in life. Count Hoyos and the Duke of Cobourg, his friends and confidants, watched at Baden on the Meyerling road to guard against interruption from the direction of the court.

What happened between this time and Wednesday night, no one knows with čer.

PORT HOPS, Feb. 26.—On Saturday evening the dwelling of Mr. Henry Rowe, Lot 26. Tomship of Hamilton, Cobourg-road, was with all the contents totally destroyed. Mr. Rowe, who lives alone, had just retained from Port Hope, made a fire in the stove and then stepped over to Mr. Burnham's, a neighbor. The fire had made such head way when discovered that it was impossible to save anything. No insurance.

MOUNT FOREST, Feb. 23.—A smash-up on the Teeswater branch of the Canadian Pacific railway occurred at this point at 2 o'clock on Sunday morning, owing to the heavy snow-atorm. The trans from the east consisting of two engines, van, and first and second coaches had orders to cross the plow and two engines here. The rails had apparently spread at the awitches, allowing the tender to jump the track, the two engines breaking loose. The baggage car struck the tank, damaging it, and the coaches following. Mt the rails and seattered all over the place. The two engines which broke loose kept on, and ran for a mile and a quarter at a great speed, and finally stuck in a snow derit. The plow from Teeswater with two engines ran into them, completely wrecking the four engines, and knocking the plow into kindling wood. Fortunately no lives were lost.

THANKS FOR DELIVERANCE.

MOUNT FOREST, Feb. 24.—Before the singing of the closing lymn at St. Paul's church to-night the congregation rose in response to the invitation of Rev. Edwin Radeliffe and ang the Doxology as a token of thankfulness to Almighty God for the preservation of passengers and trainmen from death and serious injury in the accident of this (early) morning on the C. Griss Mill Barnt at Milton.
Mittook, Feb. 25.—At about 10.30 on Saturday night fire was discovered in the steam grist mill, a large frame building. The fire had got such headway that it was impossible to do more than keep it from the adjacent frame buildings, with which the mill was nearly surrounded. The mill was owned by John Shaw of Toronto, was leased and run by Q. K. Stewart, who had lately got in new machinery and made other important improvements. Estimated loss $7000, insured for $8000.

MR. STRATTON'S CONTEMPT FOR THE LAW.

REV. WASHINGTON GLADDEN, in an article in the Century Magazine, argues that it is monstrous that a man who violated the law of a country should be permitted to take a part in making its laws. Mr. Gladden refers to voters, but in this constituency there is, not simply a veter, but a member of the Legislature who appears to hold the law of the Province in contempt and who acts as if he felt in no way bound to respect them.

The REVIEW has before referred to Mr.

The REVIEW has before referred to Mr. J. B. Stratton's disregard of the school law in serving the Board of Education for remuneration while a member of that body. In doing so he has grossly violated the plain provisions of the statutes. But that does not seem to have been appoint. does not seem to have been enough, for he has addressed an insulting proposal to teachers of the county, in which he offers them inducements to place themselves in a n similar to his own as a lawbreak-

Why should a man mark a business announcement private, if there was nothing in it that he was ashamed to have known? It looks singular on the face of it, but when the circular is perused further the reason for this unusual caution

"I also wish to intimate that I shall be pleased to receive for publication, in the Weekly Examiner, copies of your monthly school reports, and that I am prepared to give a special discount to teachers purchasing books, stationery, etc., at the Peterborough Book and Stationery Store."

Now, this offer, if unattended by any timest en improper requests, would be

William Austen and John Green were charged with obtaining horses from farmers by fraud. The scheme was to give the farmers checks for the horses and when presented there were no funds at the bank. The horses were taken to a distant part of the country and sold. In this manner the prisoners—succeeded in swindling a couple of farmers. Both of them were remanded.

Emma Armstrong was charged a few days ago by her husband, James Armstrong, with being insane. She was able to disprove the charge, and yesterday she appeared to answer a charge of threatening to kill "her Jimmy." When the case was called James dashed into the witnessbox, and without waiting to be sworn took from the folds of a newspaper a formidable-looking butcher's knife, and declared that the wire of his bosom had threatened to "gut him" with it. When he had taken the oath and came to be cross-examined a different complexion was given to the case although there is no doubt Emma had threatened him. it. When he had taken the oath and came to be cross-examined a different complexion was given to the case although there is no doubt Emma had threatened him. "Will you take her back to live with you?" asked Mr. Murdock, who appeared for the wife. "Will the court be responsible for my life if anything happens to me?" was the query of the complair—nt, and the court laughed. "Will the court be responsible for that man," demanded Mr. Armstrong, and the court not knowing the man declined responsibility. The wife was then bound over in her own recognizance to keep the peace towards her lord and James was charged with an agravated assult on his wife. The Bench had seen the terrible black-we she had when up on a charge of insanity, and the evidence given against the husband by Mrs. Armstrong and her daughter, a sharp, intelligent girl, disclosed a state of affairs sufficient to drive any woman insane. Mrs. Armstrong said there would be way over the case. Armstrong called witnesses on his behalf, which only strengthened the wife's charges, and eventually, as suggested by Mr. Mudoch, the husband was convicted, and bound over to some up for sentence when called upon.

The Police Magistrate yesterday committed Richard Cole for trial on a charge of bigamy. He married Christina S. Chambers at St. John's, Quebec, Jan., 1886, under the pretence that he was a widower. His former wife, whom he married in Woolwich, Eng., is now in Boston.

In the Chancery Divisional Court yesterday the case of Kelly v. Wade, a cause celebre in Western Ontario, was taken up. This case was tried at Brantford at the last assizes before Judge MacMahon and a jury and resulted in a verdict for the plaintiff for $2500. The action is a most peculiar one and is brought against the plaintiffs husband Robert S. Kelly, her own sister Sarah Clark, her adopted daughter Hudala and her husband F. haund Wade. From the evidence it appeared that the plaintiff, in order to regain her husband's affections, he having ceased to live with her for some time, feigned insanity. Provious to this, it is alleged, that she had shown considerable signs of mental aberration for sorre time, the insanity taking the pseculiar forable of "whacking" her husband over the head with a poker, and on one occasion in 1881, it is alleged on his behalf, she plentifully sprinkled one very necessary garment of his with castor oil. Counter charges are made of alleged improper conduct by the husband with her own sister. From Nov. 27, 1886, until July 24, 1888, the plaintiff was confined in the Toronto and Hamilton lunsate asylums through the action of her friends and against whom the present suit is brought for false imprisonment. At the trial Edmund and Huldala Wade were released from liability, and the present motion is to set aside the verdiet given against the other defendant.

MR. CHILDS AND THE JOURNALIST. uniter Incident That Kept Mr. Child

A good story is going the rounds of the hotels and cafes up town about a young journalist's peculiar experience with Mr. G. W. Childs, of Philadelphia. It is said to be true and has not been printed. The journalist was in a financial condition bordering on bankrupter. His assets, when duly investigations of the property of the prope was in a financial condution bordering us-bankruptey. His assets, when duly inven-torled, amounted to one dime. Only one man in the city owed him money, and his ambition was to make the ten cents pay the car fare until the debtor was reached. It was a

For this reason the journalist clad himself in his finest suit of clothes, wore a beaver hat, kid gloves, patent leather shoes, and carried a silver headed came. He shoes, and carried a silver headed cane. He got on the Sixth elevated down town, paying half of all husdancial possession for the fare. In the car he sat opposite George W. Childs, the well known philanthropist. Just before reaching the Twenty-third street station Mr. Childs took out a roll of bank bills, put several large bills in an envelope and placed it back in his coat pocket. The train stopped, Mr. Childs arose with the bank bills in his right hand, walked out on the platform and then showed the bills, as he thought, into his inside coat pocket. They missed the pocket and fell to the floor.

Charlie Smiley is full of stories. He tellsone of a street gamin who held out his ragged cap before Lord Randolph Churchill and Sir Charles Beresford as they came slowly down the steps of a London club. "What are you begging for, boy!" asked Beresford, as he noticed the little fellow. The boy said he had nothing else to do. "See here," said Lord Randolph. "if you'll take that stone and hit that policeman in the back of the head I'll give you half a crown." Nothing loath the boy picked up the stone and let her go. His aim was true and the "bobby" turned in wrath, chased the gamin and captured him. Shaking him savagely he demanded why he should insult the majesty of the law, as represented in his person, so grossly. The boy whined that the two gentlemen, who were looking on very much amused, had offered him half a crown to do it, and he would give him one and six of tif if he would release him. Dragging the boy up to the two men he demanded to know what they meant, and asked their names. Sir Charles Beresford handed the "bobby" his card. When be read it he humbly touched his hat and begged pardon. Then he asked Sir Randolph Churchill's name. He, too. his card. When beread it he humbly touched his hat and begged pardon. Then he asked Sir Randolph Churchill's mame. He, too, handed his card, and its perusal had the same effect. "You great gents must have your rarks," he said, touching his helmet. "Now, sir," he said, turning to the gamin, "what's your name?" The boy looked up at him, giter eyeing the great men, and said, sticking his thumbs in the armholes of his ragged yest, "I'm Lord Salisbury."—Chicago Herald.

The business office is a fine roomy one, fitted up nicely with an elegantly finished centre of antique oak, with desks and other office fittings of the same materials. This public office and the local agent's partment open from the half and from ither access is gained to Mr. Morrison's first-class style with an eye to the convenience of a business man. Mr. Geo. A. Morrison has, during the past ten years, made rapid progress in insurance work, having risen from an agent in the field to the position of manager for Eastern On-tario of the Manufacturers Life and Accident Insurance Companies, and has Accident insurance Companies, and has under his supervision over forty general agents and one inspector. His agency is one of the most important in Canada and is well looked after and superintended in his hands. Undoubtedly one of the secrets of Mr. Morrison's success is his great confidence in the value of advertising, for heavy has gift to be not the most extensive may be said to be one of the most extensive and systematic advertisers between Toron-

Your Committee would also recommend that the petition of John Gamble be referred to the Town Solicitor to report to the Council bis opinion on the law.

All of which is respectfully submitted,

R. S. Davidson, Chairman.

THE DRILE SHED. Counciller E. H. D. HALL thought that it would be fruitless to send a deputation to Ottawa in reference to the procuring of a grant for a drill shed here until the town had decided what amount they would con-tribute towards the erection of the building. He was in favor of the volunteers get-ting their drill shed, but nothing would be gained by the expense of the deputation, and he moved that the clause of the report favoring the deputation be struck out. Councillor CAHILL thought the volun-teers should have a new drill shed, as the present one was not a credit to the Gov-

A SPECIAL CENSUS.

The count took recess for half an hour, at expiration of which time if Pigott does not appear his papers at the hotel will probably be seized.

Several Councillors objected to the motion

Councillor Langford said that if census was taken they would be able to issue more hotel licenses for one thing. Councilor Dawson was surprised at Councillor Kendry seconding a motion to increase the number of hotels. If that was all the census would do he did not see any sired to shut out outside horses from ent. cessity for it. Councillor KENDRY said he would withticable and expedient. In speaking to his motion Councillor DAYIDSON said that according to the stat-utes the Sinking Fund had to be equal to the amount of debentures for the time the had to run and in the case of Peterborough where $20,000 was issued at four per cent the Sinking Fund would be equal to the in terest, which was a hardship on the rate payers considering that the town was in such a good financial condition, and they should ask the Government to give a special legislation so that the town would be call legislation so that the town would be

By JOHN STRANGE WINTER.

As reading this production over, Miss

When she had read the letter again and door which led into the close, slipped of the house and went quickly along road to where a post box was let into Fortunately not a soul saw her, and she

Meantime a postman had come along the abag and had cleared the box, so

In due time it was sorted out from nong its fellows and tossed on to the sap for the infantry barracks. And beres it had waited very long the post roboral made his appearance, and after urning the heap over again, tumbled it to a bag and carried it off on another age.

So in time it fell into the hands of its owner—"J. Beresford, Esq., Infantry Barracks, Blankhampton"—and Beautiful Jim opened it.

He read it with surprise—surprise so intense that several of the fellows who had been lottering about on the lookout for the post corporal noticed it.

"Halloo; old chap, that letter seems to be a sort of surprise to you," one laughed. "Is it an offer? What's the bid for, Beautiful Jim?"

THE DEANERY TENNIS PARTY.
out 5 o'clock on Saturday afterneamery Tennis was in full swing handsome dean, looking as good

The handsome dean, looking as good as he was high—and he was not a small man—stood chatting with a couple of parsons, and Lady Margaret, fresh and buxom, set under a tree with Mrs. Trafford, who, by the by, was thinking of leaving Plank-hampton, and indeed had been thinking of it for some time.

'Who is that girl standing near your daughter?' Mrs. Trafford asked.

'That is Miss Earle, an old friend of Alleen's, 'Lady Margaret replied.

'Ah, yes. Is she not very pretty?'

'Very pretty,' said Lady Margaret; 'and a remarkably nice girl in every way. By the bye, her young brother, Stuart, is just gazetted to the Blankshire regiment.''

From that they passed on to other topics of conversation, the Blankshire regiment among others, and presently two of its officers came from the house toward them. Beautiful Jim was one.

'Are you not going to play, Mr. Beresford?'' Lady Margaret asked.

'Not today, Lady Margaret, thanks. I will look on and make myself useful,' he answered.

"Very well. Will you have some teat.

"Not today, Lady Margaret, thanks. I will look on and make myself useful," he answered.

"Very well. Will you have some tea? or there is some cup on that table?"

"Many thanks. I will help myself to a cup presently," he said, and then some fresh arrivals came to take Lady Margaret's attention, and he was able to a laway toward Nancy Earle's chair.

"Good afternoon, Miss Earle," he began. "Not playing today?

"I do not often play," she answered, turning a fine scarlet from chin to brow. "There seems no time for tennis in town—or, at least, I do not find that there is."

"Yes; and during the time when you can play tennis in town, there is always such a rush of other things do do."

"Yes, just so; and however much they bore you, you have to do them all the same," replied Miss Earle, keeping her attention well fixed on the tennis players. For a few minutes this highly uncomfortable and unsatisfactory state of stilled stiffness continued. Then Beautiful Jim played a bold stroke that they might get out of it, and at the same time into a less prominent position." "Don't you think, Miss Earle," he said.

played a bold stroke that they might get out of it, and at the same time into a less prominent position.

"Don't you think, Miss Earle," he said, in a semi-reflective tone, "that we should get a much more comprehensive view of the play from the terrace?"

Miss Earle looked round at the terrace and admitted that it wouldn't be half bad up there. So they abaddoned the chairs under the big tree and betook themselves to the terrace, whence they could command a good view of the tennis courts, and consequently of players and play.

There were some basket work Hurlingham chairs on the terrace, and Miss Earle settled herself into one of them with a desperate kind of feeling that she would have to hear what Beautiful Jim should choose to say about the letter she had sent him, and that the sconer he began the sooner it would be over. After all, this Reautiful Jim was a gentleman, and had before shown himself to be a man of very delicate care for the feelings of cenera. So there was really but little to be afraid of; certainly he would say nothing disagreeable, and yet, as she settled herself in the Hurlingham, she could not help wishing devoutly that it was at that moment big emough to bury her.

But Beautiful Jim seemed in no hurry to begin discussing the mistake of the previous Tuesday. He talked a good deal, far more than she did, but he did not mention that subject, nor, in fact, did he even seem to be thinking about it. He told her a good deal about the reglment and a good deal about the reglment and a good deal about the consins and his five days in town, and he contrived, too, to tell her a good deal about himself; but he never in any way approached the subject of her letter or her unfortunate slip. At last, it would be difficult to say exactly how, Miss Earle gathered that Beautiful Jim had not the very smallest intention of mentioning the letter or her mistake at all. Somehow, the knowledge seemed to make her grow hot and cold all in an instant, and she shrunk into herself in something like horror that she had not sooner realized the delicacy and generosity of this man's nature.

long leave, that my young brother and I and another fellow went off to Scotland for a trip. We hadn't much /money, for my governor hadn't come into his property then. So Nell and I had i do It pretty much on the cheap, don't you know? Well, it did not much matter, for we were young and strong, with awfully healthy appetites, and roughing—It a bit didn't hurt us. But, of course, we spent more money than we ought, and says I to Nell one morning—at once dropping into the true Irishman's way of telling a yarn—"says I, 'We must just pack up our traps and be off, for we have but enough to get ourselves a third class passage home by way of Glasgow and Belfast.'

"So home we started from Glasgow by the steamer Lama—a fine big boat she was. But the crew on board of her—I well remember there were about a hundred and fifty harvestmen—all Irish—came on board at Greenock, most of them rather drunk, and the row they made—well, it was just something too awful! It got very late and it got very cold. So we went down and tried the cabin; first one and then the other; but we couldn't stand them, couldn't at any price; so we left the ghastly crush of fighting men and crying sea sick women in the full enjoyment of them, and went upon deck again, where the cold was the worst and the air was pure enough not to insult our lungs. Ahl well I remember it, that it wasn't all as smooth as honey up on deck. For there were two Irish-Americans, awful fellows, on board. A big one and a little one, both very drunk, and both very quarrelsome. The big one was bragging about his bowie knife, and threatening to six-shoot any one who presumed to interfere with him; and after a good deal of this kind of swagger, up stepped a strapping young Irish harvester, just drunk enough to be valiant, and challenged him to fight at onc. And a right down good drubbing he gave him—I never saw a fellow better handled in my life. "Pon my word, 'twas so neat that the little Irish-American stepped out of the ring to settle with him, and the fight went gayly with two c on benari of the United States with respect to the fisheries should be continued in operation during the fishing season.

Mr. Laurier in offering his amendment not to go into supply spoke for about an hour on the alleged unfavorable position in which Canada now stood because the fishery treaty of 1888 had not been ratified. He attacked the policy of the Government at length and said that it was the vacillating, hesitating, halting policy that had beeting adopted by Sir John Macdonald that was too blame for the present strained relations which he declared existed between the two countries. By this policy of vacillation and uncertainty the people of Canada were face to face with a non-intercourse measure on the part of the U.S. Sir Charles Tupper a year ago had warned the House of the position of the country in this respect and that year has passed away without anything being done towards putting an end to this terrible uncertainty. When Mr. Davies the other day asked the-Government whether the modus vivendi was to be continued and fishing licenses granted for the coming season they were told by the Minister of Marine that the Government had that matter under consideration. That was all the satisfaction the House or the country could get about the matter. Mr. Laurier then went into a review of the efforts and results of the reciprocal trade relations that had ever existed between the United States and Canada and he claimed that the golden era of this countries and results of the reciprocal trade relations that had ever existed between the United States and Canada and he claimed that the golden era of this countries and results of the reciprocal trade relations between the force of this country was the twelve years of the late reciprocity treaty. Our relations, he said, with the United States should be of the most friendly policy our Government and poole of Canada at that time sympathized with the South. That unfriendly one, datiny back to the inner of the great civil war in the Republic. The Government of our Gov

Father Dorney informed Parnell that he had a package of documents to deliver placed in his hands the night before he sailed from New York. Annual meeting yesterday in Shaitesudiy Hall. President John Dryden, M.L.A., presided.

The third annual report showed that in 1888 there were 2706 registrations, 2688 certificatel and 381 transfers, a slight falling off from that of 1887, which may be partly accounted for by members waiting to sell before recording, a proceeding which grants but a temporary saving to the individual member, and, by causing a fluctuation in the revenue, is injurious to the Association. Three volumes of the Herd Book have been issued up to date. It is the intention to issue volumes 4 and 5 during the present year. Those hiembers who have paid for 1889 will be entitled to volume 4, but will have to pay for volume 5 if it is also published in 1889. Volumes 2 and 3 were issued in 1889. Volumes 2 and 3 were issued in 1888. The former contains 4427 pedigrees of old animals. Vol. 4 will dispose of the older animals and vol. 5 will contain pedigrees not already published that were recorded in vol. 4 of the British American, and d. 10 of Canada Shorthorn Herd Book, The total number now entered, including those now being entered is 27,021. The people who remained were 239 English, 88 Irish, 40 Scotch, 32 German, 5 Scandinavian, 73 Ameriman and 3 from other nationalities.

The Association of Provincial Land Surveyors assembled yesterday at the Canadian Institute. Why Senator Blackburn Would Not Trade.

Not long ago Senator Blackburn went out to western Texas on a pleasure excursion, and en route took in the Indian territory. He was so pleased with its green, blue grassy appearance that he concluded to make a horseback journey through part of it. One day, when he was riding alone, taking in all the glories of the great pasture land, he was overtaken by a well mounted, well armed and well dressed redskin, who spoke a little English.

"Cow man, eh?" was his first inquiry. "Oh, no; I am just looking at this fine country. I don't live here; I live in Kentucky. "Kentuck! Ugh! You got whisky?"

The senator had a small flask of "Old Crow" in his-side pocket, and immediately produced it. In a little time the aboriginal wanted a second drink; and finally the whole flask; but after giving him two small "jig-gers" the civilities were brought to an end.

That evening, when the senator was in the public room of the hotel at the little Texas town, he told the circumstance of having met the Indian, and said: "In all my life I have never seen any human

Minutes of the W. C. T. U. Meeting.
A special meeting of the Union was call ed for Monday afternoon, Feb. 25th. After prayer service some points of interest were discussed. As the Town Council had disapproved of the appeal sent in last week on the ground of its being limited, it was thought ad visable to present another which would embrace all offenders against the liquor law. A complaint was drawn up in due form and signed by the members present. The secretary read a communication from Messrs. Dennistoun & Stevenson, who had been instructed by Mr. Thos. THE FIRE BRIGADE

To the Editor of the Review. DEAR SIR, -I notice in your report the Chairman of the Fire, Water and Light Committee respecting the fire which occurred at men in leaving the station without giving a general albrim.

Now, sir, in the first place I wish to correct the statement made by the chaliman, as I never had any conversation with him since the above mentioned first in regard to fire matters, and in the second place it is not the duty of the firemen to sound an alarm, but to proceed to the fire as quickly as possible. I was in the hall myself at the time the electric alarm was given and went with the hose wagon to the fire, instructing the hell to be rung while passing the Arcade, which was immediately done. After, are the structure of the fire I telephoned from C. P. R. station for the engine and in the meantine the Town Clerk procured a team from Mr. Show den's livery which drew the engine to the scene of the fire. As to the further statement of the chairman that the engineer found the packing had been loosened in one of the cylinders by the drive to Aduburn a few nights before, I cannot say, sir, whether the packing was loose or not, but I do know that the time which had elapsed between the fire at Auburn, which occurred or but I do know that the time which had elapsed between the fire at Auburn, which occurred or had been considered in the evening of Jan. 17th, 1889.

By JOHN STRANGE WINTER.

"And at last the big Irish-American got a good deal the worst of it, and the young harvester took the opportunity of slipping out of the ring altogether, and took up his place just behind us, where he stood quietly peering over my shoulder, laughing at the rage of his adversary, who was too drunk to know him again."

"And did he find him?" asked Miss Farle, with preathless interest.

Earle, with breathless interest.

"Not he, he was as drunk as a lord. "Not he, he was as drunk as a lord. But by and by he started on again et another harvester, bowie knife, six shooter, and all; and just as he was making for him there stepped up a little American, who just caught him a scientific crack on his head, which knocked him over as

"And that was an end of him."

"And that was an end of him."

"But you don't mean to say that he was lilled?" Nancy said.

"No. I don't suppose he was killed," re turned Beautiful Jim; "but we heard no more of him for that night. They just dragged him downstairs and shoved him under a bench, and he was no more trouble to anybody so far as any of us saw. And by that same token"—Beautiful Jim went on with keen enjoyment of the recollection—"that was one of the beautifulest cracks I ever saw—quite selentific; for it wasn't hard nor heavy—it was just neat, don't you know. And then there was the little Irish-American. He, after snarling and quarreling half the night, got kicked out of the cabin and same up on deck, where we, who couldn't stand the atmosphere downstairs, were trying in vain to get a little warmth and somfort by huddling together round the funnel. And it was cold—obl how cold it was, with a strong hall storm beating yn us, and the waves washing over the bows of the boat every minute! I don't believe any of us had ever been so miserable, forlorn, or thoroughly wretched in all our lives before. I know I have never felt quite like that since.

"Well, this little chap came up to the group, peering into every face as well as he could for the lurching of the vessel

"Steward has it,' he answered, with an uncertain kind of wink. 'Steward says I'm drunk—won't serve me. You go and get the whisky—(steward can't say you're drunk)—an' we'll drink it together.

"I didn't dare refuse him, so I got up; but in trying to follow me the little American happened to fall foul of a Scotch woman with a very large family of children under her garments, like chickens under a hen's wings. Of course she went for him tooth and nail, and soundly belabored him, and I took the opportunity of just slipping round theother side of the funnel and sitting down in the same place as I had been before. And then, when he had gathered himself up and apparently been all round the ship in pursuit of me, he came back, 'trying to peer into our faces so as to identify me again, and take me along for 'the drink.' However, happly he was too drunk, or too sleepy or something, to be sure of me, and the old Scotch lady stood my friend and warubd him sgainst getting too near to her; so, at last, he seemed to get aleepy all at once, and he just rolled himself under a hand barrow or a hand truck and went off to sleep. I believe, 'said Beautiful Jim, solemuly, 'that if we had known he was dying we were all to ill and frozen and miscrable ourselves to have moved so much as a finger to help him. Not, all the same, that he seemed in the smallest danger, for he slept serenely on, and snored away as happily as possible.

"However, when morning came and we found ourselves alongside of the quay, some of the ship's people came along and fished him out; and if you'll beliege me, this search, he was so petrified he couldn't stand—couldn't move hand or foot."

"Hot aliver" ohe asked.

"Alive? Oh, yes. And they stuck him up with his back against the funnel to get melted; and presently I heard him say to himself, in a sleepy sort of tone:

"An' bedad, I've got an ah-ful crick in me neck."

"And how did you get on after?"

"Well, let me finish my tea," Nancy entreated; and Beautiful Jim thought, though he hardly knew why, that she would much rather have stayed where she was, and, of course, have talked to him. However, she had to go, and Beautiful Jim, left to himself, finished a very substantial repast and looked round-for some one to task to. "Mrs. Trafford, wouldn't you like to have a turn round the garden?" he asked.
"I would much rather have a cup of tea," she replied, laughing.
Jim gave her his arm at once, and very quickly settled her in a comfortable chair, and the same claret cup and a plate of the same cup and a plate of the same cup and a plate of ith some claret cup and a plate of trawberries. Then he pulled another hair near to it for himself, and prepared to have a good time and enjoy it.
"What is the news, Mrs. Trafford?" he asked—everybody went to Mrs. Trafford for the latest news in Blankhampton.

for the latest news in Blankhampton.

"Well," she said, as she dipped a strawberry into the little ville of sugar upon her plate, "the corporation are going to take the terrace away from all these houses. I think that's the latest of all."

"Awful shame," murmared Beautiful Jim, to whom Blankhampton Deanery was merely a pleasant but passing oasis in life's desert, and not a permanent Mecca, as it was to the parish set.

"And the dean says if they do he'll lock up the Deanery Close and make a private garden of that! But they know well enough that he will never have the heart to shut the children out just to spite the corporation."

to shut the children out just to spite the corporation."

"Well, it would be rough on the little beggars," said he. "No, I shouldn't think the dean would be the sort to do that."

"Not he; it isn't in him, and the corporation people know it—said act upon it. Still it will be a great shame if they contrive to destroy the privacy of all these gardens, for nothing is so unpleasant as being overlooked in that way. Of course you know that Miss Antrobus is going to be married?" she said, with a quick change of tone.

Beautiful Jim edged a step nearer.
"No; indeed I did not. And who is the man?"

"No; indeed I did not. And who is the man?"

"An old admirer; a man who has been in love with her for years—for YEARS" answered Mrs. Trafford, unconsciously slipping into Mrs. Hugh Antrobus' grand and inflated style of speaking. "I told Mrs. Antrobus that I hoped she would be very happy, for happiness in marriage is such an important consideration. And she said: 'Oh! de-ar, yes. Mr. Mandarin is quite the right husband for Polly. His de-vo-tion has been marvelous, and he has loaded her—simply loaded her—with valuable presents."

How She Recognized Him.

There is one story on "Tim" Campbell which he himself relates and which has not yet seen the light of day; a story the point of which "Tim" has probably not seen himself yet, for he tells it in an innocent way, which, of course, adds much to its flavor:

Mr. Campbell has a strong appreciation of his dignity. It does not oppress—it sustains and comforts him. Not long ago he was walking through the corridors of the house wing of the Capitol when a woman spoke to him and said:

"Will you see if Mr. Glover is in the house!"

Mr. Campbell drew himself to his full did not impress him very seriously?

"You're Mr. Campbell, are you not?" said Mrs. Glover.

"I am," said the Honorable "Tim," in his most impressive way.

Sr. George, Feb. 27.—Never in the history of Western Ontario since the Desjardines Canal accidents at the population been shrown into such a state of excitement as they were to night by the intelligence that the eastbound St. Louis express due at this station at 6 p.m. had gone through the iron bridges few yards east of the station.

The town is wild with excitement and special trains have brought delegations from various points. The accident was witnessed by some of the townspeople, the alarm was given immediately and us few moments the streets were the scene of the wildest excitement. Merchants and tradement were on their way to supper, but they left the evening meal untouched and hurried toward the scene of the wreck.

Every available conveyance was hurried to the bridge, and as the dead and wounded were taken out of the debris they were conveyed, some to hotels, some to private residences and still others to the Mochanic's Institute hall and the station house.

A neble army of heroic women turned/out to minister to the wounded and dring. All the doctors were scon on hand and strended without delay to the poor mortals who groaned and oried for help.

An auxiliary train soon arrived from Hamilton and another from London. A special came from Woodstock, a sister town that has suffered much more heavily than any other, bringing a large number of people.

Doctors came from Paris, Brantiord, Hamilton, Woodstock and London. For a time the hands of all were full.

The news sprad very rapidly and the G. N. W. Telegraph office was soon besiged by anxious enquiers. Nothing whatever could be learned at the depot about the accident, the railroad officials being very reticent. E. R. Baines, general storekeeper of the Grand Trunk Railway, and W. M. A TRAVELER'S DESCRIPTION. How the Dead Were Found and the Wounded Cared For.

Toboys of Feb. 28.—Most_graphie was the description given by Mr. J. C. Gitroy, traveler for the firm of Wyld, Grasett & Darling, who with Mr. T. L. Lewis of the Crompton Corset Co. was seated in the smoking car of the ill-fated train. Said Mr. Gitroy:

"I was on one side of the smoker at about 6 o'clock and Mr. Lewis was opposite me. We were waiting for supper to be served in the dining car, the tickets having just been given out. Suddenly we felt the wheels bumping over the ties. We jumped to our feet and rushed out just as the train came to a stand-still, and we found ourselves about one hundred yards on the other side of the bridge. Raahing back we saw the bridge broken and the three-last cars in ruins. The first was next to the smoker, had been thrown off the bridge and had reached the wheels down. The draft was next to the smoker, had been thrown off the bridge and had reached the wheels down. The modern had been thrown off the bridge and had reached the winest down. The modern had been thrown of the bridge and had reached the ground, but it stood perpendicularly against one of the big stone and than deached the ground, but it stood perpendicularly against one of the big stone and time leached the ground, but it stood perpendicularly against one of the big stone abutments.

"For erad of such things," said Mr. Gilroy, "and I saw one at St. George, but I never want to see anothers! It was imply horrible All in the cars that were, safe hurried out and rushed back and down the embankment. The passenger car that had gone clean over commenced to burn, but the embankment.

The passenger car that had gone clean over commenced to burn, but the men set to work and with snow and their coats quenched the fire and saved many lives from death by burning. Many a good fur coats was spouled. I helped to carry three dead men out of the wreck of this car, and saw a couple of women badly smalled. Miss McLeod of Ingersoll was injured and so was Mrs. Jennings of Paris and her child, but the lady much more seriously than her child. Mrs. Higgins of the Rossin House, Toronto, was also hurt. I saw an elerly gray-haired lady whom I was told was Mrs. Evans, matron of a home in Toronto, whose face was horribly crushed in The St. George people were extremely kind and drove out with all sorts of rigs to remove the dead and dying to the hotels and other places; the doctors of St. George and Paris did grand work.

WHEATLEY, Feb. 27.—This morning about 12.15 fire broke out here starting at Henry Dring's stable. The next building caught was a feed stable belonging to A. Merritt, and occupied by W. Coulson, and a few minutes after the building owned by T. Underwood, and occupied by Mr. Crawford, hardware merchant, was in fiames. In the course of an hour all three buildings were burned to the ground. By hard labor H. Scott's store and the Commercial Hotel escaped the flames, though badly scorched. The horses and most of the rigs were saved. The total loss is about $15,000, pretty nearly covered by insurance.

OVERHAULED IN COMMITTEE.

The Bill to Incorporate the Assets and Debenture Co. of Canada. Debenture Co. of Canada.

OTTAWA, Feb. 27.—Mr. Edgar's bill to incorporate the Assets and Debenture Company of Canada got a bad overhauling in the Committee on Banking and Commerce this morning, and it has gone to a select committee to be further overhauled. The gentlemen who are asking incorporation under the above name are all well known Torontonians of substance: John Hoskin, Q.C. J. W. Langmuir, J. Foy, T. Statherland Stayner, William Elliott, A. D. Lee, Robert Jaffray. The stock of the company is put down at $1,000,000, divided into $50 shares. Mr. Kirkpatrick and Mr. Cockburn led the attack on several clauses of the civil.

New York's Congratulations.

ALBANY, Feb. 27.—In the State Senate to-day Mr. Laughlin offered the following, which was acconded by Mr. Coggeshall and adopted:

Whiereas.—The people of the Empire State of the American Republic, always desiring to cast their influence on the side of the oppressed and against the oppressor, are gladdened by every event which hastens the day that is to give Home Rule to Iralaudi.

Therefore, the Assembly concurring, be it resolved.—We the representatives of the people of the State of New York, in legislative session at our State Capitol assembled, extend our congratulations to Charles Stewart Parnell upon his magnificent victory and complete vindication in the investigation of the charges preferred against him by The London Times, through a series—of—articles entitled "Parnellism and Crime."

A Bird of Fassage.

London, Feb. 27.—It is believed that Pigott posted his letter to Mr. Shannon at the railroad station in Paris and then proceeded for either Spain or Switzerland. It appears that Pigott obtained on Monday from Sotheby's book mart a check for £25 in payment for a number of rare books. Pigott had the check cashed at a bank at 4 o'clock that afternoon. The last time he was seen he was walking in Fleet-street.

The position of the Liberal party in regard to the fisheries is one that exposes its lack of appreciation of what is due the country and itayacillating policy in regard to public questions. The motion calls for the continuance in force of the modus vivendi, and Mr. Laurier and his friends argued that the Government had been harsh, inhuman and criminal in the way it had enforced the regulations to protect the Canadian fisheries.

It is singular that the Liberal leaders should, while the question is pending between the two nations, be so anxious to discredit the position of the Ganadian Government. They know that every word they utter in denunciation of the Government's course, or against the claims that have been set up on phealf of Canada, will consider the content of the Canadian Connection of Councillor Hundred Council of the village of Lakefield:

deciared that Mr. Bayard proposed a settlement should be looked for in the direction of the wideat expansion of trade relations. But how was this? The National Policy was still in force. The tariff was the same. Retailation was not then proposed, but reciprocity, despite the existence of the National Policy. But when the Commissioners met Sir Charles Tupper proposed this basis of settlement and it was rejected by Mr. Bayard. Mr. baurier had to explain this, and he said it was on account of the exasperating conduct of the Canadian Government in its treatment of the American fishermen. So here we have two different reasons why retailation was proposed, the National Policy, which led to a proposal of reciprocity, and the protection of the fisheries.

As to the alleged harsh measures of the Government in protecting the iisheries, that was not always the complaint of the Liberals. At the time the protection service was most at work, before the modus vivendi went into operation, the Govern-ment was attacked for allowing the Ameri-can fishermen to do as they pleased. The protection service was sneared at, and the Government whipped over its shoulders. And now we are told that this same Government were unnecessarily harsh! Even a short time ago the Globe said the Gov. ernment should not permit transhipment in bond without an equivolent. Unsound and unstable has been the position of the

They must know that their statements will give comfort and encouragement to the United States and are calculated to make the government of the Rapublic more determined and exacting. Yet in the face of this knowledge, and disregarding the injury they may do Canada, they do not hesitate to put on record these utterances with a view to gaining a party advantage.

The contentions, however, that the Canadiar Government has claimed rights that this country is not entitled to has been answered by the administration of President himself, that Canada's claims were founded on right and justice. Mr.

Laurier assailed the Government for not permitting the United States fishermen to tranship their catches in bond. Yet this very claim was admitted and sanctioned by the lace of the President Himself, that Canada's claims were founded on right and justice. Mr.

permitting the United States fishermen to tranship their catches in bond. Yet this very ciaim was admitted and sanctioned by the United States commissioners, one of whom was Secretary Bayard, and by President Cleveland. Surely a Canadian Liberal should be as generous to his country as the ruler of a foreign nation!

Mr. Laurier was not happy in his attempts to show that the Government's policy had prevented the making of wider commercial arrangements by the two countries. He first alleged that the Conservatives had advocated the National Policy as a means of bringing about reciprocity of trade and (vide Globe's report) "with the skill of a true orator brought this fact side by side with the fact that that policy had not led to reciprocity, but to restaliation." Alas for the facts! Mr. Laurier further on declared that Mr. Bayard proposed a settlement should be looked for in the direction of the widest expansion of trade relations. But how was this? The National Policy was still in force. The tariff was the Same. Retaliation was not then proposed, but reciprocity, despite the existence of the National Policy. CANOE AND BOAT BUILDING FOR AMETRURS.—
It would seem superfluous to suggest to a resident of Peterborough is the home of canoe building, the propriety of consulting a book on building, the propriety of consulting a book on building, the propriety of consulting a book on building canoes and boats. But Peterborough is not the only place where they are built and all over the land the amateur is trying his hand as a shipwright. It is for his benefit the book called Canoe and Boat Building issued. It is by Mr. W. P. Stephens, canoeing editor of Forest and Stream. It goes in concise from the results of a vast amount of experience and patent work. To the canoeist who proposes like Noah of old, to make his craft, the directions given and advigerendered is simply invaluable. Not a detail is neglected. Not a point missed. From almost the conception of the idea until the craft is placed on the water every detail is provided for, and the amateur, even though he be but a raw workman, can hardly so satray. To old and experienced hands the book will suggest many new things and as a book of reference will be found almost invaluable. Fifty plates accompany the book giving in outline the shape and lines of many famous canoes and of all needed canoe rigging. Send for it care of Forest & Stream or order through local booksellers.

The author of "Colonial Times on Buzzard's Bay" says that the town meeting of New England resembled in some respects the parish vestry meeting of old England 250 years ago. One custom common to both was the sale of public paupers by public auction.
The town of Wareham, now famous for its oysters, voted in 1776 "to vandue the Widow Lovell." She was accordingly
"struck off to Josiah Stevens to keep one year for the Sun of nine pounds Six shillings and if She did not live the year in to have that in proportion." She lived "the year in," and continued to appear at the annual auc-tion till September, 1784, when, in the town records, it is recorded, "Voted for a winding sheet and a shift for the Widow Lovell, eight shilling."

Nothing Lost in Paris.

The Revue des Deux Mondes has some curious statements respecting the food consumption of Paris. In the large lyceums and schools, boys are generally very wasteful; they will throw away half the bread they get for lunch, tread upon it, kick it into the gutter, ink it, etc. None of these fragments are lost. The servants sell them to certain dealers who are called 'boulangers en vieux," and turn their acquisition to good account. They first pick out all the tolerable pieces, which they heat in an oven and then rasp clean. Thus prepared, these bits reappear in the market in the shape of toost for soup. Most of the "coutens," cut into lozenges and served on the tables of the rich, with spinach, have no other origh. As for the dirty crumbs and refuse left after the picking, they are pounded in a mortar and sold to butchers as "chapolure," is blackened over a fire, pounded, and them mixed up with honey aromatized with a few drops of essence of peppermint. This is sold as an opiate for the toothache.—American Analyst.

BEAUTIFUL JIM.

By JOHN STRANGE WINTER.

"Mandar": What a queer name," saidBeautiful Jim, who was deeply interested in the fortunes of the fair Polly.

"I believe," said Mrs. Trafford, looking down demurely as she toyed with her fork and plate, "that Mr. Mandarin's—er—father and—er—mother were—er—not exactly of the same race."

"Yes," said Jim, eagerly
"His mother was a German Jewess who—well, went out in some capacity to Shanghai and—and married a rich merchant of some repute in that city; and—er—the fact is, Mr. Beresford, when you have seen him—as I have—I don't suppose you will be at all surprised at his bearing such a peculiar name; it suits him very well," Mrs. Trafford ended, putting down her cup with a very quiet and innocent air.

Beautiful Jim by that time was simply nocent air. Beautiful Jim by that time was simply convulsed with laughter.

"Mrs. Trafford," he exclaimed, "you don't mean that the fair Polly is going to marry a Chinaman! Good God! It's worse than marrying a nigger!"

"The late Mrs. Mandarin," Mrs. Trafford reminded him, "was a German Jow. "Heavens! What a combination. And

"Hesvens! What a combination. And what is the result like?"

"He is certainly hot much to look at." replied Mrs. Trafford, rather dryly. "However, he seems to be very rich, and Mrs. Antrobus is amply satisfied—amply. So I suppose it is all right."

"And the fair Polly?" Beautiful Jim saked.

"She was not gushing about it," she answered; "but she smilled and thanked me very prettily when I wished her joy." Nor was Beautiful Jim the only person to whom Mrs. Trafford imparted her information that afternoon. It happened that she was particularly well up in all the details of the affair—so far as Mrs. Antrobus was able to impart them—for only that afternoon she had had occasion to go to her dreesmaker's (that person, by the by, lived a little way past the River house); and as she owed Mrs. Antrobus three calls, and a great deal of oil flattery and such like attention as was dear to the little widow's patronizing soul, she determined, for a two fold, nay, a three fold reason, to call on that stout and friendly lady. First, because her way that day led her actually past the door; secondly, because the fact that she was due at the Deanery tennis party would enable her to cut her visit very short, indeed, if she wished to do so, and find Mrs. Antrobus at home; and thirdly, because the mere fact that she must so hurry away would in itself help to keep Mrs. Antrobus 'effusive friendliness within reasonable bounds. 'A clever, far seeing little woman. Mrs. Trafford—a very clever woman.

But, as it happened, she felt no desire woman.

But, as it happened, she felt no desire whatever to cut her visit short, and so interested was she in the news at, and the general atmosphere of, the Riverhouse, that she almost forgot the Deanery party altogether. For when she inquired for Mrs. Antrobus the maid told her that she was at home, and invited her to enter, which she did. And as she followed her along the spacious hall—so much larger and handsomer than her own—she larger and handsomer than her own—she met Miss Baby, the youngest child of the house, now fast growing into a long legged, gawky girl, more ike a hen as to gait than anything else, and giving no promise whatever in any way of bloom-ing by and by into the beauty of her sisters.

'How do you do, dear?" said little Mrs. Trafford, graciously.
"Quite well, thank you," returned

Baby.

Mrs. Trafford could not help thinking how very blank-and childish the face was—for that long legged, gawky girl.

that is.

"I'm going upstairs with papa," said Baby, importantly—and, by the tye, she had quite caught her mother's inflated voice, which 68strasted oddly with her little vacant face—"he is going into the smaller grantle. He is going to get out the Flatte."

strange room. He is going to get our the PLATE!

"Ah, you will like that," murmured Mrs. Trafford, passing on, and thinking that they had evidently some entertainment on for that night; wondering, too, a little how it was that she had not been asked to take part in it—for the family at the River house were in general exceedingly anxious to secure her presence at their dinner parties—far more so than she was to shed the rays of her patronage moon them.

their dinner parties—far more so than she was to shed the rays of her patronage upon them.

But the little mystery was soon solved, for she had not found herself a chair before ane perceived from Mrs. Antrobusmanner that something of unusual importance was in the air.

That, of course, was so; for, with the Antrobuses, a visit to the strong room meant-an occasion of the greatest importance. Indeed, as a strong room the receptacle for plate and valuables at the River house was all that could be desired. It was roomy and fireproof, and was concealed from curious and prying eyes by being secreted at the back of an ordinary cupboard. It would have held, and with room to spare, an ample supply of plate for a much larger family than could be accommodated in the River house; so that the Antrobuses set of entree dishes, with the extra forks and spoons, looked rather forlorn, reposing meekly in one corner thereof.

Of course, being of the same metal as Mrs. Herrick Brentham's tea and coffee service, they might very safely have remained in the excellent and commodious butler's pantry below; but what was the good of having a strong room if you did not use it, and what would have been the good of lecking the door at all if, you did not use it, and what would have been the good of lecking the door at all if, you did not so with fitting solemnity and importance?

They sav time levels all things.—It is trae. Once upon a time Hugh A CHAPTER V.

AND OF SHANGHAI.

It must be owned that the news of Polly Antrobus' engagement not only, spread like wildfire throughout her mative city of Blankhampton, but it also created a great sensation wherever it penetrated.

She was so pretty, so gentle and dreamy, and she had been so singularly unfortunate in her previous love affairs. Men had gone for her, sy, and had gone desperately hard too—men of high degree, with everything to recommend them.

First, she had been engaged to the Honorable Ellot Cardella; but she had given him up that she might fly at higher game in the form of his elder brother. But after all, Lord Cardella had not laid himself and his title at her feet, though he had eventually bestowed them upon a far less worthy person.

conversation with a Detroit reporter; "I "Have you any idea how the practice originated?" inquired another party.

"I have heard," said the captain, "that it was during the time of flogging in the American merchant service, but I don't know how true it is. It was said that the sailor in those days would have the American flag tattooed on his back with the motto. 'He who strikes his country's flag is a coward.'"

"Mow, cap," said the comrade, "haven't you a girl tattooel near your heart?"

The captain fidgetted a little before he admitted that he had.

"It's a common thing," he said, "for young

Then if you visited a man-of-war you would find every man on board tattooed." Monkeys at a Shrine.

Here was a spot where, beneath the shadows of the "abodes of the gods," the world's two greatest sects, forgetting their differences, had clasped hands, where Hindosism and, Buddhism had bound together in one volume their Sanserit shastras and the writings of Confucius, and where the Mongolian from Pekin and the Malabari from Rameshwaran

On the other hand, the "shades of the nucestors," assuming the forms of moukeys, disported themselves and made light of these, hallowed scenes, defiling even the holy of holies, taunting the most devout with winks, smirks and flendish grimaces. Then, as if it was all a good joke, they would add injury to insuit by defing, on the sly, to smatch with their sacrilegious paws the votive offerings out of the very hands of the sin stricken penitents; would impudently retire with their booty and sit down to eat it at their lejsure, perched up beside the mostrils of the gods themselves, and wiping their whiskers on the divine heads. Sir Walter Scott has not escaped the statistical juggler, and we are given a lively idea of the former immense popularity of the great Scotchman's romances. Down to 1855 there had been printed of his "Life and Works" 7,967,809 volumes, requiring 99,593 reams of paper, which weighed 1,845 tons. The People's Edition required 227,831 reams, or 2,848 tong of paper. The number of sheets used was 106,542,488, which, laid side by side, would cover 3,933 square miles. During the period when Scott was editing the Complete Edition of his novels na less than 1,000 persons, one-hundredth part, of the population of Edinburg, were occupied in the manufacture of the books. In Brief, and to the Point.

Dyspepsia is dreadful. Disordered liver is misery. Indigestion is a foe to good nature. The human discetive apparatus is one of the most complicated and wonderful things in existence. It is easily put out of order.

Greasy food, longs food, sloppy food, had cookery, mental worry, late hours, irregular habits, and many other things which ought not to be, have made the American people a nation of dyspepties.

But Green's Angust Flower has done a wonderful work in reforming this sad business and making the American people so healthy that they can cujoy their meals and be happy.
